Hunter Safety

When Red Is Better Than Dead

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

To most Virginia Beach hunters, killing deer, quail, dove, rabbit, duck or 'coon is not their first concern when they take to the woods. Foremost in their minds is safety.

Just as the deer kill in Virginia Beach has risen from 30 in 1971 to 201 in 1982, also increasing is the number of hunters who voluntarily wear red clothing, or blaze orange to increase visibility and help protect themselves while hunting in the dark forests.

Recently, Captain James D. Kerreck, Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries, addressed the Virginia Beach Safety Council. He cited figures reflecting a decreased number of hunting accidents and deaths in states dictating that hunters wear blaze orange clothing, hats, vests or kerchiefs while hunting.

According to Kerreck, 30 states require blaze orange clothing for hunters. Massachusetts, for example, in 1962 became the first state to require blaze orange. Subsequently, there has been no fatal deer hunting accidents in that state, Kerreck said.

Beach Hunter In Favor

M. L. "Pete" Dozier, 57, grew up in Blackwater and has been a hunter all his life. He owns 2,000 acres in the rural borough, and is a farmer. He is also the president of the Blackwater Hunt Club.

According to Wallace Timmons, president of the Virginia Beach Safety Council, these are the statistics for hunting accidents and deaths in the City of Virginia Beach during the period, July 1, 1961 to June 30, 1982. Years that are not given means that no fatalities or accidents occured.

1964-'66: one accident.
1966-'67: one fatality.
1967-'68: one accident.
1973-'74: one accident.
1976-'77: one accident.
1977-'78: two accidents.
1978-'79: one accident.
1978-'80: one fatality.
1980-'81: two accidents.
TOTAL: 11 accidents, two fatalities.

"The record doesn't look that bad," Timmons said. "But I still say that a lot of these people need to know how to handle a gun."

The club has between 20 and 25 members, all of whom adhere to Dozier's rules, regulations and bylaws, which include: no drinking: everyone helps with the skinning; and shooting only deer.

Dozier does not have a rule requiring all hunters in his party to wear blaze orange. However, practically all of them do wear a piece of bright red clothing while hunting.

Why do they do it?

"For their protestion, my protection or anyone's protection," Dozier said.

Dozier said he doesn't feel he has a right to tell another man what to do, but that he would be "100% in favor" of a state law requiring all Virginia hunters to wear blaze orange or bright red clothing while hunting.

"Even if it's just a pull-on orange sleeve," Dozier added.

Dozier stresses to members of his hunting parties not to shoot anything unless they are absolutely sure what they're shooting.

"A man killed a dog and he'll never hunt with me again," Dozier said. "I can't afford it. Suppose it had been a man?"

Dozier said more and more hunters every year are taking to the woods, thus adding more fuel to the call for all hunters to wear bright clothing. But Dozier, as much as he is in favor of the move, would not call on any legislators to push for it.

"It's hard for me to tell another man what to do," he said.

Virginia Beach Game Warden Diane Thompson suggests concerned hunters contact their local legislators over the issue.

Dozier doesn't blame the laws, or lack of them, for hunting accidents. He blames carelessness.

"Carelessness is your No. 1 killer," Dozier said. "If a man had a whole red suit on, and another man is careless, he could get killed."

Virginia Beach Commissioner, Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, Glenn Croshaw said he would not want all hunters to be required under law to wear blaze orange clothing.

"I would not be in favor of it," he said, noting that the color of hunting clothes is not the key to preventing hunting accidents.

"You've got to stop carelessness," he said. "Blaze orange won't do it."

An Increasing Trend

Game Warden Thompson said that more hunting takes place in the Blackwater borough of Virgina Beach than any other section in the city.

The deer herd is increasing, she said, because of "the way the habitat has changed and the improved management of the deer herd."

The number of deer killed in Virginia Beach since 1971 is as follows: 1971, 30 deer; 1972, 40; 1973, 71; 1974, 84; 1975, 95; 1976, 109; 1977, 114;

Cartoon, Ballet, Symphony Concerts At Beach Theatre

The Beach Theater, a defunct movie house in the Virginia Beach Borough on Atlantic Avenue at 25th Street, has been transformed by two enterprising Beach businessmen into what they hope will become a showplace for cultural events.

Shep Saltzman and Teddy Cleanthes, owners of the Cafe Zoe Restaurant on Atlantic Avenue at 40th Street, in January assumed management of the theater, bringing with them a virtual treasure chest full of entertainment. They plan to schedule cartoons and puppet shows for children, ballet and symphony for culture buffs, classic cinematic offerings from the silver screen for movie junkies, and concerts of varied musical persuasions that should satisfy just about all tastes.

"This is our effort to try to do something nice for the community," offered Cleanthes.

The theater's first event under new management in January was a concert featuring the country-rock band Poco and local singer-guitarist, Lewis McGehee. "That first show was an absolutely phenomenal success," said Saltzman. "The reception we received from the community was outstanding, and Poco just loved playing here."

The band loved it, Saltzman said, because of the intimacy offered by the facility's structure. "We've got 1,200 seats here, which is small for a concert hall," he said. "Musicians are performers first, and in an old theater like this, they can really perform." Poco, a decade-old national recording act, has headlined in 20,000 seat arenas. "That's not a live performance," said Saltzman. "For the fans, that's like watching ants up on the stage."

The Robbin Thompson Band performed at the theater recently, and scheduled for upcoming concerts are Warren Zevon, Firefall, The Romantics, Golden Earring and Scandal.

But, Saltzman hastened to add, there is much more to the new Beach Theater than rock and roll. Nationally acclaimed dancers from the Tidewater ballet are slated to perform there, as is a gospel singing group. Some of the movies scheduled for the theater include "Gone With The Wind," "West Side Story," "Ben Hur," and a surf film festival. For a recent showing of "Phantom of the Opera," Saltzman and Cleanthes hired an organist to accompany the movie.

"We are going to have a little something for everybody here," said Saltzman. "We want this to be an entertainment center that the people of

Beer Bill Critics Claim

Law Won't Reduce Deaths; May 'Kill' Some Businesses

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

A bill raising the state's beer-buying age to 19, passed last week by the General Assembly, will have little or no affect on reducing the number of alcohol-related automobile accidents.

That is the consensus of several Virginia Beach experts, including a state legislator, a police department traffic analyst, the president of the Virginia Beach Council of PTA's, two nightclub owners and the chairperson of the mayor's committee on drunk driving.

The law will, however,have a big effect on some Virginia Beach businessmen. "The law is going to kill me," said Ed Ruffin, co-owner of the Virginia Beach nightclub, Peabody's, an establishment which has served a predominately 18 year-old clientele for several years.

The beer-buying bill, scheduled to take effect July 1, is a compromise measure. Gov. Charles S. Robb wanted the age raised to 21, as did many others throughout the state. The House of Delegates, in its original draft of the bill, had set the age at 21 years-old. The Senate wanted the age set at 19, however, and passed the measure unanimously. When the bill was sent back to the House, it won approval by a 67-32 vote. All Virginia Beach representatives supported the change except Del. Owen C. Pickett, a democrat.

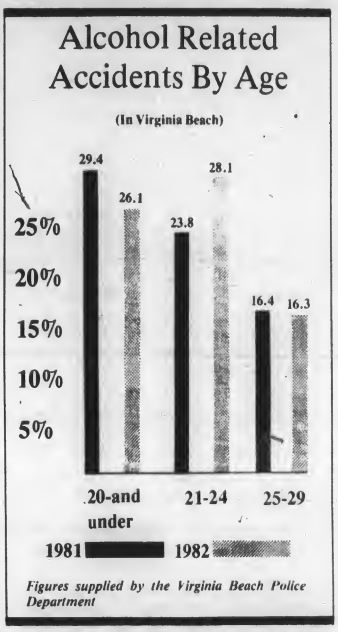
"There were two things in the legislation which were very detrimental to our area," said Pickett. "One part of the legislation made reference that anyone serving drinks would have to be 21 years old. That would put a lot of people out of work. Secondly, there was a requirement that a person would have to take a class in alcohol education prior to obtaining a driver's license. That will cause a lot of unlicensed drivers on our roads.

"Instead of changing the drinking age, what we need is a sound, well-administered education program," - Delegate Owen C. Pickett, the only Virginia Beach delegate to vote against the new drinking law

"It's not just the youngsters who are driving drunk," Pickett continued. "Instead of changing the drinking age, what we need is a sound, well-administered education program. I certainly don't condone drinking, but alcohol has been a part of western civilization for thousands of years and it is not going to go away. I'm confident that 18 year-olds are mature and responsible adults. I'm not sure we should take this away from them. If we are going to try to do something about drunk driving, going about it in this way won't help."

The new legislation replaces a year-old law, which permits 18 year-olds to buy beer in restaurants and nightclubs but limits the carry-out purchase of beer to those 19 and older. One must be 21 to purchase wine and distilled spirits. In July, 1974, 18 year-olds were given the right by the General Assembly to purchase beer both on and off premises.

Since that time, however, alcohol-related automobile accidents involving 16-20 year-old drivers in Virginia have increased 216 percent, from 1,900 in 1973 to 4,300 in 1979. In Virginia Beach last year, those in the 16-20 age bracket, roughly 10 percent of the population, accounted for 26.1 percent of all alcohol-related traffic accidents.



Figures supplied by the Virginia Beach Police Department

Still, many persons remain unconvinced that raising to 19 the age for beer-buying will lower these figures. One such skeptic is officer Paul J. Lanteigne, the Virginia Beach Police Department's chief traffic analyst. "It's questionable," he said. "What is one year going to do? Your guess is as good as mine. I suppose this change should cut down on the frequency of alcohol-related accidents involving tennagers. If nothing else, it has gotten the whole problem of drunk driving in the public eye.

"My personal opinion is that changing the age to 21 would be a big help," Lanteigne continued. "Speaking as one who works with these statistics and who goes out and works these accidents and sees all the blood, I can say that going to 21 would be an improvement. But, it hasn't been that long since I was that age, and I can

Council Considers Question

Noona Suggested To Head Beach Pops

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

The Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission has asked City Council to endorse the reestablishment of the Virginia Beach Pops Orchestra under conductor Walter Noona.

In asking Council for its support, James W. Roebuck, Commission chairman, said that the Commission budget for the year 1983-84 includes a Virginia Orchestra Group (VOG) grant request of $38,500 to support the Pops series with the stipulation that Noona conduct eight scheduled concerts. "It is not our intention to disburse those funds to the VOG if the stipulation is not met," Roebuck said.

Council also received a letter from Jerry P. Haynie, executive director of the VOG, asking for the $38,500 for the full support of the 1983-84 pops series. He stated he regretted Noona's decision but that VOG would continue the Pops series and would bring in guest conductors and guest per-

Bill Falls Short

What was really accomplished by the General Assembly in passing the new beer-buying bill, making it illegal for anyone under 19 to purchase beer?

The primary aim of the state's legislators was to somehow find a way to lower the number of alcohol-related traffic accidents. The suspicion is, however, that the new law will produce opposite effects.

Fact: The majority of alcohol-related traffic accidents is not caused by persons 16-20 years old, the people affected by the new law. The segment of the population most responsible for such accidents are those between the ages of 21 and 24.

Consider the Virginia Beach resident who turns 18 this July 1, the day the new law goes into effect. After registering at the city's voter registrar in the municipal center, the young man heads over to the post office and signs up for the Selective Service. Then, upon arriving at a nearby pub, the resident is denied a glass of beer. "You're not an adult yet, son," the barkeep explains.

When he was 17, the young man conned his 18 year-old friend into buying him beer. Now, at 18, the lad finds himself still unable to imbibe. So, what's the fellow to do? His friend is now 19, so the thirsty young man again seeks the older boy's assistance. And so it will go.

Bar owners feel their 18 year-old patrons will now cruise around in their cars, drinking beer purchased for them by older friends. Instead of getting alcohol off the roads, the General Assembly has succeeded in putting right back, they say. It would seem, then, that the only portion of society truly touched by the new law is the bar owners.

From all corners of the Commonwealth, a resounding battle cry has been heard to fight drunk driving. Even though they were not the most accident-prone drivers, the 16-20 year-olds were, nonetheless, involved in a great many alcohol-related accidents. The most repeated demand was that the age for drinking all liquors should be raised to 21.

The lawmakers had a hard time with that proposition. They agreed with the notion, "If you're old enough to fight, you're old enough to drink." How then could the government tell a young person to fight for his country, to pay his taxes, and that he was old enough to vote, but that he couldn't drink beer?

They didn't want to, but they did.

what was born instead was a compromise. Gov. Robb had fought hard for making the switch to 21 years-old. The Senate and the House could not see eye-to-eye with the governor, though, and the final bill was adopted.

It was a bland piece of legislation. Statistics can be manipulated in many ways, but the facts are the facts. Fact: young people are dying on Virginia's roads, and alcohol, in many cases, is the reason.

If the General Assembly had been truly commited to doing something about drunk driving, it should have taken drastic steps. The drnking age should have been set at 21, despite the arguments from bar owners and 18 to 20 year-olds. Stricter and tougher laws should have been passed which deal with convicted drunk drivers. If one is found guilty of drunk driving, suspend his license for 10 years and throw him in jail to boot. A more thorough and comprehensive alcohol education program should be introduced in the public schools, beginning in the primary grades. Why not even lower the speed limits again, if clearly the intent is to make highways safer?

It will only be when lawmakers become deadly serious about curbing deadly drunk driving that Virginia's highways become truly free of this menance. Until then, three facts will continue to haunt us: People will drink. People will drive. People will die.—M.M.G.

A Twig Of Sense

Anyone with a twig of common sense would not think of hunting in the woods without wearing brightly colored clothing. Except, that is, for hunters who are after game that aren't color blind.

Virginia Beach has been fortunate. Since 1961 there have been only 11 hunting related accidents and two fatalities in the city. But the encouraging record does not diminish the potential for more accidents and deaths in the future.

Hunters will say that guns do not cause the accidents; it's the careless handlers of them that are responsible. Too often a hunter may carry a loaded gun over his back, or step into a boat without checking the gun's chambers. Sometimes these absent-minded activities can result in tragedy.

The Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries has held numerous gun safety programs in the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Center, as well as the London Bridge Gun Shop. Hundreds of Virginia Beach hunting enthusiasts have attended them.

It stands to reason that Virginia Beach's low hunting accident and fatality rate may correlate with the frequency of hunter safety programs. In this respect, hunter safety programming should continue so that more lives may be saved.

At question now, however, is whether hunters should be requried by the state to wear blaze orange clothing while hunting, and whether the public school system should include hunter safety in its curriculum.

All hunters should wear blaze orange, or bright red clothing when hunting, whether they're on private or public hunting grounds.

The school system, however, does not need to include hunter safety in its academic curriculum. Local groups, in cooperation with local schools and businesses, are filling the need and at no expense to the taxpayer.—G.D.G.

New Beer Drinking Law Gets Mixed Reactions

appreciate that 18 year-olds who can be drafted and who can vote want to be able to drink a cold beer."

"It's questionable. What is one year going to do? Your guess is as good as mine." - Paul J. Lanteigne, Virginia Beach Police Department Chief Traffic Analyst

"I don't know if the impact will be significant," said Dolores Delaney, president of the Virginia Beach Council of PTA's. "As far as affecting alcohol in the schools, the new law won't do anything. Perhaps it will deter some, but in reality, you just can't legislate morality. Those who want to drink are going to be able to, no matter what the law is. We've made the speed limit 55, but it hasn't kept people from going over 55, has it?

"Perhaps it will deter some, but in reality, you just can't legislate morality. Those who want to drink are going to be able to, no matter what the law is." - Virginia Beach Council of PTA's President Dolores Delaney

"By and large, the best part of the bill is the inclusion of a mandatory alcohol education class in the high schools," Delaney continued. "Substance abuse is an epidemic problem in Virginia Beach and across the country. Kids are subject to immense pressure. We would be well served to begin educating them as early as possible, maybe even in kindergarten.

"The bottom line," Delaney concluded, "is that people are dying because of alcohol and drug related accidents." An answer, she said, is raising the drinking age to 21 years-old.

Lillian DeVinney, chairperson of Virginia Beach Mayor Louis R. Jones' task force on drunk driving and vice president for the Virginia Beach Chapter of Many Against Drunk Driving, questioned the new law.

"I'm not too convinced changing the drinking age to 19 is going to make significant reductions in highway fatalities," Lillian DeVinney, chairperson of Mayor's Task Force on Drunk Driving

"I'm not too convinced changing the drinking age to 19 is going to make significant reductions in highway fatalities," she said. "MADD had hoped that the legislature would change the age to 21 off-premises across the boards. With this law, we are not going to see a significant change in the rate of highway fatalities."

DiVinney admitted that this legislation discriminates against 18 year-olds. "If the government has said the age of majority is 18, to say thou shalt not drink beer is very unfair," she said. "All drunk driving cannot be attributed to one age group. If we raised the age of majority to 21 across the boards it would be fine with me. As it stands, though, the law is very ambiguous.

"It is going to take 10 years of constant pressure on the state government before we make any real progress in reducing drunk driving deaths," DeVinney continued. "We have to raise the public awareness and make people believe that drinking and driving is totally unacceptable. We have to ask for stronger laws against those who drink and drive. We have to see support from the judges, which we are not seeing now. People are not going to stop drinking and driving until they honestly believe they will get their driver's licenses suspended.

"I lost my daughter to a drunk driver; he's still drinking and he's still driving," DeVinney said. "And I know that even she wouldn't want this new law as it is."

Pat Ricks, owner of Blue Pete's seafood restaurant on North Muddy Creek Road and president of the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association, called the legislation, "absurd."

"It used to that an 18 year-old guy could drink in a casual atmosphere. Now, he's going to be forced to get his older buddy to buy beer for him, and he'll have to drive around in his car and drink. Isn't that exactly what the legislature was trying to avoid?" - Pat Ricks, president of the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association

"It used to be that an 18 year-old guy could drink in a casual atmosphere," said Ricks. "Now, he's going to be forced to get his older buddy to buy beer for him, and he'll have to drive around in his car and drink. Isn't that exactly what the legislature was trying to avoid?

"Also, a young guy doesn't have a lot of money, right?" Ricks asked. "Suppose he only has $3. In a bar, that buys maybe two beers. But, in a store, $3 buys a whole six pack. This law is going to do more to contribute to drunk driving then it is to curb it."

Ruffin, who along with his partner, Nabil Kassir, owns Peabody's and Rogue's in the resort section of Virginia Beach, predicts the chane in law will have negative effects.

"Instead of keeping drunks off the road, this new law is going to put more of them on the road," he said. "Before the law was changed, 18 year-olds were in a controlled environment. Now, they're just going to get their 19 year-old friends to buy their beer and they'll be out on the streets cruising. The law pushes them back out into their cars."

"When the new law goes into effect, we're going to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars. Besides my personal losses, the city's going to lose some tourists, and there will be a loss of jobs and tax revenues." - Ed Ruffin, Virginia Beach night-club owner

At Peabody's, more than 50 percent of his clientele is 18-years old, Ruffin said. "When the new law goes into effect, we're going to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said. "Besides my personal losses, the city's going to lose some tourists, and there will be a loss of jobs and tax revenues.

"I believe the lawmakers were sincere in their attempt to do something about the carnage on our highways," said Ruffin. "But I don't think you can target one segment of the population for this problem. The legislature had to pass this bill to make them look like they were taking a big stand."

Ruffin concluded: "I don't think this law will make one bit of difference in alcohol-related traffic accidents."

Those Who Supported Bill

Del. Julie Smith, a democrat, said her vote supporting the bill, "was not one that I'm too proud of." Said Smith: "I think we moved too fast on this legislation. Maybe we should have waited until next year before making a change."

"I wasn't too comfortable with the bill, but I could see that the pros outweighed the cons . . . I suspect this question is going to come up again next year and if it does, a lot of people who supported it will now have second thoughts. I may be one of them" - Delegate Julie Smith

Smith agreed with the original bill submitted by the House, which moved the age to 21 years-old. "I wasn't too comfortable with it, but I could see where the pro's outweighed the con's. The thing that really convinced me to go with it was the statistics which showed the high rate of teen deaths involving alcohol. When the bill came back at 19, I didn't know what to do.

"In the legislative process, you learn that if you are going to survive in Richmond, you better damn well stick by your guns," Smith continued. "I suspect this question is going to come up again next year and if it does, a lot of the people who supported it will now have second thoughts. I may be one of them."

Del. W.R. "Buster O'Brien, a republican, said he supported the bill to, "get drunk drivers off the road and to make the roads safer.

"This was a good compromise," O'Brien continued. "We can objectively defend it. Personally, I thought it was a politically attractive thing to support and that is why it succeeded."

"This was a good compromise. We can objectively defend it. I thought it was a politically attractive thing to support and that is why it succeeded," - Delegate W. R. "Buster" O'Brien

Will the law work? "I think so," said O'Brien. "It will succeed in two ways. Number one, there is the mandatory alcohol education class, and that is bound to do some good. Second, if you are caught drinking under age now, your driver's license can be taken away for up to 30 days. That's bound to deter some people."

Del. J.W. "Billy" O'Brien, a democrat, said he is "quite willing to live with the new law," although he would rather have seen the purchase age for off-premises consumption of beer raised to 21 years-old. O'Brien has long advocated a change to 19 for beer-buying because, he said, "18 year-olds in high school have no business drinking beer. It is very disruptive to the educational process.

"I've worked with kids for over 30 years. Kids are going to drink no matter what. If we really wanted to deter drinking, maybe we should have raised the age to 26." - Delegate J. W. "Billy" O'Brien

"I've worked with kids for 30 years," said the former football coach at Great Bridge High School in Chesapeake. "Kids are going to drink no matter what. If we really wanted to deter drinking, maybe we should have raised the age to 26."

O'Brien said he does not expect to see a significant decline in alcohol-related car accidents because of the legislation. "The real culprit there," he said, "is the conveniences stores. We're going to have to do something about them."

"I can accept this law and hope that it works," said Del. Glenn B. McClanan, a democrat. "I hope that if nothing else, it sends a signal to all Virginians that the state is serious when it says it doesn't approve of drinking and driving."

"I can accept this new law and hope that it works. I hope that if nothing else, it sends a signal to all Virginians that the state is serious when it says it doesn't approve of drinking and driving." - Delegate Glenn B. McClanan

McClanan said he was reluctant to support the bill at first because he has "a hard time supporting anything that alters substantially the rights of individuals." Upon being exposed to statistics presented by MADD and others, however, McClanan decided to support the change. "I fully recognize the value of each and every life, and this was a way of maybe saving some lives."

McClanan was uncertain of the impact the law will have on reducing alcohol-related accidents. "I hope it has a big effect, but being candid, I'm just not sure it will ," he said. "It's all up to the attitudes of the individuals, and I think the schools and the media are going to be more meaningful in making changes that the new law will be."

Sen. A. Joseph Canada, Jr., who also supported the bill, could not be reached.

Art Program

Schools In National Ed. Study

The Virgnia Beach Public Schools art program has been chosen to participate in a national art education study prepared by the J. Paul Getty Trust's Center for Education in the Arts. A total of seven art education programs of public schools in the United States were selected as exemplary and scheduled for visits by a research team from the Getty Trust and the Rand Corporation.

A national search was made late last year for art programs that provide comprehensive instruction in the regular curriculum, including the elements of art history, criticism, and studio production. The Virginia Beach program was recommended by the Virginia Department of Education.

In January, Dr. Brent Wilson, author, researcher, and professor at Penn State University, visited Virginia Beach schools to determine if the program merited inclusion in the project. Shortly thereafter, in his letter to Stephena Runyan, art coordinator of Virginia Beach Public Schools, Wilson said he had written his fellow researchers that "a study of your program is a must."

He added, "The work you are doing could provide an important exemplary model useful to the entire field of art education."

Wilson and a Rand Corporation research analyst will begin their study of the art program in Virginia Beach schools the week of February 28-March 4. While Wilson studies the art activities in detail and highlights areas of particular interest, a Rand researcher will explore issues associated with initiating, implementing, and sustaining the art program within the school system.

The Getty Center of Education in the Arts will publish the results of its research project in 1984 and make them available to educators, school personnel, and the general public.

Runyan said, "They are looking at programs that incorporate concepts of teaching art as well as the use of products. Our curriculum qualifies."

She also said that the case study will include examining why the Virginia Beach program is such a positive one. "They'll be looking for the things that make it work, and we'll be glad to show them."

Bill Falls Short

What was really accomplished by the General Assembly in passing the new beer-buying bill, making it illegal for anyone under 19 to purchase beer?

The primary aim of the state's legislators was to somehow find a way to lower the number of alcohol-related traffic accidents. The suspicion is, however, that the new law will produce opposite effects.

Fact: The majority of alcohol-related traffic accidents is not caused by persons 16-20 years old, the people affected by the new law. The segment of the population most responsible for such accidents are those between the ages of 21 and 24.

Consider the Virginia Beach resident who turns 18 this July 1, the day the new law goes into effect. After registering at the city's voter registrar in the municipal center, the young man heads over to the post office and signs up for the Selective Service. Then, upon arriving at a nearby pub, the resident is denied a glass of beer. "You're not an adult yet, son," the barkeep explains.

When he was 17, the young man conned his 18 year-old friend into buying him beer. Now, at 18, the lad finds himself still unable to imbibe. So, what's the fellow to do? His friend is now 19, so the thirsty young man again seeks the older boy's assistance. And so it will go.

Bar owners feel their 18 year-old patrons will now cruise around in their cars, drinking beer purchased for them by older friends. Instead of getting alcohol off the roads, the General Assembly has succeeded in putting right back, they say. It would seem, then, that the only portion of society truly touched by the new law is the bar owners.

From all corners of the Commonwealth, a resounding battle cry has been heard to fight drunk driving. Even though they were not the most accident-prone drivers, the 16-20 year-olds were, nonetheless, involved in a great many alcohol-related accidents. The most repeated demand was that the age for drinking all liquors should be raised to 21.

The lawmakers had a hard time with that proposition. They agreed with the notion, "If you're old enough to fight, you're old enough to drink." How then could the government tell a young person to fight for his country, to pay his taxes, and that he was old enough to vote, but that he couldn't drink beer?

They didn't want to, but they did.

what was born instead was a compromise. Gov. Robb had fought hard for making the switch to 21 years-old. The Senate and the House could not see eye-to-eye with the governor, though, and the final bill was adopted.

It was a bland piece of legislation. Statistics can be manipulated in many ways, but the facts are the facts. Fact: young people are dying on Virginia's roads, and alcohol, in many cases, is the reason.

If the General Assembly had been truly commited to doing something about drunk driving, it should have taken drastic steps. The drnking age should have been set at 21, despite the arguments from bar owners and 18 to 20 year-olds. Stricter and tougher laws should have been passed which deal with convicted drunk drivers. If one is found guilty of drunk driving, suspend his license for 10 years and throw him in jail to boot. A more thorough and comprehensive alcohol education program should be introduced in the public schools, beginning in the primary grades. Why not even lower the speed limits again, if clearly the intent is to make highways safer?

It will only be when lawmakers become deadly serious about curbing deadly drunk driving that Virginia's highways become truly free of this menance. Until then, three facts will continue to haunt us: People will drink. People will drive. People will die.—M.M.G.

A Twig Of Sense

Anyone with a twig of common sense would not think of hunting in the woods without wearing brightly colored clothing. Except, that is, for hunters who are after game that aren't color blind.

Virginia Beach has been fortunate. Since 1961 there have been only 11 hunting related accidents and two fatalities in the city. But the encouraging record does not diminish the potential for more accidents and deaths in the future.

Hunters will say that guns do not cause the accidents; it's the careless handlers of them that are responsible. Too often a hunter may carry a loaded gun over his back, or step into a boat without checking the gun's chambers. Sometimes these absent-minded activities can result in tragedy.

The Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries has held numerous gun safety programs in the Virginia Beach Vocational-Technical Center, as well as the London Bridge Gun Shop. Hundreds of Virginia Beach hunting enthusiasts have attended them.

It stands to reason that Virginia Beach's low hunting accident and fatality rate may correlate with the frequency of hunter safety programs. In this respect, hunter safety programming should continue so that more lives may be saved.

At question now, however, is whether hunters should be requried by the state to wear blaze orange clothing while hunting, and whether the public school system should include hunter safety in its curriculum.

All hunters should wear blaze orange, or bright red clothing when hunting, whether they're on private or public hunting grounds.

The school system, however, does not need to include hunter safety in its academic curriculum. Local groups, in cooperation with local schools and businesses, are filling the need and at no expense to the taxpayer.—G.D.G.

appreciate that 18 year-olds who can be drafted and who can vote want to be able to drink a cold beer."

"It's questionable. What is one year going to do? Your guess is as good as mine." - Paul J. Lanteigne, Virginia Beach Police Department Chief Traffic Analyst

"I don't know if the impact will be significant," said Dolores Delaney, president of the Virginia Beach Council of PTA's. "As far as affecting alcohol in the schools, the new law won't do anything. Perhaps it will deter some, but in reality, you just can't legislate morality. Those who want to drink are going to be able to, no matter what the law is. We've made the speed limit 55, but it hasn't kept people from going over 55, has it?

"Perhaps it will deter some, but in reality, you just can't legislate morality. Those who want to drink are going to be able to, no matter what the law is." - Virginia Beach Council of PTA's President Dolores Delaney

"By and large, the best part of the bill is the inclusion of a mandatory alcohol education class in the high schools," Delaney continued. "Substance abuse is an epidemic problem in Virginia Beach and across the country. Kids are subject to immense pressure. We would be well served to begin educating them as early as possible, maybe even in kindergarten.

"The bottom line," Delaney concluded, "is that people are dying because of alcohol and drug related accidents." An answer, she said, is raising the drinking age to 21 years-old.

Lillian DeVinney, chairperson of Virginia Beach Mayor Louis R. Jones' task force on drunk driving and vice president for the Virginia Beach Chapter of Many Against Drunk Driving, questioned the new law.

"I'm not too convinced changing the drinking age to 19 is going to make significant reductions in highway fatalities," Lillian DeVinney, chairperson of Mayor's Task Force on Drunk Driving

"I'm not too convinced changing the drinking age to 19 is going to make significant reductions in highway fatalities," she said. "MADD had hoped that the legislature would change the age to 21 off-premises across the boards. With this law, we are not going to see a significant change in the rate of highway fatalities."

DiVinney admitted that this legislation discriminates against 18 year-olds. "If the government has said the age of majority is 18, to say thou shalt not drink beer is very unfair," she said. "All drunk driving cannot be attributed to one age group. If we raised the age of majority to 21 across the boards it would be fine with me. As it stands, though, the law is very ambiguous.

"It is going to take 10 years of constant pressure on the state government before we make any real progress in reducing drunk driving deaths," DeVinney continued. "We have to raise the public awareness and make people believe that drinking and driving is totally unacceptable. We have to ask for stronger laws against those who drink and drive. We have to see support from the judges, which we are not seeing now. People are not going to stop drinking and driving until they honestly believe they will get their driver's licenses suspended.

"I lost my daughter to a drunk driver; he's still drinking and he's still driving," DeVinney said. "And I know that even she wouldn't want this new law as it is."

Pat Ricks, owner of Blue Pete's seafood restaurant on North Muddy Creek Road and president of the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association, called the legislation, "absurd."

"It used to that an 18 year-old guy could drink in a casual atmosphere. Now, he's going to be forced to get his older buddy to buy beer for him, and he'll have to drive around in his car and drink. Isn't that exactly what the legislature was trying to avoid?" - Pat Ricks, president of the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association

"It used to be that an 18 year-old guy could drink in a casual atmosphere," said Ricks. "Now, he's going to be forced to get his older buddy to buy beer for him, and he'll have to drive around in his car and drink. Isn't that exactly what the legislature was trying to avoid?

"Also, a young guy doesn't have a lot of money, right?" Ricks asked. "Suppose he only has $3. In a bar, that buys maybe two beers. But, in a store, $3 buys a whole six pack. This law is going to do more to contribute to drunk driving then it is to curb it."

Ruffin, who along with his partner, Nabil Kassir, owns Peabody's and Rogue's in the resort section of Virginia Beach, predicts the chane in law will have negative effects.

"Instead of keeping drunks off the road, this new law is going to put more of them on the road," he said. "Before the law was changed, 18 year-olds were in a controlled environment. Now, they're just going to get their 19 year-old friends to buy their beer and they'll be out on the streets cruising. The law pushes them back out into their cars."

"When the new law goes into effect, we're going to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars. Besides my personal losses, the city's going to lose some tourists, and there will be a loss of jobs and tax revenues." - Ed Ruffin, Virginia Beach night-club owner

At Peabody's, more than 50 percent of his clientele is 18 years old, Ruffin said. "When the new law goes into effect, we're going to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said. "Besides my personal losses, the city's going to lose some tourists, and there will be a loss of jobs and tax revenues.

"I believe the lawmakers were sincere in their attempt to do something about the carnage on our highways," said Ruffin. "But I don't think you can target one segment of the population for this problem. The legislature had to pass this bill to make them look like they were taking a big stand."

Ruffin concluded: "I don't think this law will make one bit of difference in alcohol-related traffic accidents."

Those Who Supported Bill

Del. Julie Smith, a democrat, said her vote supporting the bill, "was not one that I'm too proud of." Said Smith: "I think we moved too fast on this legislation. Maybe we should have waited until next year before making a change."

"I wasn't too comfortable with the bill, but I could see that the pros outweighed the cons . . . I suspect this question is going to come up again next year and if it does, a lot of people who supported it will now have second thoughts. I may be one of them" - Delegate Julie Smith

Smith agreed with the original bill submitted by the House, which moved the age to 21 years-old. "I wasn't too comfortable with it, but I could see where the pro's outweighed the con's. The thing that really convinced me to go with it was the statistics which showed the high rate of teen deaths involving alcohol. When the bill came back at 19, I didn't know what to do.

"In the legislative process, you learn that if you are going to survive in Richmond, you better damn well stick by your guns," Smith continued. "I suspect this question is going to come up again next year and if it does, a lot of the people who supported it will now have second thoughts. I may be one of them."

Del. W.R. "Buster O'Brien, a republican, said he supported the bill to, "get drunk drivers off the road and to make the roads safer.

"This was a good compromise," O'Brien continued. "We can objectively defend it. Personally, I thought it was a politically attractive thing to support and that is why it succeeded."

"This was a good compromise. We can objectively defend it. I thought it was a politically attractive thing to support and that is why it succeeded," - Delegate W. R. "Buster" O'Brien

Will the law work? "I think so," said O'Brien. "It will succeed in two ways. Number one, there is the mandatory alcohol education class, and that is bound to do some good. Second, if you are caught drinking under age now, your driver's license can be taken away for up to 30 days. That's bound to deter some people."

Del. J.W. "Billy" O'Brien, a democrat, said he is "quite willing to live with the new law," although he would rather have seen the purchase age for off-premises consumption of beer raised to 21 years-old. O'Brien has long advocated a change to 19 for beer-buying because, he said, "18 year-olds in high school have no business drinking beer. It is very disruptive to the educational process.

"I've worked with kids for over 30 years. Kids are going to drink no matter what. If we really wanted to deter drinking, maybe we should have raised the age to 26." - Delegate J. W. "Billy" O'Brien

"I've worked with kids for 30 years," said the former football coach at Great Bridge High School in Chesapeake. "Kids are going to drink no matter what. If we really wanted to deter drinking, maybe we should have raised the age to 26."

O'Brien said he does not expect to see a significant decline in alcohol-related car accidents because of the legislation. "The real culprit there," he said, "is the conveniences stores. We're going to have to do something about them."

"I can accept this law and hope that it works," said Del. Glenn B. McClanan, a democrat. "I hope that if nothing else, it sends a signal to all Virginians that the state is serious when it says it doesn't approve of drinking and driving."

"I can accept this new law and hope that it works. I hope that if nothing else, it sends a signal to all Virginians that the state is serious when it says it doesn't approve of drinking and driving." - Delegate Glenn B. McClanan

McClanan said he was reluctant to support the bill at first because he has "a hard time supporting anything that alters substantially the rights of individuals." Upon being exposed to statistics presented by MADD and others, however, McClanan decided to support the change. "I fully recognize the value of each and every life, and this was a way of maybe saving some lives."

McClanan was uncertain of the impact the law will have on reducing alcohol-related accidents. "I hope it has a big effect, but being candid, I'm just not sure it will ," he said. "It's all up to the attitudes of the individuals, and I think the schools and the media are going to be more meaningful in making changes that the new law will be."

Sen. A. Joseph Canada, Jr., who also supported the bill, could not be reached.

General Assembly Passes Resolution

Safety Officials Fishing For Hunter Safety In Public Schools

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

There may be up to 10,000 hunters in Virginia Beach, who, between July 1, 1981 and June 30, 1982, purchased over 13,000 hunting licenses at a total cost of $96,302. These figures are reported by Wallace Timmons, president, Virginia Beach Safety Council.

Further, Timmons reports, since 1961 there have been only two hunting fatalities and 11 hunting related accidents in Virginia Beach.

But even though Virginia Beach hunting deaths and accidents are not occuring at an alarming rate, efforts have been underway, locally and statewide, to promote hunting safety education in public school systems.

This past session, the Virginia General Assembly passed House Joint Resolution 23, requesting the State Department of Education, with the aid of the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, to encourage hunter education in public schools. The measure was introduced by Roanoke Delegate Victor Thomas, (D), and passed by a voice bote in both the Senate and the House.

The approved resolution is not law, but does call for increased statewide emphasis in the area of hunter safety education.

In Virginia Beach, where hunting is not as popular as in some more western regions of the state, the question of hunter safety education is greeted with mixed reactions.

"I don't think that it should be compulsory," said Virginia Beach attorney Glenn Croshaw, who is also a commissioner, 2nd Congressional District, Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. "As a voluntary measure it's extraordinary."

Ideally, Croshaw envisions hunter safety education included, in some way, in the Virginia Beach public school system, in order to present the issue to "a broader number of people," he said. After-hours seminars don't tend to attrract a great number of people, he said, and he would "feel very good" about seeing hunter safety taught in six-week increments in the schools during study hall. Other alternatives include conducting a program at local churches, recreation centers, or other public facilities.

"In the arena of education throughout the country, we have attempted to do too much . . . we should stick to the things we do best". - Walter Carroll

Since Oct., 1980, according to Virginia Beach Game Warden Diane Thompson, the Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries has reached over 454 Virginia Beach hunters with its hunter safety programs.

The costs of the program, when conducted by the game commission, is paid by game commission revenues generated from hunting, boating, and fishing license fees. The commission also pays the cost of materials and instructors.

Not A New Idea

According to Virginia Beach public school officials, the question of including a hunter safety program or classes in the public schools arose four or five years ago, but no action was taken and the issue has since rested.

Now, however, a renewed interest in the question has been fostered as the state level, and locally the Virginia Beach Safety Council is trying to open discussions with public school officials over including hunter safety education on school grounds.

"We want to explore with them some possibilities of what we could do in the area of hunter safety," said Timmons. Timmons would like to see hunter safety taught either on a voluntary basis for students, or in health and physical education classes. Timmons also said if he couldn't formally introduce hunter safety education on school grounds, he would like to have the option of disseminating flyers on school grounds announcing any upcoming hunter safety programs.

Walter Carroll, assistant superintendent for instructional services, Virginia Beach Public Schools, said no one has contacted him about the hunter safety question.

Carroll said that if the state ever passed legislation madating hunter safety education in public schools, that of course, "we will follow the law."

He added, however, that absent any state mandated legislation, "I have no plans right now for such a thing or to make a recommendation to the school board."

He said it may be possible to circulate informational flyers on upcoming hunter safety classes throughout the public school system.

Carroll notes that if hunter safety education is included in the schools, some other academic discipline would most likely have to be dropped.

"It's a matter of priorities," he said.

"In the arena of education throughout this country," Carroll continued, "we have attempted to do too much...We should stick to the things we do best."

Virginia Beach hunters Pete and Lettie Dozier agree that hunter education is important to hunter safety

During the 1982-'83 deer hunting season, hunters bagged 134 bucks and 64 does for a total of 198 deer killed.

Deer, rabbit and quail hunting seasons have ended in Virginia Beach. But in her three years as a game warden in Virginia Beach, Thompson has seen many hunting activities and knows many hunters; and for the hunters' safety, she favors the use of blaze orange.

"If I were a deer hunter I'd wear it so I'd be more highly visible by the hunters in the area, and not apt to be mistaken for game," she said.

"But I think it's something that should be left up to the legislators," she continued.

Beach Pops Reformation?

formers.

After hearing Roebuck's request at the end of the Monday evening Council session, Council decided to wait at least a week until after the Thursday meeting of the VOG and, possibly, final disposition by the VOG of the Noona matter.

Monday, Roebuck said that the Virginia Beach cultural organization was in "dire danger." He said the "firing of Maestro Walter Noona is the opening salvo in the final battle of the long-running war to destroy the eminently successful Virginia Pops."

A week ago Monday, the executive committee of the VOG voted with one dissenting vote to restructure the organization of the VOG. The restructuring would reduce Noona in rank by removing his title of music director which he shares with the Philharmonic conductor Richard Williams. When in 1979 a proposal was made to merge the Norfolk Philharmonic Symphony with the Peninsula Symphony and the Virginia Beach Pops into the VOG, Noona refused an offer to become the assistant conductor of the Norfolk Philharmonic, Roebuck said. The obstensible purpose, he said, was to derive financial benefits of large-budget organizations with three years or more of professional performance.

Roebuck said that Noona told him that the troubles began the first day after the merger. The Peninsula symphony was renamed the Virginia Classical Orchestra and "forthwith disappeared to never be seen again."

The Pops, however, did not share the same fate, but became even more successful than ever before, Roebuck said.

While the Philharmonic has been "preparing the hall with two for ones (two tickets for the price of one) to all subscribers and still performing to sparse audiences," Roebuck said, Noona and the Pops have been packing them in at the Pavilion. "Sell-out crowds have mandated the expansion of the seating capacity by the introduction of auditorium seating in the rear of the hall."

The reduction of Noona in rank means that he would have no authority over the selection or dismissal of his musicians. Also his performances would be reduced from eight to five, and his salary cut by $10,000 or more. "It was a blatant insult to Maestro Walter Noona," Roebuck said. "It was a calculated insult to your Arts and Humanities Commission. It was an arrogant and callous disregard for the wishes of the citizens of our city."

Roebuck was allowed to speak at the request of Councilman H. Jack Jennings. Jr.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech said that the matter has not yet been resolved between Noona and the VOG and the Council should be careful about "involving itself in realms beyond our responsibility."

Roebuck said that the Commission made its decision to back Noona in the reestablishment of the Virginia Beach Pops at a meeting on Saturday afternoon when five of the 11 members were present. He said Noona then told the Commission of his plans to develop the Pops as before, but as a professional group.

Creech said that the VOG has not accepted Noona's resignation and that he had not submitted a written resignation. Noona did say after the VOG announcement that he would quit.

Creech said that the VOG was to meet Thursday to discuss the matter.

Roebuck said that his commission met at noon on Wednesday following the VOG upheaval. Members were told, he said, that the VOG had no intentions of acceding to any of Noona's demands.

Creech suggested that no precipitous action be taken until the matter is resolved by the VOG.

She said that it was not a matter of supporting or not supporting Noona. "I went to high school with Mr. Noona."

Jennings said that it would be highly beneficial if Council would support Noona. He said there's "no question he's on the way out. He is being fired!"

Creech said that she considered it untoward to get into the middle of a private matter until after it is settled.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. agreed saying that Council gets into trouble "everytime we do something off the wall." He added that he went to grammar school with Noona.

Creech said that Council has heard only one side.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf then introduced the letter from Haynie. She pointed out that the Commission request was more out of order than the letter from Haynie. She suggested handling both requests at the same time.

Once Council knows what the final resulution is, Creech said, Council will take appropriate action.

Vice Mayor Barbara Henley, presiding in the absence of Mayor Louis R. Jones, said that Mr.

Oceanfront Franchise Bids Opened

Bids on oceanfront franchises ranging from $5,525 to $100,000 led the attorney for one of the bidders to question the validity of the bid documents.

Robert Cromwell, attorney for North Beach Services, the bidder who offered the least in franchise fees, said that the obvious great disparity in the bids has got to indicate some kind of failure in the documents.

Three companies submitted bids on one or both of the franchises for the north and south end of the beach beach, roughly divided into 20 blocks each. Bids were opened at the 7 p.m. meeting of Council Monday following a brief discussion in the informal session. No bids were submitted for the third franchise area, Little Island Beach at Sandbridge, which apparently was considered not economically lucrative enough for the bidders. The area is now patrolled by Parks and Recreation Bureau personnel.

Two of the bidders currently operate the equipment rental/lifeguard services under an informal agreement with the city. This is the first time the operations have been up for bid.

Ocean Rescue, Inc., which has been operating at the south end, submitted bids for both franchises. Its combined $175,000 bid for the five-year franchise would be the highest if he were granted both franchises. However, Oceana Rescue submitted an alternate bid of $25,000 for the south end if the company were granted only the south-end franchise. Its bids for the north end area was $100,000, the highest of the three. Oceana Rescue is headed by Graham (Dusty) Hinnant, and his son Kent.

North Beach Service, headed by W.H. Kitchin Jr., who has operated the service for 50 years, submitted a bid of $5,525.64 for the five years with fees ranging from $1,000 for the first year to $1,215.51 for the fifth year. Kitchin, the father of Councilman W.H. Kitchin III, bid only for the north end franchise.

The newcomer was Virginia Beach Patrol Inc., headed by E. Christopher Worrell, Beach businessman, who is president. Other officers are former High Constable R.R. (Buddy) McChesney, treasurer, and Edward C, (Ned) Kuehn, a former lifeguard, vice president. Edward S. Garcia serves on the company's board of directors.

Beach Patrol submitted $75,000 bid on each franchise.

Attorney Grover Wright, representing Beach Patrol, said that the city staff did a good jobin preparing the specifications and maintained that Beach Patrol will have more stringent controls on its operation than the city requires. He said the Patrol also will make innovations such as furnishing a marine unit offshore, and will own a surf rescue tool.

He said Kuehn, who will manage the franchise, has a B.S. degree in recreation management from VPI-SU, ten years experience as a beach lifeguard, and curing the past five years worked for North Beach Service.

He said the Patrol will provide more supervisory personnel than required in the specifications. He added that the public would be better served if the franchises were awarded to the same firm.

Cromwell said that Kitchin has 50 years experience. He said that people have a false notion that there's a pot of gold on that beach. He asked that Council pay more attention to safety than the possible income from the franchises. He said Council should be sure that the people bidding are capable of performing and that the city will not have to step in later. He said the more realistic bidding of his client was based on years of experience.

Councilman John A. Baum moved that the city manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck take the bids under advisement and make recommendattions as soon as possible.

Council approved the motion by a vote of 8-0 with Kitchin abstaining. Mayor Louis R. Jones and Concilwoman Reba McClanan were absent.

At the informal session, Kitchin questioned some aspects of the bid documents. He said he was concerned about its being a viable document. He said Tom Shell who has the concession at Sandbridge Beach said there was no way anyone could bid on Little Island Beach under the present requirements.

Assistant to the City Manager David Grochmal who was in charge of developing the franchise documents, said that the requirements for lifeguards were based on Parks and Recreation policy at the public beaches which it patrols. He said the franchises would have more responsibility than the services have at present.

Kitchin said that he plans to have a statement placed in the newspapers enumerating his concerns. He said that the present services operate at no expense to taxpayers. He said that if the bidder does not have $200,000 to start with, he will not be in business for five years. "I wouldn't even offer a bid on it," he said.

Voice Of The People — What Should The Legal Drinking Age Be?

"It should be 18, I believe, because in the eyes of the law, an 18 year-old is an adult in every other sense of the word. When you're 18, you can be drafted and fight in a war. Why shouldn't you be able to drink a beer? Changing the law would be ridiculous."

Patty Dingwitz
Jewelery Clerk
17-year resident

"You should be able to drink beer when you are 18. What kind of trouble can an 18 year-old get into a 19 or a 21 year-old wouldn't get into? The law has been set for so long, by changing it now they would be taking away privileges 18 year-olds have gotten used to."

Angie Cantrell
Receptionist
Four-year resident

"It ought to be 21 because the younger kids obviously don't know how to handle any kind of alcohol. When you are 18, you are too young for beer. Kids get in more wrecks, are more wreckless, and they are more irresponsible. It would make me very happy for the law to be changed to 21.

Mrs. A. H. Williams
Housewife
35-year resident

"I really think it should be 21. Of course, I'm 21, so a change in the law wouldn't affect me. But I think the younger people can't handle their drinking too well. At 21, you are more mature and you know enough not to drink and drive."

Council Discusses Noona

Haynie also is premature in soliciting funds.

Jennings said, "Our group has not gotten the fair shake we thought they would get," but went along with Creech's request to wait until next week to consider the matter again.

Roebuck said tht the Commission does not believe the VOG has negotiated with the Commission in good faith. He said the Commission recently inquired why the terms of the grant for the current year were not being met in that Noona and the Pops were being allowed only one rehearsal. On Feb. 8, he said, officers of the commission and the VOG director met. The director assured the Commission that "our fears were groundless and that Maestro Noona was being taken care of." Thirteen days later, the restructuring was announced.

Roebuck said the many on the Commission identified with the VOG board member who said that as a result of the VOG vote, she felt "as though she had been raped and thrown out of the car."

Noona's proposal, Roebuck said, is for a barebones budget professional pops series for 1983-84 which requires no additional funding from the city over that recommended by the Commission for the Pops in the coming year's budget.

The possible reemergence of the Virginia Beach Pops has excited the many followers of Maestro Noona and the Pops. He said the number of performances would be the same, but the format would be changed somewhat during the first year.

Endorsement of the revival of the Virginia Beach Pops, he said sould serve as a vote of confidence in Noona, a vote of confidence in the Commission and a signal to the business community of the need for its support.

Roebuck said that last year the Pops orchestra was transported to Baltimore for a guest performance under Noona and Noona later returned as a guest conductor of the Baltimore Orchestra. He has been guest conductor in 12 major cities and has signed contracts to perform as guest conductor in ten major cities next year.

Mortgage Credit Essential To A Healthy Housing Market

The National Association of Realtors called today for a national summit of government and industry leaders concerned with future housing credit needs.

Housing will recover only modestly until federal deficits are reduced substantially and there is an adequate supply of capital for housing investment, said Harley W. Snyder of Valparaiso, Indiana, president of the National Association of Realtors. In the long run, a strong housing industry will require an improved market for mortgage-backed securities to assure a continuous supply of affordable mortgage credit. This will require both regulatory and statutory changes, Snyder said.

The proposed summit of government and housing industry leaders is needed to take an in-depth look at the legal, regulatory and tax barriers that confront the ability of mortgage-backed securities to compete in the capital markets and at the options for removing those barriers, Snyder said. He added that such a focus could provide the "critical momentum" for making the necessary changes.

Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee on the state of the housing industry, Snyder noted that sales of both new and existing homes improved during the last months of 1982 and that gains were evident in building permits and FHA-insured loan applications. He asserted that housing is at last emerging from the longest depression since the 1930s and will play its traditional role of leading the economy to recovery this year.

"While the current upward trend is encouraging, it will take some time for the housing sector to return to full recovery," Snyder told the committee. "The fragile recovery we are seeing must be protected and nurtured in order to encourage a strong economic recovery for all industries. The key to maintaining this environment of lower interest rates so crucial to housing is congressional control over expanding deficits."

The Realtor president cautioned against either a federal jobs program or housing stimulus legislation that would provide only minimal and temporary help while creating a larger deficit that would exert upward pressure on interest rates and reduce the supply of mortgage credit.

The housing depression of the last few years has demonstrated that an adequate and affordable supply to mortgage credit is essential to a healthy housing market, he said. Traditional mortgage financing will have to change to meet the $1.5 trillion worth of housing credit demand expected during the remainder of the decade.

"While approximately 30 percent of all loans originated by lenders were sold in 1982, by the end of the decade over 80 percent of all mortgages will be financed by sales to investors in the secondary market," Snyder noted.

Perhaps the single most important factor in the ability of secondary markets to meet this country's housing needs is the development of new mortgage-backed securities that can compete with corporate securities, stocks and other investments in the nation's capital market, he said.

While the administration has taken several steps to improve the marketability of mortgage-backed securities, there are additional regulations that must be changed--particularly in the tax code--before these securities can fully compete with other types of investment, he said. These include removing the requirements that repaid principal of loans in a mortgage pool be passed through to securities holders and that only one type of security be issued per mortgage pool.

"Many of the items we have mentioned are changes to tax laws and, therefore, come under the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee," Snyder said. "However, this committee can certainly assume a leadership role in seeking these changes. Indeed, Mr. Chairman, we call upon you and your committee to lead the way for a national summit of government and industry leaders from all areas concerned with future housing credit needs."

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents more than 600,000 individuals involved in all phases of the real estate industry.

'82 a "Red Ink" Year

Many businesses will remember 1982 as a "red-ink" year. But through a provision in the tax law known as the "net operating loss carryback," you can offset a net operating loss against prior income (up to three years back) and recoup prior taxes paid!

Assume your 1982 loss is $100,000 and your taxable income for 1979 was $300,000. Your carryback from 1982 will reduce the 1979 taxable income to $200,000. You would recompute your tax just as if your 1979 profit had originally been $200,000. Refund: about $46,000.

Corporations can file claims on Form 1139. Ask your tax advisor if it's more desirable to give up the carry-back by making an election to carry forward only.

Buy Or Rent?

By ROGER PYLE

When analyzing the question as to whether to rent or buy, the key is to analyze the difference between your present financial position as a renter and the position that will result from a properly structured home purchase.

Use the best financing available at the time and take advantage of the present tax laws, which are designed to assist the homeowner.

In this example, let's assume that you are considering the purchase of a home priced at $75,000. You presently pay monthly rent of $450 and have $11,000 in savings invested at 12 percent per annum. Using the savings as a down payment you can purchase the home with a $64,000 mortgage at 12½ percent for a 30 year term.

The table shows that if you continue to rent, in three years you will have paid more than $17,000 just in rent. You also will have paid $11,095 in income taxes (based on family income of $40,000 per year), that could have been saved with mortgage interest deductions. The actual cost of renting for a three year period is as follows:

Rent paid	$17,024
Federal taxes	+11,096
	$28,119
Interest on savings	- 4,454
Actual cost of renting	$23,665

Compare this to the actual cost of buying a home:

Payment for interest, principal and taxes	$26,390
Saved on income taxes due to real estate deductions	8,640
Actual cost of buying a home	$17,750

The actual cost of buying a home is $5,915 less than the cost calculated for renting for the same period of time.

Another major factor to consider is the difference in net worth resulting from renting or buying.

If the potential buyer in the example given continues to rent for three years, his net worth equals your original savings of $11,000 plus $4,454 interest earned on your savings - a total of $15,454.

If however, you purchase a home in the example, your net worth increases to $22,822. This is the equity you have built - the original down payment of $11,000.00 plus a minimum, and very conservative 5 percent appreciation per year on the home's value, plus the amount of the principal paid on the mortgage loan. Rather than a pile of rent receipts, you now have a substantial investment.

The people who say, "I think I'll wait for the interest rates to come down before I buy a house," have not really considered the facts of the current housing situation. Most people have no conception of their actual buying power. A knowledgeable real estate professional can show you the opportunity that awaits at your fingertips. While waiting for a return to "the good old days," you may be losing your best chance in the housing market.

For further information and help contact a realtor member of the Tidewater Board of Realtors. He or she is a professional, who knows the real value of buying a home today, and can answer your questions.

Self Employment Tax May Rise To 40 Percent

Although Congress should support the Social Security Reform Commission's proposal in general, an important technical change is needed to prevent an unfair and discriminatory tax increase on self-employed workers, according to testimony presented today by the nation's largest trade association.

Self-employed workers who, as a class, pay in taxes over a longer period of time and draw benefits over a shorter period of time than employee workers, already are paying their own way in the Social Security system, said Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors.

As a group, the self-employed retire later, according to government statistics, Carlson told the Senate Finance Committee at a hearing on the Social Security Reform Commission plan to shore up the financially ailing system.

Specifically, Bureau of Labor Statistics data shows that the self-employed make up only 8.9 percent of the total workforce--but constitute 27.2 percent of all workers age 65 or older, he said.

Further, a recent study found that 21.2 percent of employee workers leave the workforce by age 63, while just 11.6 percent of the self-employed workers retire by that age.

"As many as 12 percent of self-employed workers have qualified for Social Security through work as an employee worker before becoming self-employed is, therefore, supplementary to the contributions required of them to qualify for Old Age, Survivors and Disability benefits."

The National Association of Realtors, most of whose more than 600,000 members are self-employed, clearly recognizes the need to get the Social Security system back on a sound financial footing, said Carlson. However, the Association firmly believes the proposals regarding self-employed taxes were not adequately researched and should be changed.

Under the current Social Security taxation system, a self-employed worker pays three-quarters of the total amount of Social Security taxes paid by an employee and employer together. Thus, the Association noted a self-employed person already is paying 50 percent more in Social Security taxes than an employee worker.

The Reform Commission proposal calls for having the self-employed pay the total amount that both the employee and employer now pay.

As proposed by the commission, the tax hike for self-employed workers would increase their tax burden by 20 percent to 40 percent, or $300 to $600, in 1984 and by $3,600 over the next 10 years, said Carlson. In sharp and unfair contrast, employee workers and employers would not pay any new tax increases except those already scheduled until and only during 1988 and 1989--and then only tax increases of 0.3 percent, or $65 for each of the two years--the economist noted.

Left unchanged, Carlson said, the commission's proposal would mean that:

•The resulting tax burden would be greater on those least able to pay, namely, lower income workers.

•The smallest of small business would be handicapped.

•The dream of self-employment would be discouraged for many Americans.

•Inventive and energetic workers would be discouraged.

"The commission would allow the self-employed a personal income tax deduction equal to one-half the Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance (OASDI) Social Security Tax payment. Apparently this idea was adopted by the commission in the belief that the huge Social Security tax increase would be offset from personal income tax, resulting in little net increased out-of-pocket loss to the self-employed worker," Carlson said.

"An analysis of this proposal, including the income tax deduction, indicates, however, that there would be little offsetting effect for the vast majority of the self-employed, and the increase in tax burden on self-employed workers would be far greater than the new tax burden on employee workers--a $439 increase, or 30.3 percent, for a typical self-employed worker, after adjusting for a personal income tax deduction," he noted.

Therefore, if a change in the tax structure is necessary, Carlson told the committee, "We strongly recommend an important technical change:

"Either the tax on self-employed workers be increased only by the same percentage as employee workers or the proposed 50 percent deductibility of the self-employed tax be changed to a 25 percent tax credit, a proposal the commission itself considered as a reasonable alternative.

"Particularly at this time of a fragile economic recovery, we should not discourage self-employment, which leads to important innovations, risk-taking and extra energy from people who choose to be their own bosses," Carlson concluded.

Home Loan Should Reflect Your Economic Conditions

"People scrambling for mortgage loans to buy new or existing homes should be aware of some lending techniques now coming to the forefront - and the advantages and disadvantages of each," said Fran Rohdenburg of Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corp.

"A word of advice, though: No one method is suitable for all potential buyers, so let the Realtor describe each, and then choose the one that's best based upon individual economic situations," she added.

Rohdenburg described one financing method which has gained in popularity: the adjustable-rate mortgage or renegotiable loan.

"Basically, it's a 30 year mortgage where the interest rate adjusts periodically according to the cost of money. In other words, the interest rate floats with the market. The payments, however, remain fixed, usually for three or five year periods and are generally much lower than with a fixed rate mortgage," she explained.

"The buyer's hope is that interest rates will fall by the end of any one of the periods, so that he or she won't be tied to a long-term, high-interest mortgage," Rohdenburg added. "The lender is more willing to make such a loan because he won't have a heavy load of long-term loans that must be carried at below prevailing interest levels."

Terms vary on the several types of adjustable-rate or renegotiable loans, but most place a limit on the amount of increase over the course of 25-or 30-year periods and also allow the buyer to refinance at any time, she noted.

"Again, fit the lending terms to your own economic situations," she added. "The Realtor can help you decide which plan is best."

Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corporation recently announced the promotion of Ann R. Palmateer to the position of Vice President of the company.

Palmateer has been with Goodman Segar Hogan since 1976. She has been managing broker of the Chesapeake office since 1980.

Palmateer received her B.S. in Education from Buffalo State Teachers College in Buffalo, New York.

Palmateer is a GRI and CRS candidate; Chairman of the Education Committe of the Tidewater Board of Realtors since 1981; Region VI Chairman of the Education Committee for 1982 and 1983; a member of the Board of V.A.R. since 1982; a Member of the Board of the Tidewater Board for 1983; Instructor for the Brokerage Course at Tidewater Community College; Vice-Chairman of the Real Estate Advisory Committee for 1983; and Instructor for the Tidewater Board Indoctrination Course for the last 2 years.

Palmateer is a resident of Chesapeake, is married to Homer Palmateer, and has three children.

VHDA Receives One Million For Loans

The Virginia Housing Development Authority has been awarded $1.35 million to make energy-saving improvement loans to low-income Virginia homeowners. The Energy Conservation and Solar Energy Bank grant, which will be used to cover interest payments on the loans, was the result of a join proposal submitted to HUD by VHDA and the Virginia Office of Emergency and Energy Services. Virginia was one of only five states in the nation to receive an "outstanding" proposal rating, and one of only six states to receive more than $1 million in funding. The grant is expected to upgrade some 4,000 to 6,000 homes with individual loans ranging from $500 to $3,500.

According to a VHDA spokesperson, HUD regulations prohibit the use of tax-exempt bonds in conjunction with the grant funds. VHDA, which raises funds by selling tax-exempt notes and bonds, is currently seeking authorization from the Virginia General Assembly to issue taxable bonds. Proceeds from the sale of such bonds would be used in conjunction with the grant to reduce the interest rate on loans from 0% to approximately 6% depending on income and amount borrowed. The program is scheduled to begin in June.

The Hint Man

Coffee - If percolated coffee tastes bitter, next time add a pinch of dry mustard to the water to restore the real coffee taste. For better tasting coffee, put the ground coffee beans in a heat-proof container or a piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil made into a saucer shape and put it in a preheated 325°F oven for about three minutes. It works wonders.
Note: This does not work for instant coffee.

Cream, Whipping - add the white of an egg, then chill the cream for twenty minutes and it'll whip easily. Or add a few drips of pure lemon juice or a sprinkling of plain gelatin powder to the cream.

Creaming Butter And Suger - before creaming butter and sugar, soak the bowl in very hot water for three minutes and the task will go twice as fast.
Note: Be sure to dry the bowl before starting.

Curtains - Slip a thimble over the end of the curtain rod and the curtain will slip through easily. Or cut the finger off an old cloth glove and pull it over the end of the curtain rod.
Note: Don't use leather gloves. They prevent slippage.

Dandruff - To keep it under control, use mouthwash. After the normal shampooing and rinsing, pour mouthwash directly onto the scalp and let it dry. Or rub salt into the dry hair, then massage for five minutes before washing your hair.

For Beauty's Sake

Pantry Full Of Beauty Aids

You can add to your beauty supplies just by checking the shelves at home and combining some staples. Many household products have ingredients helpful to maintaining your good looks. Here are some and what they can do for your beauty.

Petroleum Jelly. An inexpensive product with lots of uses, such as removing eye makeup, soothing minor burns and scrapes, and softening cuticles. It also adds glossy shine to eyelids, cheeks and lips.

Cold Cream. Because of its oil content, cold cream is a great makeup removal. It can be used as a moisturizing makeup base, a beauty mask, and cleansing cream. It also helps to cool sunburned skin.

Safflower Oil. This cooking oil can be used as a suntan oil and as a body moisturizer.

Shampoo. Substitute a mild shampoo for bubble bath (1 capful per bath; mix well with water). Use it as a nail or foot soak before a manicure or pedicure. If you run out of soap detergent use a mild shampoo to wash lingerie (and even to wash the family dog).

Creme Rinse. This can help soften dry hands. It also makes a soothing bath "lotion."

Epsom Salts. Use in the bath to relieve achy muscles.

Plastic Food Wrap. Wrap it around hair after applying a conditioner or creme rinse to hold in heat and moisture as the conditioner works.

Witch Hazel. This all-purpose product can be used after shaving legs. Rub it into skin to soothe sore muscles. It can also help soothe insect bites, or relieve minor burns.

Talcum Powder. Use it as a face powder, as a soothing, smoothing after-bath treat, or to absorb sweat in shoes or on palms of hands.

Vinegar. Combined with about one quart of warm water, ¼ to ½ cup of white vinegar is an ideal answer for tired and aching feet. Soak them for about 30 minutes.

Tomatoes. Yes, tomatoes (but only if you're not allergic to them) can be used to brighten up a dull complexion. Cut a thick slice of tomato and rub it over your freshly cleaned face. Leave it on until dry and then rub it off gently with a warm terry cloth. The microscopic top layer of dead skin cells should peel away and pores should be opened and cleansed.

Beer. Beer isn't just for drinking! When mixed with an ordinary shampoo, beer will restore the luster to hair. About 4 cups of beer should be boiled down to make about ¼ cup. Then just add 1 cup of a favorite shampoo and "ale up" hair with suds. Shampoo as usual.

The Chopping Block

After last week's busy time of cutting, dicing and slaving over a hot stove, and since I am fond of microwave cooking, I would like to share these with you.

Twice-Baked Potatoes
Total cooking time: 25 minutes

6 potatoes
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ cup milk
Paprika

Prick potatoes with tines of fork. Cook at High for 16 minutes. Wrap with foil; let stand 5 minutes. Slice off and discard the top of each potato. Scoop out inside of each potato to make 6 shells. In large bowl combine the scooped-out potato, butter, salt, and pepper. Mash, adding enough milk to make fluffy consistency. Spoon mashed potatoes into the potato shells. Place stuffed potatoes on serving plate; sprinkle with paprika. Cook at High for 2 minutes. Give dish a half turn and cook at High for 2 minutes till potatoes are heated through. Garnish with snipped parsley or chives, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Note: If desired, stuff potatoes ahead and refrigerate. Cook at High for 8 minutes, giving dish a half turn after 4 minutes.

Rolled Stuffed Meat Loaf
Total cooking time: 19 minutes

2 eggs, slightly beaten
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon onion powder
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1½ pounds ground beef
½ cup chopped carrot
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup herb-seasoned stuffing croutons, crushed
1 2-ounce can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
¼ cup hot water

Cheddar Cheese Sauce

In bowl combine eggs, crumbs, milk, salt, onion powder, and mustard. Add beef; mix well. On waxed paper, pat into a 12 x 8-inch rectangle. In small bowl combine carrot, celery, and butter or margarine. Cook at High for 4 minutes till vegetables are tender. Stir in croutons, mushrooms, and water. Spoon down center of meat rectangle. Fold sides of meat over to center; seal seam and ends. Place meat roll, seam side down, in 12 x 7½ x 2-inch baking dish. Cook at High for 5 minutes. Cook, uncovered, at Medium High (7) for 10 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Remove to platter. Pour some of the Cheddar Cheese Sauce over; pass remaining sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Cheddar Cheese Sauce

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese (4 oz.)

In 2-cup glass measure heat butter at High for 30 seconds till melted. Stir in flour and salt. Add milk all at once. Cook at High for 2½ minutes till thickened and bubbly, stirring once after 1 minute then every 30 seconds. Add cheese; stir till cheese melts.

Tips & Techniques

There is a secret to success in making a tender, juicy meat loaf. First, mix the egg, liquid, crumbs, and seasoning ingredients together in a bowl. Then crumble in the meat and mix lightly till it is well combined. Overmixing will result in a compact loaf. When shaping the loaf, handle the meat mixture only as much as necessary.

I do hope you have success with these recipes. Do try one or all, and Enjoy!

To make individual meat loaves, divide the meat mixture into equal portions. Mold into even-shaped loaves. Arrange in a 12 x 7½ x 2-inch glass baking dish. Cover loosely with waxed paper and cook as recipe directs.

Countryside Shops

Where The Talent Is

Countryside Shops, located adjacent to the Virginia Beach Farmer's Market in Virginia Beach offers a unique blend of arts and crafts by local artisans.

The many talents of a select few are displayed throughout the beautiful country-style, family oriented shop spaces. Personal touch is the order of the day and there is eloquence and beauty in every object d'art.

The pride each talented craftsman or artist takes in their work is ever evident.

Suzi Dean, local artist. Inspired by Walt Disney, Suzi began her career in late 1965. She loves doing clowns and animals and puts her "heart" in everyone.

Suzi participates in shows frequently and has her work displayed up and down the East Coast.

Patricia Bollow, "The Sheep Lady". While living in Northern California, Patricia assumed the responsibility for raising sheep, and while doing so she got very interested in the wool itself.

Believing wool is one of our finest "natural resources", every item she makes is done so with the TLC (tender, loving care) using natural dyes produced from flowers, herbs, and mushrooms, etc. — This is truly natural art.

George Safire, Wood Carving. George practiced many crafts over the years until finally hitting on his favorite, wood carving.

His facial carvings in "Cypress knees" have a distinct "personality" all their own. They are warm and "friendly" carvings and uniquely his own creation.

Linda De La Zerda (Soft Sculpture). Having attained success through her talent and craft, Linda is busily engaged in creating, developing, manufacturing, displaying and selling her wares. A blend of country and contemporary for young and old alike is evident in all her work. Colorful and happy is her style.

The cats, chickens, horses and other animals all seem to say, "come, pick me up and squeeze me, I'm yours."

Chris Davis (Clay Muffin Maker). Some of the most unusual and amusing characters you'll ever see are the Little Muffins (stoneware pottery) by Chris Davis. They're cute. They're unique. They really are different.

The kind of gift that will elicit a smile and cause a twinkle in the eye of the receiver.

From Denver, Chris brought these gems to Virginia Beach some time back. She's been working in clay for over two years and has no plans to stop.

Pam Goss, Wheat W[illegible] What an unusual, quaint and beautiful craft she learned while in Germany.

Thousands of people are very glad she brought the craft back to this country with her.

After soaking the wheat in water for 30 minutes or more, Pam is able to create just about any design or shape she wants. Seeing this beautiful craft is the only way to really appreciate it.

Polly Pearce attends to Audrey Horton, a Virginia Beach resident, at Barbara Niles Beauty Salon.

Barbara Niles Means Beauty

Once upon a time, there were places for the fabulously wealthy, the rich and the famous. Now, beauty spas like the Barbara Niles Spa on Constitution Drive in Virginia Beach across from Pembroke Mall, have been made affordable for the average and the middle class.

So says Polly Pearce, the spa's manager. "It used to be that only the super-rich could come to places like this," she said. "But now, all that has changed. The problem is, a lot of people still believe that you have to be rich to be beautiful."

The Barbara Niles Spa offers services unavailable at any other spa in the area, said Pearce. Among its offerings are: a sauna, a jacuzzi, two suntanning machines, body scrubbing, mineral baths, hair styling, manicures, pedicures, facials, aerobics and "jazzercise." Additionally, the Niles spa offers courses in self improvement, how to prepare for beauty pageants, and charm courses for teens.

One can get the whole works, a day of beautification, for $125, according to Pearce. "What a beautiful thought for a husband to give a gift like this to a wife," she said. Individual treatments, of course, cost much less. Hair styling, for instance, starts at just $8 per cut.

Men, as well as women, utilize the spa, said Pearce. "We have one man, who if I said his name everyone would know him, who comes in here every two weeks like clockwork for his manicure," she said. "He is in the public eye a lot and he wants to make sure he looks his best.

"I think it is fantastic that men are becoming conscious of grooming habits," Pearce continued. "They are starting to realize that grooming is just as important to them as it is to women."

The spa features five hairdressers, six nail specialists, three facial specialists, three body scrub specialists, three body wrap specialists, one exercise instructor and one dietician.

"Being beautiful is a mental as well as a physical process," said dietician Ellen McKay. "It is a matter of total behavior modification. We have to work from the inside out and from the outside in."

Pearce agreed that beauty is, in most cases, a process of mind over matter. "You can come in here and feel like you are the ugliest person in the world, but when you walk out of here, I can turn your whole attitude around," she said. "I love the challenge. And I really enjoy making people feel good about themselves. That's really what this is all about."

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

.....Like freedom, they have been legislated and regulated away, and their constitutions declare as much. Visiting, yes.....

January 23, 1980.

There was an interesting story in the business section of the Washington Post today.

It said the Commerce Department is currently considering some exceptions to the President's ban on selling high technology items to the Soviet Union.

It said some business people have been told they can do business as usual in about a month.

The Commerce Department explains this in a curious way.

The official statement says, and I quote. "I can reasonably be concluded that a policy of granting exceptions falling into a few hardship categories would not contravene the President's wishes..."

In other words, it's okay to ask sacrifices of farmers and athletes, but business is business.

January 24, 1980.

I read a lengthy article today about the years of training and self-denial that it takes to become an Olympic athlete.

It went on about the deep worry of many of our American athletes that their chance to compete in Moscow may be taken away, and I sympathized with the young people involved.

I sympathized up to the point that a gymnastics coach was quoted, saying that those of us outside the athletic world can't realize just what it means to see your nation's flag raised in triumph.

Perhaps not, but I know where we can get the information.

In the wards of any veterans' hospital, for a start, or on a stroll through a military cemetery.

Such an exercise might also remind the interested visitor of what sort of self-denial it took to make the flag a triumphant symbol in the first place.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

The Church Is The People

The People Are The Church

Minister To The Needs Of The People—Calvary Assembly Of God

The pastor of Calvary Assembly of God, Leonard M. Campbell, returned to Virginia Beach in July 1982. While it was his first time to pastor this church, he was not a newcomer as he had formerly ministered at the First Assembly of God here, and built their present church. It was a return to an area he loved and a challenge to again minister in Virginia Beach.

As well as being a minister, Rev. Campbell has had a varied background, both in the ministry and in business. He started an Assembly of God in Arlington, Virginia, built a church, and from there was called to the national headquarters of the Assemblies of God in Springfield, Missouri, to establish a department of Sales and Advertising for their Sunday School literature. This included educational materials on a graded base for Sunday Schools in several thousand churches in America and other countries.

While pastoring in Beaumont, California and building a new church, he was chosen as mayor of the city and his wife, Faith, was elected president of the Beaumont Teachers' Association. Campbell was a member of the Industrial Development Association of California, Kiwanis Club, and served as president of the Boy Scouts of American in Riverside County.

Later in Ohio he was the owner of Aircraft Tooling Company which afforded many interesting experiences in engineering, designing and building special precision tooling for the aero-space industry. One of the most enjoyable experiences during this period was his contact with Neil Armstrong, the first man to walk on the moon.

Leaving the business world behind, Leonard Campbell came to Virginia Beach to pastor for three years. After resigning from the pastorate of First Assembly of God, the Campbells went to England and resided there for nine months. Rev. Campbell has had a great deal of overseas ministry, four trips to Brazil, three trips to Africa and several times in Europe. He has a tremendous interest in missionary work and has always emphasized the support of foreign missionaries in all of his pastorates.

Joining him in the ministries of Calvary Assembly of God are Harvey Beeton as Associate Pastor and Stanley Turnbull as Youth Pastor; Mrs. Dorothy Smith as Director of Christian Education.

Rev. Beeton is a former Navy Captain who on retirement went to Southeastern Bible College to prepare for the ministry. His wife Nancy, was the first president of Women's Aglow Fellowship in this area. His background and assignments in the Navy have provided him with a wealth of experience that enables him to minister to the needs of people. In visitation and counselling, he and his wife are an effective team.

Stanley Turnbull, son of missionary parents, spent his early years in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Later the family moved to California where he graduated from high school and then enrolled in and graduated from Central Bible College in Springfield, Missouri. There he met his future wife, a music major, Cheryl Turnbull, a very talented singer, who is the choir director at Calvary. Stan plans the youth activities which include a Wednesday night youth service and a Saturday night L.I.F.E. rally. Stan's father is presently Director of International Ministries for CBN.

The Director of Christian Education, Dorothy Smith, has been a member of the church for many years. She effectively administrates the Sunday School and Children's Church activities and assists in the church office.

The main thrust of these devoted and experienced lenders and workers at Calvary Assembly of God is to minister to the needs of the people while ever looking to today and tomorrow without dwelling on the past, and performing every task with zeal with the Lord in mind.

World Day Of Prayer

Sponsored in the U.S. by Church Women United, this annual observance unites women of faith in 170 countries on six continents around the globe.

Mysteries

The words themselves are mysteries to him—black "squiggles" against the white page—but Daddy makes them sound very interesting.

Later he will begin to read for himself and a vast new world will be opened.

In it, however, other mysteries will appear—other things that seem as impossible as the black words against the white page. But gradually these will become clearer.

One of these mysteries is religion. Understanding God's message, learning the meaning of faith—these vital subjects take a particular kind of education and special study. It will take the remainder of his lifetime, and yet more, to fully understand the spiritual universe.

But this little boy is lucky. Although he doesnt know it yet, his parents will see to it that he gets this "education" in the right place—in their house of worship.

Virginia Beach Sun News

Mark Batzel, (50) co-captain for Kempsville High School's basketball Chiefs, shoots for two over Billy Holcomb of Kellam (54). Boo Boo McGlone (22) and Roger Burnham (12) look for the rebound.

Kempsville Topples Kellam

The Kempsville Chiefs, with a berth in this week's Eastern Region Basketball Tournament already sewn up, advanced to the Beach District's title game against Green Run last week by defeating the Knights of Kellam High School 52-45 at Plaza Junior High.

Led by 5-7 Boo Boo McGlone, Kempsville over-came a 17-15 halftime deficit. The Chiefs turned back Kellam with a lot of help from McGlone, who connected on nine consecutive free throws in the fourth quarter.

McGlone finished the contest with 18 points. D. J. Dozier contributed 11 points, and Mark Batzel, slowed by a twisted ankle, chipped in eight points.

Roland Foreman of Kellam was the game's high scorer with 22 points. Knight Tim Christian, who sat out much of the second half, added 10 points to the losing effort. It was five straight long-range jump shots by Foreman late in the game that kept Kellam alive. McGlone's maestro-like performance at the foul line proved to be the difference in the end, however.

Kellam, coached by former Old Dominion University player Joey Caruthers, lost all four of its games with Kempsville this year. Kempsville is coached by Dick Ponti.

The Old And New

The old Texaco service station at the corner of Rosemont Road and South Plaza Trail has been razed in order to make way for a new Texacare convenience store center, similar to one which opened recently at the corner of Rosemont and Holland roads. According to G.L. Cline, a contractor, construction should be complete in around 100 days. Pictured above on Cline's tractor are neighborhood children Catherine Martin, 16, Byron Clemons, 13, and Johnny Wright, 12.

Billy O'Brien Still Urging Lottery

Delegate J.W. "Billy" O'Brien of Virginia Beach said he hopes to make elections this November an unofficial referendum on a statewise lottery across the state.

He said a large majority of Virginiians would vote in favor of a lottery if given an opportunity -- and is equally convinced that some legislators voted against his proposal for a lottery referendum this year not because of any deep sense of conviction that a lottery is morally wrong, but because they are uncertain how their constituents feel about it.

O'Brien said he will call on people who are proponents of a lottery referendum to make known their feelings in elections across the state for 100 seats in the House of Delegates and 40 seats in the State Senate. "I hope that the public will demand that every candidate running for each General Assembly seat this year makes a public stand for or against a referendum on a state lottery. This way, those who oppose a referendum will have an opportunity to explain why they think the public should be denied a chance to vote on this important issue."

He went on to say that he has been extremely encouraged by the large volume of mail and phone calls in favor of a lottery, and believes it is also significant that surveys taken in some areas of the state, where legislators opposed his bill, have shown that a majority of people in those districts favor a referendum.

Should the citizens decide in favor of a state lottery, it would be operated under carefully controlled conditions, much like that of the ABC Board, and would generate approximately $ 70 million in new revenue to the state each year. Such large amounts of net revenue could be used for a variety of purposes -- providing money for public education, easing burdens on taxpayers by providing more aid to localites, funding programs for the indigent, promoting mental health as well as programs for the elderly, etc.

O'Brien notes that thousands of Virginians already participate in games of chance such as bingo, raffles, supermarket and fast food games, etc. "To contend that a lottery is going to corrupt anyone or promote gambling in Virginia is a distortion of the truth", said O'Brien. "Other states that have lotteries enjoy the benefits of millions of dollars of additional revenue and have had relatively few problems -- certainly fewer problems than we have had in some localities with bingo."

Citizen-Of-The-Week

Nicholson Helps Benefit Rescue Squads

The Citizen-of-the-Week this week is Nick Nicholson, a 32-year Virginia Beach resident.

Nicholson has, for the past seven years, hosted oyster roasts for the benefit of the oceanfront Virginia Beach Rescue Squad. Through the years, Nicholson estimates he has raised nearly $100,000 for the all-volunteer squad.

Nicholson

"There's no way you can describe the outstanding job those boys on the rescue squad do," said Nicholson. "They are continually going through schooling, keeping up with the latest medical advances. Still, nobody in the community pays any attention to them unless they are in trouble."

Eight years ago, Nicholson was suffering from internal bleeding and was forced to call upon the rescue squad. "They did a great job," he said. "But after a while, when I hadn't gotten a bill, I began to wonder about it. A friend told me I never would get a bill, either. That was when I had to do something to repay them."

This year's turnout, around 700, "didn't go quite as well" as in year's past," said Nicholson. Previous year's oyster roasts had drawn between 800 and 1,000 enthusiasts, including members of city council. This year, Nicholson said, no councilmen were in attendance.

"Maybe it was the economy this year," said Nicholson, discussing the $20 cover charge. "Also, our advertising wasn't as good as usual. The Virginia Beach Sun was the only media agency that I saw which gave us any kind of coverage."

Tagged "The Social Event of the Year," the annual oyster roast usually generates $9,000 for the rescue squad. Nicholson was unsure how much money had been raised from this year's roast, which was held two weekends ago at the Dome. "I do know this," he said. "Every nickel that was made went to the rescue squad. We didn't make a cent."

Nicholson credit's the event's yearly success to his friends. "I've got guys who talk about this thing every single day of the year," he said, adding that the event takes "a good three months" of preparation. Nicholson said he has put on oyster roast benefits for other groups, too, including the Freemason Baptist Church in Norfolk, of which he is a member.

Nicholson and his wife, Marguerite reside in the Linkhorn Park section of Virginia Beach. He has lived there since 1951. For 28 years Nicholson owned Nick's Hospitality House on Laskin Road, which he sold last summer before retiring. "But, I've still got that place in my blood," he said. "It has the best seafood in town. I have to go there every day still."

Milligan Is Fireman Of The Month

This month's Firefighter of the Month is instructor Jim Milligan. Milligan, an eight-year veteran of the department, has served his last three years in the Training Division. In nominating instructor Milligan, Captain Gary W. Painter cited, "Milligan's dedication and concern for the physical fitness of his fellow firefighters is a reflection of the professional he is."

Three years ago, when Chief Harry Diezel decided that a physical fitness program was necessary for the department, he called upon Milligan to devise the program. Jim developed a "PT" program which allowed every member of the department to participate. This "PT" program is still functioning in the department. In conjunction with the "PT" program, Milligan devised an agility test for firefighter applicants.

Instructor Milligan has served as the lead instructor in the department's Company In-Service programs. In-Service programs are held quarterly for each company and cover a variety of topics.

Milligan derives his background in physical fitness from working for three years in private health clubs. He designed fitness programs for these clubs. Since joining the Fire Department, he has attended courses at the National Fire Academy on "PT" programming for the firefighter.

Milligan states that the biggest enjoyment he receives from his job is "working with his peers." Although he terms the program as successful, he "feels there is still a lot of work to be done and, for that reason, the commitment to physical fitness must be a long-term one."

Even his outside interests represent Jim's dedication to physical fitness. He founded and coaches the championship Virginia Beach Fire Department Tug of War team. The team trains extensively and has won the tugs at Harborfest and the Neptune Festival.

Milligan

Additionally, Milligan has formed a three member partnership which teaches life instruction to the industrial sector. Based on an analysis of the industry's needs, he will develop a fire safety program for the organization. Classes that are taught include Emergency Situation Management, CPR, EMT, or First Responder First Aid.

Milligan, a native of South Bend, Indiana, has lived in Virginia Beach since 1959. He and his wife, Anne, reside in the Windsor Woods section of the Beach.

Farmer Appointed Telephone Co. Manager

Milton G. Farmer was recently appointed Manager-Telephone Services and Lawrence Pitt was recently appointed Manager-Engineering and Construction for the eastern district of Continental Telephone in Smithfield. The eastern district covers the Chancellor, Stafford, Bowling Green, Warsaw, Gloucester, Smithfield and Princess Anne serving areas.

Farmer is responsible for the eastern district's Phone Falrs and business offices, installation and repair, cable maintenance, service center and switching equipment offices.

Since 1979, Farmer has been customer services manager In Harrisonburg. He joined Continental in 1949 and held several positions in Bowling Green, Warsaw and Harrisonburg including staller repairperson, central office repairperson, outside plant engineer, assistant division manager, division plant manager, district service maintenance supervisor, and district plant superintendent.

Farmer's and Pitt's new positions are the result of Continental's ne management reorganization, effective January 1. According to Farmer, the two most significant changes are the creation of a telephone services department and the consolidation of geographic serving areas.

Network services and customer services combined to form telephone services.

The phone company structured its 92 exchanges into three management districts. The northern district consists of the Harrisonburg, Manassas and Woodbridge service areas. The southern district consists of Franklin, Emporia, Chase City and Amherst.

Resort-Area Theatre

Virginia Beach look to for innovation."

One novelty of the place is its prices, ranging from $1 to $4 for admission, in most cases. "We're going to succeed because we are keeping the prices low," said Saltzman. "In the hardest of times people still have to buy themselves a good time. Here we are vitally interested in family programming at reasonable prices. A family of four can go out here and spend under 10 bucks."

Saltzman said the theater will benefit the resort-area community. "It will definitely be a good thing for all the businesses down here," he said. "Face it, when somebody comes here for a vacation, there is simply not a lot for the famly to do at night. In fact, besides going to nightclubs, there is really nothing to do here. They probably have a very dull time. We want to give the ocean-front some spark."

Saltzman and Cleanthes, native New Yorkers, have been partners in Virginia Beach for 12 years.

Detective John VanderHeiden

VanderHeiden Aims To Be 'The Best'

Virginia Beach six-year detective John VanderHeiden is committed to "doing the best job I can," he said. "Discovering who is responsible for a crime and bringing them to trial."

VanderHeiden, 31, has been a member of the Virginia Beach Police Department for nine and one-half years. He has served in the Uniform Division, first and third precincts, and has been assigned to the plain clothes unit. He has served in the Sandbridge Beach Patrol, first precinct. He is currently in the Investigative Division, where he has served in the juvenile bureau, but is now assigned to the robbery/homicide squad. He is a member of the Police Negotiations Team, which handles hostage situations, of which he has been involved in four. He is also a certified police instructor at the Virginia Beach Auxiliary Police Academy.

"VanderHeiden is an extremely conscientious and able investigator," said his commanding officer, Captain C.D. Hathaway.

Never Give Up

One outstanding testimony to VanderHeiden's competence as an investigator, can be illustrated by looking at an incident which occured last October when police officers and VanderHeiden responded to a call regarding a shooting at a house on Daniel Smith Lane, off Newtown Road in the Bayside borough.

The house, vacant, was occupied at the time by 20 to 25 people playing craps. A nip joint business was also being conducted at the scene. Two men approached the front door of the house from the outside, attempting to break-in and commit an armed robbery. In their attempt to shoot through the door to get in, James "Pete" Boone, on the other side of the door, was killed.

Three days later, based on probable cause, eyewitness accounts and statements, VanderHeiden arrested a subject and charged him with murder, use of a firearm in commission of a felony, and attempted armed robbery.

The man spent 30 days in jail, maintaining his innocence the entire time.

There was reason enough to arrest and hold the man, but "something didn't sit right" with VanderHeiden. After numerous interviews with the subject, VanderHeiden was convinced the man arrested wasn't guilty. Soon thereafter, based on additional investigation and with help from Crime Solvers, the first subject was released and the two alleged guilty subjects were apprehended by VanderHeiden. They are still in jail awaiting trial.

Sometime Frustrating

VanderHeiden enjoys his work, but admits at times it can be trying.

He says he gets irritated "when the court system releases a man we know is guilty. It's rather frustrating.

"It's frustrating when you can't figure something or discover who's responsible for something," he continued. "That makes it a challenge."

VanderHeiden said Virginia Beach residents are fortunate not to be subjected to the high crime rates that infest some cities.

"We're very fortunate to have low homicide and robbery rates, compared to the City of Norfolk for example," he said. "But they have a different type of environment and economy."

"I love Virginia Beach," he continued. "It's a good environment and has probably the best police department in the state of Virginia as far as I'm concerned. Everybody in the Uniform Division strives to do their best. The Investigative Division supplements the uniform patrol, which is the backbone of the department."

Regarding his future, VanderHeiden said, "I hope to stay where I'm at currently; but I do have my eye on promotion."

He is already a Master Police Officer, and his next rank would be Lieutenant.

VanderHeiden is on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week; plus he works shifts. He also goes out of town about once a year to interview homicide suspects or to bring back prisoners.

VanderHeiden, a baseball coach for the Woodstock Recreation League, is married to his wife Cheryl, a hair stylist and a volunteer for Virginia Beach Crime Solvers. They live in the Kempsville borough of the city and have one child, Johnny, 11, a student at Kemps Landing Elementary School.

Dealership Serving Tidewater For Over Fifty Years.

Optimism Abounds At Perry Buick

"We've made a profit every year we've been in business, and we will again this year." That statement is certainly typical of the optimistic view that has been taken for over fifty years by the man who made it, Aubrey H. Perry, Sr., board chairman, Perry Buick.

As one would imagine, the son, Aubrey H., Jr. speaks with as much enthusiasm, and remains as optimistic about the future of Perry Buick." We have excellent product engineering, quality and appearance, and we believe through these we will increase sales," Perry Jr. stated.

"Furthermore, the present demand for new cars is as good or better than its' ever been, and the reduced interest rates will do a lot to attract the buyer.

The annual vehicle scrap has reached enormous proportions with close to 9 million cars towed to auto graveyards annually.

"Those cars have to be replaced," said Aubrey Jr. recently. When people keep their cars longer, he said, a dealer's sales are helped by the extra servicing the older vehicles require and by surging parts sales.

The Perrys' are even looking forward to an expansion program which will include three other "experienced, trained, and quite capable Perry's," Aubrey H. (Buster) Perry III, general manager of Perry Buick; James M. Perry, new and used car coordinator, and Walter A. Perry, new car manager. The Perry name has virtually become a household word in Tidewater, having served the area for over 51 years. The central location, company reputation, capable service crews and aggressive advertising campaigns have all contributed to their success over the years.

The Perrys' themselves, attribute much of their success in a bad economy to repeat business by faithful customers and Perry Jr. said it all this way last week; "we have a human relationship with our customers and that's what keeps us a step ahead of the competition." He further stated that the excellent reputation the Perry dealership has maintained over the years for service and "keeping their word" on promises to customers is probably responsible for Perry Buick's ability to retain those "faithful customers."

From the Great Depression to today's economic woes, the Perrys' have seen it all. They remain steadfast in their belief that the Golden Rule has its application in business and is probably as responsible for their longevity. But, the Buick name is a big part of it all they readily admit and this year's selection offers the finest technology and engineering they've seen in a long time.

From a handful of employees over fifty one years ago to a present staff of over 80 and with assets that have grown from $32,000 (and the need to borrow), to assets of over $2 million in buildings, land, equipment and inventory—Perry Buick—6633 Virginia Beach Boulevard—(near Newtown Road) in Virginia Beach—seems solidly entrenched in the highly competitive Tidewater new car dealership market.

OUTSTANDING SALESMEN

Jim Pearce has been recognized by Perry Buick for his outstanding sales performance for 1982.

Jim is a Virginia Beach native, has been with Perry Buick for the past five years and has received the Sales Master Award from Buick for 5 continuous years.

Jim would like to invite all his friends to stop by and let him show them the new Buicks.

Joe Abrami has been chosen by Perry Buick as 1982 Salesman of the year. Joe, who is a native of New York, has been living in Virginia Beach for the past three years with his wife and daughter.

Joe has been with Perry Buick for 3 years and has won the Buick Seals Master Award for 1982.

Joe extends an invitation to all his friends to stop by and let him show the 1983 Buicks.

Pulling The Plug:

Humanitarian Act Or Playing God?

The consensus of most local authorities is that the "Natural Death Act" places breath of hope in terminal patients.

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

Louise Sarian, a resident of Virginia Beach's Lynn Shores Manor nursing home, remembers the pain suffered by her first husband during his long bout with cancer.

"I had to give Ralph medicine with a hyperdermic, and I'm sure he would have chosen not to go through with the treatments if he could have," said Sarian. "In fact, on many occasions he'd say to me, 'Leave me alone. Let me die.'"

More than 20 year's later, Sarian's second husband, Steve, also died of cancer after nearly two and one-half years of treatment. "It was a horribly painful thing for him, and I hated to see him put through it," she said.

Sarian, now in her 80's, has recently suffered two heart attacks. Drawing on her experiences with her spouses, she knows that she does not want her life prolonged by artificial means. "Keeping somebody alive by artificial means is cruel to the person and to the family," she said "I believe that life is scared, but life is also your own. If I could trust the doctor when he told me there is no realistic hope for survival, I'd ask him to pull the plug."

Terminally ill Virginians will soon have the option to request removal of artificial life support systems if Gov. Charles S. Robb signs into law a bill recently approved by the General Assembly. Virginia would become the fourteenth state to adopt this type of law.

House Bill 329, "The Natural Death Act," was passed during the last week of the 1983 legislative session by a 59-37 House vote. The bill had previously received approval by the Senate, 21-18. Robb is expected to endorse the measure, according to a spokesperson. "The governor has said he is aware of no major police differences with the General Assembly,"

Kenneth Vann, a sophomore at Princess Anne High School, is practicing with 21 of his Cavalier teammates in preparation for the school's varsity soccer opener March 18 at Norview High School in Norfolk. The team debuts at home March 25 against Booker T. Washington. First-year coach Ken Whitley predicts P.A. will improve on its 1982 record of one win and 11 losses. "We've got some pretty good athletes, so I'm sure we're bound to improve," he noted. Bayside, he said, is the team to beat this year.

Rotarians Honor Roche

Diane C. Roche, fire education specialist for the Virginia Beach Fire Department, was heralded recently as the 1982 City Employee of the Year by the Virginia Beach Rotary Club.

Roche was presented a plaque by Vice mayor Barbara M. Henley at the club's weekly meeting at the Virginia Beach Pavilion. On hand for the ceremony was City manager Thomas Muehlenbeck and Deputy Chief W.R. "Bill" Gurley, Sr. of the fire department's fire prevention division.

Roche was hired in 1976 to develop and present a fire safety education program to fifth grade students. "Virginia Beach now has one of the best fire education programs in the country," according to the nomination document submitted by Fire Chief Harry Diezel.

Roche, holder of a Bachelor of Science degree in education from Illinois State University, is affiliated with the National Fire and Burn Education Association, the National Fire Academy, the National Fire Protection Association, the International Society of Fire Service Instructors, and the U.S. Fire Administration. She has spoken at more than 50 Fire service conferences in 23 states.

If Convicted

New Bill: If You Hit A Cop, You Go To Jail

After hundreds of assaults, one death, legislators finally stiffen the penalty for attacking police officers; Governor expected to sign the bill.

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

The word is out. If someone is convicted of hitting a Virginia Beach cop, they go to jail.

The Virginia General Assembly recently passed House Bill 220. Basically, the bill has three main provisions for handling assaults on police officers:

•If a person is convicted of maliciously injuring a police officer while on duty, that means injuring the officers with the intention of maiming, disfiguring, disabling or killing, that person shall serve a minimum of two and up to 20 years in prison. An example of this situation would arise if a subject, verbally and physically abused a police officer, threatened him, and then cracked his head open with a baseball bat.

•If the subject didn't say a word, and unlawfully, but not maliciously, cracked a police office's head open with a baseball bat, if convicted, that person would spend a minimum of one, and up to five years in prison.

•If you're in a fight in a bar and hit a police officer, but don't break the skin, if convicted, the charge carries a minimum of six months and up to a year in jail.

If the Governor signs the bill into law, it would go into effect July 1, 1983.

According to Philip Abraham, Governor Charles Robb's special assistant for policy, Robb is not commenting at this time on which specific bills he will or will not sign. Abraham did say, however, that Robb is "aware of no major policy differences with the General Assembly."

Too Many Deaths

Over the years Virginia Beach has lost six police officers while they were in the line of duty. Two were lost in a helicopter accident; two lost in a scuba diving accident; one was lost in an automobile accident; and most recently, in 1981, Daniel Maloney became Virginia Beach's first police officer to die a violent death.

Total number of attacks on police officers ranges from 86 in 1975 and '77 and up to 156 in 1981.

Police R.A.I.D. Drunk Drivers

Despite increasing its drunk driving arrest by 93 percent last year, the Virginia Beach Police Department is "missing more drunks than we are catching," according to Police Chief Charles R. Wall.

"We need every bit of help we can get," Wall said at a recent press conference. The meeting was called to unveil a new program in which citizens are being asked to report motorists suspected of being inebriated.

Known as "Operation R.A.I.D. (Report All Intoxicated Drivers)", the program is slated to begin immediately. Wall asked that anyone seeing a suspected drunken driver, telephone the police department's 911 emergency number. Dispatchers will then alert all patrolling officers of the car's description and last location, Wall said.

R.A.I.D. is the latest phase of a drunk driving crackdown Wall initiated more than a year ago. Wall reported that the program's maiden year yielded several significant statistics, including:

•Virginia Beach's traffic fatalities were down in 1982, from 32 in 1981 to 23 last year. This was the biggest decline in automobile deaths compared to other Tidewater cities including Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Newport News and Hampton. Norfolk and Chesapeake experienced increases in traffic fatalities.

•Virginia Beach's 93 percent increase in D.U.I. arrests in 1982 compared to 1981 led all other Tidewater cities. Virginia Beach's total of 1,830 D.U.I. arrests in 1982 led four other cities in southside Hampton Roads, and was second only to Newport News, which had 2,734 DUI arrests.

Wall said he hoped Project R.A.I.D., the first of its kind in the state, would aid police. "If you're out driving drunk, and you think there are more eyes out there than the police, it's bound to make you think twice," he said.

Council Members Discuss Use Of Executive Session

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

It was the only vote of the day that was not unanimous, but that one 7-2 vote of Virginia Beach City Council made up for all the rest.

Vice Mayor Barbara Henley and Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf voted against having an executive session to discuss legal ramifications of an item on the floor during the formal session of Council Monday afternoon. When they were outvoted, they refused to attend the executive session.

It's High Time

The thinking was, the greatest number of assaults on Virginia Beach police officers occured during the summer months, when the resort area population swells immensely. Statistics, however, belie this notion.

The fact of the matter is, Virginia Beach police officers are assaulted regularly all year 'round. Since 1975 there have been 856 reported assaults on Virginia Beach police officers. (Underscore the word "reported"). About one-third of them occur during the hot summer months of June, July and August. The other two-thirds of the attacks apparently fall between September and May, and are inflicted, it would seem, largely by local residents.

Respect for law and order, and for law enforcement officers has been declining for years. Vividly, many people can recall the late '60's and the often bloody battles between police officers and non-conforming college students and other special interest groups. The police officers were labeled then as the bad guy; and the concept of "justice for all" had no place in a society of young people who wished to "do their own thing." But to be accurate, the problem is not just a memory, it is also contempory.

The unrest of the late 1960's has quieted. For the most part, society has realized that there is much more to be gained by intelligent evaluations of situations, and thoughtful reactions, than by violence. Yet, there continues to be certain sectors of society which continues to strike out at authority and refuse to respect law and order.

After gallons, nay swimming pools of blood having been spilled and many chins bruised, Virginia lawmakers have realized that if police officers fear for their own safety, they can't be expected to do their job of protecting others to the best of their ability. Consequently, when Governor Robb signs into law House Bill 220, and there is no reason to think he shouldn't, those people convicted of maliciously or feloniously injuring a police officer, will go to prison.

In their zeal to protect the rights of law-abiding citizens, many Virginia Beach police officers have been injured. One, Daniel Maloney, even died in the line of duty. Thank goodness the General Assembly finally addressed this very distressing situation. However, legislation will not protect police officers from those who have been raised with no respect for the law. Nor will the new legislation provide any guarantee that fewer police officers will be attacked or killed in the future. One thing does seem for sure: House Bill 220 should strongly deter repeat offenders. Certainly those offenders who spend a year or two in jail for assualting a police officer will think twice about doing it again after they get out.

As one resort strip police officer told The Sun back during the summer of 1981, the year in which the assaults on cops in the city were at all time high since at least 1975, "being assaulted is not part of my job description."

No. Being assaulted is not part of his job description. But unfortunately, it is sometimes part of a police officer's job. Therefore, when not enough people in the streets help law enforcement officers do their job, and in fact sometimes hamper them, it's high time legislators in Richmond stepped in.—G.D.G.

Tough Issue

Whittled to its essence, the "Natural Death Bill" recently approved by the Virginia General Assembly comes down to the fundamental choice between life and death.

House Bill 329, which now needs only the nod from Gov. Charles S. Robb to become law later this year, allows, among other things, for terminally ill patients to refuse artificial life support systems. If said patient is unable to speak for himself, his next of kin is given the option to make the determination. Under the new law, physicians will not be civilly or criminally liable for any ensuing deaths.

Opponents of the bill point to the Bible or to their own convictions regarding the preservation of all life. Man, they say, is obligated to do everything within his power to preserve life, no matter the cost.

Their commitment to their beliefs is admirable. No doubt many persons in this community share these sentiments.

However, there comes a time when a line must be drawn, when there really is, quite literally, no hope for survival. Consider, for example, a Virginia Beach resident who has been in a terrible accident, and no longer has control over his physical or mental facilities. With a brain no longer functioning, the only thing keeping his lungs and heart pumping are machines. He will never come out of it, the doctors say. He will remain, for the rest of his life, a vegatable.

In this sort of case, the person's family should have the option of pulling the life-sustaining plug, thus allowing their loved one to die a peaceful death. Overriding the astronomical medical price tag of prolonging the life is the cost placed on emotions. Imagine the suffering and the agony the family must go through while their once-lively loved one now lies in a hospital room, motionless, thoughtless, and without feelings.

The General Assembly has taken a bold, but not unprecedented step in passing this law. No doubt many constituents may be outraged by the decision. Still, House Bill 329 may become law. Virginia's delegates and senators should be respected for tackling this tough issue.—M.M.G.

Eye On Drunks

The efforts of the members of the Virginia Beach Police Department, under the guidance of Chief Charles R. Wall, to curb the incidence of drunk driving in the community have been ambitious, promising and, by all indications, very successful thus far.

The department has succeeded in not only doubling its arrests of drunken drivers over the last year, but it has witnessed a reduction of alcohol-related traffic fatalities, from 32 in 1981, to 23 last year.

The chief and his organization have given their utmost to perpetuate the theme that Virginia Beach is tough on drunks. The results of the last 12 months' efforts are very encouraging, suggesting that Wall may be hitting the nail on the head.

At a recent press conference, Wall unleashed a host of statistics on his DUI enforcement campaign. Did you know:

•That since 1974, DUI arrests in the resort city have exploded, from 439 to 1,830?

Letters To The Editor

"Gun Lover" Attacks The Virginian-Pilot Council Coverage

Editor:

I would like to respond to the editorial "Shoot-out at The Beach" in the March 3, 1983, Virginian Pilot. It seems that The Virginian-Pilot has sunk to a new low in its never-ending battle against guns and gun owners and also provides a prime example of slanting the news.

As one of the "gun lovers" who attended the recent Virginia Beach City Council meeting, I failed to hear the "ranting" that was mentioned in The Virginian-Pilot article. What I did hear were people using our democratic system to try and change a law which they do not agree with. We already have a Federal law which prohibits drug addicts, convicted felons, and ex-mental patients from buying or possessing guns and I do not think that we need a local law which says basically the same thing. What the Virginia Beach ordinance does contain and The Virginian-Pilot conveniently left out of their article is the fact that the current statute of which the pistol permit is a part, makes it illegal to purchase, transfer, give as a gift or let another person use a pistol for any reason in Virginia Beach without a permit. This means that a husband who lets his wife use his pistol at the range, or a father who gives his son a pistol for his birthday is technically guilty of a Class I Misdemeanor which is punishable by up to 12 months in jail and a $1,000 fine. This is simply another example of a law which punishes the law abiding citizens while having no effect on the criminal.

As I stated at the City Council meeting and which The Virginia-Pilot chose not to publish in any of its other articles on this issue, the answer to our problem is not more laws but in keeping the criminals in jail once we have them. A prime example of this was the recent murder at a Virginia Beach tire store where the alleged killer was out on a low bond for approximately thirty felonies because one prosecutor did not believe he "was a threat to the community."

In 1776 we needed guns to protect ourselves from Indians and Redcoats. In 1983 we need them to protect ourselves and our families from robbers, rapists, muggers, murderers and other derelicts who prey on society since the police are stretched too thin to be everywhere at once.

It never ceases to amaze me that The Virginia-Pilot is so willing to attack our rights under the Second Amendment of the Constitution. I wonder if that nameless writer of the editorial would feel the same way about the First Amendment, that which guarantees freedom of the press?

Liked Editorial

Editor:

I enjoy reading all the editorials in the "Sun", but I especially liked the one written by Mr. Goldfarb titled "Handy Belt" on Feb. 16, 1983.

I showed this article to a law enforcement officer and he was happy to see it printed in The Sun, as the previous week he expressed almost the same exact opinion to me.

Also the story on Feb. 23 by reporter Mike Gooding, "Scared Out of My Wits", was outstanding. Keep up the great reporting and excellent editorials.

'The Businessman' Draws Fire

Editor:

Having read your article, "What Does It Take To Be A Winner," I feel I should write this letter to express my views of "The Businessman." Having dealt with the Cavalier for six previous years on the last weekend of February, our Conference had access to just about the whole hotel. This year was different. We had scheduled our weekend and worked hard at preparing for approximately 750 to 800 people who attended. We were not notified or given any reason why they scheduled another convention the same weekend.

Our people were sent to the Old Cavalier, which was not bad, but others of our group were taken to the Ramada Inn, 57th Street, to make room for the other group. Of course, the people of the Oceanfront Conference were very put out. If you could have heard the promises "The Businessman" gave to us, at the 1982 Conference, you would have thought it to be true.

We will not return to the Cavalier in 1984 and have not made a decision whether to stay at the beach. Our group of people have a certain amount of revenue at the beach each year. I have always heard that "word of mouth" was the best advertisement you could get but the comments I heard were not favorable at all.

Arson Is Stupid

Editor:

This arson situation is really getting ridiculous. Millions of dollars are being foolishly wasted, and lives, needlessly risked.

Who would do so foolish a thing? Is it greedy hotel owners trying to turn a profit? Is it a crazy person, a pyromaniac? Or is it a bunch of dumb kids looking for kicks?

Council Notes

There are about 90 acres in Virginia Beach in which drainage ditches are a problem. Residents living near the ditches would like them corrected. However, city officials report that to repipe only 49 of them would cost $57,073,000. That roughly averages out to better than $1 million a ditch, and that is almost unbelievable.

The Kings Point ditch, for example, where residents have been complaining, requires an 84-inch pipe for 2,900 linear feet at a cost of at least $521,000 and possibly as much as $750,000, or three-quarters of a million dollars.

This, and much more information on the matter was recently presented to City Council by Public Works Director Oral Lambert. Council took no action.

A local billboard company has requested permission to erect three new billboards on Holland Road and two on Rosemont Road, but did not win the approval of City Council. Instead, Council requested a review of the city's billboard policy by the Virginia Beach Planning Commission, which had already approved the request.

Some local residents contend that more commercial billboards in the city won't do anything to make Virginia Beach more attractive. And in fact, as the billboards weather and wear, they will possibly be an eyesore.

If billboards are neat and modern, not too big and tastefully placed, more of Virginia Beach Officials Speak Out On New 'Natural Death Act'

said Philip Abraham, the governor's special assistant for policy.

"I believe that life is sacred, but life is also your own. If I could trust the doctor when he told me there is no realistic hope for survival, I'd ask him to pull the plug."—Louise Sarian, a Virginia Beach nursing home resident who lost two husbands to cancer.

Del. Bernard Cohen, (D), Alexandria, the bill's sponsor, said the new law will provide terminally ill patients, "the respect and dignity they desire." Said Cohen, who has been trying to win approval of the bill for three years: "All this law does is allow people in terminal conditions to make known their desires that they don't want extraordinary and heroic means of sustaining their lives."

Del. J. Samuel Glasscock (D), Suffolk-Chesapeake, a member of the Assembly Committee to Study the Rights of the Terminally Ill, said the bill is "an excellent statement of what the law ought to be."

Glasscock explained that the bill is broken down to provide maximum protection for both doctors and patients. According to Glasscock, the bill:

- •Gives physicians immunity from civil and criminal prosecution if they are carrying out patients' wishes.
- •Requires written declaration witnessed by two persons, which states the patient does not want to sue life-sustaining devices; or,
- •Allows for the use of oral declarations in very limited circumstances; or,
- •Sets up a pecking order of persons who can make the decision about life support systems if the patient is unable to do so. They are: a guardian, parents, someone designated in writing by the patient, the spouse, a majority of children, or the patient's nearest living relative.
- •Obligates physicians opposed to removing life support to help transfer the patients to other physicians.
- •Strictly forbades euthanasia, or any sort of active effort to end a patient's life such as the injection of a lethal drug.
- •Assures that a patient's insurance policy will be honored.

"I should hope that the majority of the people in this area and around the state wanted this law," said Glasscock. "Most of the people I've talked to want to be able to make this decision. We have given them freedom of choice."

Virginia Beach Reaction

Three out of Virginia Beach's five General Assembly delegates supported the measure. One supporter, Del. Owen C. Pickett, Jr. (D), called the bill "very humanitarian.

"Elderly persons for years have expressed concerns to me that they don't want to be prolonged in a comatose situation. This law has incorporated the safeguards to be a productive and effective law."—Delegate Owen Pickett

"I've been aware of a need for this type of legislation for a very long time," said Pickett. "Other bills of this sort have been introduced a number of times during my 10 years in Richmond, and I've always supported them.

"Elderly persons for years have expressed concerns to me that they don't want to be prolonged in a comatose situation," Pickett continued. "This bill has incorporated the safeguards it needs to be a productive and effective law. Nothing is perfect, but this provides a workable framwork."

Del. Julie L. Smith, (D), voted against the measure because, she said, "There was just enough doubt in Julie Smith's mind." Said Smith:..."I agreed with the concept of the bill, but the problem I had was with giving doctors complete immunity. That was going just a bit too far.

"I agreed with the concept of the bill, but the problem I had was with giving the doctors complete immunity. That was going a bit too far."—Delegate Julie Smith

"I think the concept is good," Smith continued. "There are times when there is absolutely no hope for some people. If they've signed the declaration they've obviously thought their decision through.

"But, I couldn't see why we had to pass this law this year," said Smith. "I didn't receive a whole lot of correspondence from my constituents, but that which I did receive was all opposed to the bill. The bill just squeaked out of the Senate, and besides, only 13 other states have passed bills like this. I'm not comfortable with that."

Sarian

Del. W.R. "Buster" O'Brien, (R), opposed the bill because of what he called "philosphical differences with the idea of it.

"I believe there is always some basis for hope that a patient might recover...I fully understand a lot of what the bill's supporters were saying. They aren't wrong. I just can't support them."—Delegate W.R. "Buster" O'Brien

"I've got a great deal of regard for the value of human life," he said. "I believe there is always some basis for hope that a patient might recover. Now, I didn't get up and fight the bill, and, in fact, I fully understand a lot of what the bill's supporters were saying. They aren't wrong. I just can't support them."

Religious groups such as the Catholic Diocese of Richmond, which oversees the Roman Catholic faith in Tidewater, lobbied against the bill. The Rev. James Ostberg, a member of Virginia Beach's Rock Church, explained why.

"God wills if there is to be life, and He has the authority over when death is to come," said Ostberg. "Who is man to presume upon God? I've read through the Bible many times, and I've never seen anything that says that people should be able to decide when they can and cannot die."

"God wills if there is to be life, and He has the authority when death is to come. Who is man to presume upon God?"—The Reverend James Ostberg, Virginia Beach Cleric

Ostberg says the General Assembly "overstepped its boundaries." Said Ostberg: "We hear all the time that there ought to be a separation of church and state, but in this case, it might have behooved the General Assembly to contact the Christian community before bringing this matter to a vote. There should be a lot more dialogue between the religious community and the political community."

"For me, I wouldn't want to be in the position of making this sort of decision," Ostberg continued. "Where does life begin and where does it end? Man has no way of knowing. This law has a tendency of making physicians act as God. My contention is that there is always a ray of hope somewhere, and doctors have a moral obligation to preserve life at all costs."

Dr. George C. Sjoulund, director of Virginia Beach's health department, called the bill "a positive step which gives people an option, and is a benefit to patients and to their families."

"This law is useful to prevent prolonged agony. To my mind, it is basically an advantage to have this on the books because...this gives them an opportunity to avoid going through life as a vegetable."—Virginia Beach Health Department Director, Dr. George C. Sjolund Sjolund said life support systems for such maladies as cardiac and heart failure are "Very expensive," and "some people survive, some people don't.

"This law is useful to prevent prolonged agony," Sjolund continued. "To my mind, it is basically an advantage to have this on the books because when patients are able to make a sound decision, this gives them the opportunity to avoid going through life as a vegatable." Sjolund added that most terminally ill patients will not elect to exercise the option of turning off life-support mechanisms.

David Sadowski, director of social rehabilitation for Beverly Enterprises, eastern division, parent corporation of 105 nursing homes in the southeast, said he has "mixed feelings" about the bill. "In my line of work, we strive to keep people alive as long as possible," he said. "In the long run though, I favor the legislation because we have to do what the person wants. Each person has to have the right to make his own decision."

William B. Keaner, administrator of Lynn Shores Manor, a subsidary of Beverly Enterprises, applauded the bill. "If I had to be on life support systems, I've already told my dodcots and my family that I don't want it," he said. "But, if it was my daughter, I'd probably never give up as long as there was the slightest bit of hope."

Keaner said most of the 242 residents at Lynn Shores would probably favor the bill. "The legislators have responded to the wishes of the majority of the state," he added. "It was a daring step, but one that was needed."

Heischober Considering Nomination

Heischober

Reports are that Virginia Beach At-large Councilman Harold Heischober will soon announce his candidacy for the Republican State Senate nomination, 7th Senatorial District. At-large Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf has also announced she will seek the nomination.

Dome Serves As Link

The Dome will serve as Virginia Beach's link with other tourist areas in Tidewater as part of a "Discover Tidewater" program promoted by Tidewater Regional Transit (TRT).

Bus service during the summer months would connect the beach to other points of interest such as Norfolk's Waterside and Portsmouth's Seawall.

An ad hoc task force recommended using the Dome as a stop-off point. City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck also has asked the TRT to assign a person to man the information booth at the Dome in connection with the program.

The Task Force includes Michael J. Barrett, A.J. DeBellis, C. Oral Lambert Jr., Robert J. Scott and Harold S. Whitehurst all city administrators.

1 Out Of 5 Assaults Reported

Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles R. Wall said the figures are much too high.

"I know we had 112 assaults last year. In a 397-man department that's quite a large percentage. If the public was assaulted, percentage-wise, as much as police officers were, I think there'd be a big outcry."
—Virginia Beach Police Chief Charles Wall

"I know we had 112 assaults (on police officers) last year," Wall said. "In a 397-man department that's quite a large percentage. If the public was assaulted, percentage-wise, as much as police officers were, I think there'd be a big outcry."

If the bill becomes law, Wall said officers will learn the details of it while they are being trained, and also during roll calls.

He said the proposed new law is "not a bad idea," but his concerns over the issue go deeper.

"What I'm concerned about is that it's not just the person; they're assaulting the system rather than the individual. If a person will assault a police officer, they wouldn't think twice about assaulting another individual.

"We represent society," Wall continued. "It's not just me, Charles Wall; it's me, Charles Wall the policeman you've put out there to protect everyone... and it's important that individuals do spend some time in jail if they do attack a police officer."

Virginia Beach Police Captain J.W. Brazier, Jr., commanding officer, training and personnel, and also an attorney, said the proposed law would be effective in detering assaults on police officers "if it's brought to the attention of the public." He added, "It's bound to have an affect."

"There's a certain segment of the population that will continue to assault police officers. There're certain types you can't legislate around."—Virginia Beach Police Captain J.W. Brazier, Jr.

But Brazier also notes that law will not stop some people from trying to abuse authority.

"There's a certain segment of the population that will continue to assault police officers," he said. "There're certain types that you can't legislate around."

Brazier said that for every attack on a cop reported, there are five that go unreported, including those from "little old ladies, hysterical kids, and drunks."

There has been a trend, recently, calling for police officers to sue their assailants for damages. It seems to be effective.

"They all win," Brazier said, "I haven't heard of any of them who haven't."

Virginia Beach Police Officer Jim Walters, who works The Strip in the Second Precinct, is glad the Assembly passed the bill.

"I think it's excellent that the General Assembly has revised the state code in order to protect the police officer in the performance of his duty," Walters said.

Lawmakers for years have argued that the rights of a police officer should not be elevated over an ordinary man. But Walters differs.

"The assault of a police officer should be dealt with more stringently than the assault of one citizen on another, because the assault of a police officer in the performance of his duty is an assault on the law and the society."—Resort Strip Police Officer Jim Walters

"The assault of a police officer should be dealt with more stringently than the assault of one citizen on another," he said. "Because the assault of a police officer in the performance of his duty is an assault on the law and the society."

State Senator Joe Canada, Virginia Beach, has tried unsuccessfully to introduce similiar legislation for years. He was attempting to do so again this year, but heard of House Bill 220, sponsored by Delegate Frank Hall, (D), Richmond, and threw his weight behind it.

"I think it's a good step in the right direction," Canada said.

Will the bill deter future assaults?

"I think it will," Canada said.

Hall said he was approached about introducing the bill by the Virginia Association of Police Chiefs.

House Bill 220 passed the Senate, 36-0, and the House, 93-4. It was one of three assault bills introduced this year. The Governor has until March 28 to sign it.

Sammy

Once there lived a cat named Sammy. Sammy always had to be first at everything. Everyday the raccoons, rabbits, squirrels, and Sammy met in the woods to play a game.

If they played soccer with an acorn, Sammy would have to kick first. If they played football with an acorn, Sammy would have to run it first. If they got a drink, Sammy would have to be first. If someone got to the fountain before Sammy, he would push them out of the way. Soon Sammy's friends were getting tired of him doing everything himself and being first all the time. They decided to teach him a lesson.

The next day Sammy went to the woods, but none of his friends was there. Sammy decided to go find out where his friends were. He went to Mr. Squirrel's house.

"Mr. Squirrel, are you home?" Sammy cried. No one answered.

Then he went to Mr. Rabbit's house. Sammy yelled, "Are you home, Mr. Rabbit?" Sammy heard nothing.

Finally Sammy went to Mr. Raccoon's house. Sammy screamed, "Mr. Raccoon, please come play with me." He saw nothing and no one answered. Sammy went home very depressed.

The next day Sammy went back to the woods. While he was walking, he decided that he wasn't going to be first for a while. When Sammy came to the woods, all his friends were there waiting for him. Sammy and his friends had such a good time that day. Everyone was very happy.

Charlie's Wish

Long ago, deep in the forest lived some squirrels. One squirrel's name was Charlie.

Charlie loved to sit in the trees and watch the birds soar high in the sky. His one wish was to fly with them.

One day Charlie had asked his mom why he couldn't fly.

"You are a squirrel," replied his mother.

"So why can't squirrels fly?" whined Charlie.

"We cannot fly because God didn't make us with wings," answered his mother.

Charlie thought a moment and then he said, "I will make my own wings."

So the next day Charlie went around collecting sticks and leaves. He first built a frame with sticks. Then he pasted the leaves on with mud. When the mud had dried, Charlie tied the wings to his back.

"Now I will climb the tallest tree," shispered Charlie to himself.

Charlie meandered through the forest. He looked at every tree. "None of these is tall enough," he thought.

Just then Charlie spotted a tall, thick, redwood tree. He climbed it as fast as he could. Finally he reached the top.

"Now my wish shall come true!" he shouted at the top of his lungs. Then Charlie took a deep breath and jumped. He glided a few feet and then one of his wings snapped.

The next thing Charlie knew he was in bed and he had two broken arms.

George

There once was a turtle named George. He was really a very nice turtle, but nobody liked him because he was so small.

At school George was left out of all the games. Once he begged the other animals to let him play soccer with them. The fox said, "Bug off, you little runt. We don't want you to play with us. Why that soccer ball is even bigger than you are. Go away!"

One day the fox and the rabbit were passing by George's house. George came out and offered each of them a piece of candy. The fox snatched his piece of candy away from George and gobbled it down. The rabbit, who was a good friend of George's took the candy politely and replied, "thanks."

After the fox had left, the rabbit asked, "Why are you so nice to the fox when he is so unkind to you?"

George replied, "I know how it feels to have your feelings hurt, so I try to be nice to everyone."

"I still don't think you should be so nice to him," said the rabbit.

The next day at school, George gave everyone in his class a cookie except for the fox. When the fox asked why he didn't get a cookie, George said, "You've never done anything nice for me, so why should I be nice to you? If you promise to be nice to me, then, I'll bring you a cookie tomorrow."

The fox promised that he wouldn't be mean to George, and after this, the fox and George were good friends. From this experience, the fox learned an important lesson.

Larry LaRossa

Citizen Of The Week

Pavilion Grounds Upkeeper

Citizen of the week this week is Larry LaRossa, a 25 year-old Virginia Beach native who is responsible for upkeeping of grounds at the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

From pruning bushes and shrubs around the convention center to mowing the grass between the facing lanes of Interstate 44, LaRossa is committed to keeping the Pavilion looking great.

"There are always a lot of important events going on and always a lot of important people here," he said. "The greatest reward of my job comes when one of those people tells me how nice the grounds look. And they tell me that all the time."

"Larry has worked very diligently for us since he first came here nearly six years ago," said Henry Ruiz, superintendent of grounds maintenance for the city of Virginia Beach. He explained that LaRossa began his city career at age 20 as a Groundskeeper One. He was promoted to Groundskeeper Three in 1980, and was given the responsibility of maintaining the city's newest showpiece, the Pavilion.

"We weren't taking a gamble with Larry," Ruiz said. "We had already had about three and a half years to gauge his reliability and loyalty. He had a strong background in horticulture, and he had a good eye for aesthetic values. He was the prime candidate for the job, and the results, I think, speak for themselves."

It's all in a day's work, according to LaRossa. "I just like being outdoors," he said. "This job almost isn't a job; it's fun."

LaRossa has attended horticulture classes at Tidewater Community College, and he plans to receive a degree in the future. "I've sort of put my education on hold for a while, but I do plan to finish it some day."

On weekends, LaRossa and his brother, Steve, 27, race dragsters at the Suffolk Speedway. "It's kind of funny," said LaRossa. "I work outdoors all week and then on weekends I work with cars. My dad sells cars all week and then on weekends he works in the yard."

LaRossa's father, Mauro, is employed as a salesman at Hall Pontiac in Virginia Beach. He and his wife, Mary, reside in Kempsville. LaRossa has another brother, Gary, who is his twin.

Voice Of The People

Should City Adopt Stricter Gun Controls? (See Story Below)

"Yeah, I think it would be a good idea. A lot of people really shouldn't have guns. Kids, for example, just don't know how to handle them, and a lot of times they accidentally shoot themselves. Also, people that have been declared mentally incompetent should not be allowed to have guns. That's sort of like handing matches to a pyromaniac."

Skip Nowell

"No, I don't think so. There are already way too many damn laws around here. Between city laws, the state laws and the federal laws, there is just too much to contend with. Besides, if somebody wants to get a gun, he can get it just by going to Hampton. New restrictions would just add hassles to our lives that we don't need."

David Cutright
Bricklayer's helper
Three-year resident.

"Yes, the city should definitely impose tougher requirements for buying handguns. There are a whole lot of people out there who are unaware of the damage a gun can really do; like children and insane people. Also, if somebody is a convicted criminal, he shouldn't be able to buy a gun."

Jeff Ferrier

Five-year resident

"I think imposing more stringent requirements is a very good idea. As for the people like the National Rifle Association who are opposed to such moves, I don't give a damn about them; they are wrong. My thought is this: our lives would be a lot better off if there were no guns in this world."

Council Actions

New Gun Proposals

More than 35 citizens apparently believe that no gun permit law is a good gun permit law.

And many more called in the Virginia Beach City Clerk's office to have their names read at a recent Council meeting as being opposed to an amendment clarifying a gun permit law that has been on the books. City Clerk Ruth Hodges Smith read the list of names before Council and asked those at the Council session to meet with Assistant to the City Manager Giles Dodd to let their wishes be known.

What the 35 or 40 persons there wanted, Dodd said, is to repeal the ordinance entirely and to put none in its place. He said that the group consisted of representatives of the National Rifle Association, business people who sell guns and individuals with their own convictions.

Council deferred consideration of the ordinance for 90 days. A city ordinance already requires that the purchase of a handgun be permitted only with a permit granted by the chief of police or his designated officer, in writing. All the amendment did was to specify conditions under which no permit will be issued. These include that no permit be issued to any person under the age of 18, any convicted felon, any person under indictment or information for a felony, any person who at the time of application is charged with a crime involving violence, any person who has been found to be not guilty of a felony on the basis of insanity, any person who is a fugitive from justice, any person who presently is an unlawful user of or addicted to marijauana, a depressant, stimulant or narcotic drug, and any person who has been committed to a mental institution.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that he received a call from a man whose wife gave him a gun. Since the ordinance prohibits giving a handgun to anyone, the wife was in violation of the ordinance. McCoy said that to get the information required from a computer may take time. In the interim the individual will go to a nearby city where the laws are less stringent.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said she had received calls from people who are concerned. She said under the law a person could not loan a pistol to someone at a firing range. She said that some individuals need to train for shooting competitions.

McCoy said that he agreed with the opposition that the verbage was not too good, but that the law has been there. He said he thinks it's unfair not to be able to give a gun or to lend a gun or to compete with other cities for the business.

Dodd said the people apparently were not aware there was any law.

ler Plymouth, joined Wall in fighting drunk drivers. "We, the car dealers, are the ones providing the public with the potential weapons and we feel a responsibility to couch that," he said.

Henschober said he has convinced around 40 other automobile dealers in the Tidewater area to dispense literature about the dangers of drinking and driving. "We can be the focal point for this effort." He said that car dealers may use billboards and posters in the campaign as well.

Lillian DeVenny, chairperson of the mayor's committee on drunk driving and vice president of the Virginia Beach Many Against Drunk Driving, applauded the efforts of the police and concerned citizens. "I'm very pleased that everyone is finally beginning to work in conjunction with each other," she said. "We've been trying for so long to get some recognition and cooperation, and now we are finally starting to get it."

DeVenny said she is optimistic that operation Project R.A.I.D. will help police in their efforts. "I'm certain that this will assist them," she said. "We have to take every approach we can to combat drunk driving. It is a very, very complex issue, and there is no one answer."

Council Discusses Executive Session

Councilman John A. Baum delayed his exit from the Council Chambers to try to convince Henley to change her mind. "I think a lot of Barbara," he said later.

After the 20-minute session, Councilman Harold Heischober moved to defer the item for one week, Baum launched a highly emotional attack on the action of Henley and Oberndorf while directing most of his comments to Oberndorf, while Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy agreed with Baum and said that a couple of members "made us look bad."

Baum termed the action of Henley and 'Oberndorf "demogoguery" and said, "I'm getting sick of it."

The item, which was under unfinished business, involved the request of R.G. Moore Building Corporation to have removed restrictions on a 35.5 acre—parcel in the Bay Lake Beach-Ocean Park area in the Bayside Borough calling for setbacks of 250 feet and 150 feet for all buildings from the property lines on the west and south sides respectively.

Grover Wright, attorney for Moore, said that the restrictions should no longer be in effect since the use permit under which they were included had been withdrawn. Area residents object to removing the restrictions because they fear an increase in density in the area. Approximately 50 area residents showed up to oppose the request. So did a court reporter, always a harbinger of a suit in court. She was employed by Wright.

Whichever way Council voted, it looked as though the city would be involved in a law suit.

After listening to both sides for more than a half hour, Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. moved for an executive session, seconded by Councilwoman Nancy Creech. The vote was 7-2 with Henley and Oberndorf dissenting. Councilman Robert G. Jones and Councilwoman Reba McClanan were absent.

It wasn't the first time Council had interrupted the business at hand to go into executive session. During the 1980 mayoral election, Council went into executive session more than once before deciding upon McCoy over Oberndorf. At that time, McClanan had voted against the executive session and remained outside.

When Council returned, Heischober said that in view of the fact that "additional information of consequence was received and heard from Wright," City Council felt it should confer with the city attorney. He said the Council would like to please everyone but that this was not possible.

He said the Council found it "absolutely necessary" to discuss legal matters with the city attorney and the rights, equities and disposition of this concern as well as the remedy for the people. He moved to defer the item for one week. Council approved unanimously.

Mayor Jones then instructed the two sides to get together to work out an amicable agreement in a manner acceptable to both parties.

Baum then unleashed his rebuke. He said it was proper to go into executive session for a legal matter. He said he had gone through trial by press once (he refered to the incident when Council members had been charged with meeting secretly in North Carolina. He said it was not proper for individual Council members to decide something immoral was going on in the back room. "Who else would consult lawyers in public?" he asked. He said Council did that once in the case of Lakeside Construction, to its regret.

Then he said, "Meyera, you've accused us of violating the freedom of information act (in the past)." He added she accused the School Board of meeting in Williamsburg. Also, in violation of the freedom of information act, and one week later expressed disappointment that no progress had been made in consolidating of services of the School Board and Council. He asked whether she actually expected some progress after the accusations.

He said the Council had a murky matter before it no matter which way it went. He pointed out that Grover Wright's clients don't consult him in public. "What is wrong with going into executive session?"

Henley replied that she was sorry Council had to be airing its dirty linens in public. She said she had asked the mayor and Council whether there was any new information had received no answer. She said this was the first time this had occurred and that her action in no way was passing judgment on the other members who attended the meeting. If Council could not make the decision, it could always defer the matter which would give the Council an interim in which to confer, she said.

McCoy said that he felt like Baum, that Council had to get with its attorney. "We see a court reporter taking every word...a couple of members made us look bad..."

Heischober said that it was too bad that two serious, well-thinking members of Council took the position they did. He said that Council does not need new evidence or information to call an executive session. Then, addressing the audience, he said, "You, the citizens, are the ones whose money is going to pay for the legal costs. All we want are the applicant and the citizens to be able to spend a little more time to (find a viable solution) instead of going into court."

Baum noted that Council discontinued recording executive sessions because of the legal problems which arose a few years ago when Council's tapes were subpoenaed. He said that the opposition to an executive session was the smartest political thing to do.

He said later that "populism is 85 percent demogoguery. It's good politics to take some popular action that has no chance of success, he said.

By trying to please a crowd, you're fooling them and fooling yourself. He admitted that "all of us want to please a crowd," but that "you can't expect to get (legal) advice publicly.

He said Council made a mess so many times by trying to be its own lawyer.

Oberndorf, who made no comment on her action at the meeting, said later that by her action she did not mean to cast aspersions on anyone else. If one needs to consult an attorney, she said, the matter can be deferred to give Council the opportunity to explore. She said she was not comfortable with setting a precedent, and that the legal aspects had been discussed at an executive session before the formal session. The Council ran that session a half hour into the formal meeting.

She said she did not believe in going along to get along because it would mean giving up her basic beliefs. She said it isn't worth it. She said she did not hear them say anything new.

Wright told Council that he needed Council to direct the staff to process Moore's site plan in accord with the zoning regulations. He said that one restriction is applicable, requiring a 75-foot buffer strip, because it was recorded in the clerk's office in May 1975.

The property was originally zoned under former Princess Anne County ordinances for duplexes and was rezoned on Aug. 7, 1972 to multi-family. At that time, a use permit also was needed for multi-family construction, and one was granted for 385 units including a high-rise structure. The 250-foot and 150-foot setback restrictions went with the use permit. However when the property was rezoned under the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance (CZO) in 1973, the property was rezoned R-9 (roughly nine units per acre) while normally property zoned multifamily was zoned A-1, Apartment District, under the new CZO, Wright said.

He said the use permit was never activated and expired on Feb. 7, 1974. The city officially rescinded the use permit on Jan. 18, 1979. Without the use permit, Wright maintained, the restrictions also are not applicable. Moore wants his new site plan to be processed.

City Planning Director Robert Scott said that about 50 units were built in the early '70's on part of the site.

Wright maintained that the restrictions do not apply any longer and the site has to be developed under the R-9 zoning classification.

Heischober said that the parcial originally contained 43 acres and that Water Oaks was built on 7½ acres along the beach front.

Tom Ackiss, of 2401 Lookout Point, Baylake Pines, said the city had installed a pumping station and sewer lines in the buffered area.

them might be acceptable. Ideally, however, the advertising on them should concern only Virginia Beach businesses and activities, and not serve as lures from other localities to draw the city's residents and tourists out of Virginia Beach.

Through the cooperative efforts of several local legislators, the 1983 General Assembly has allocated $2 million for the Virginia Museum of Marine Sciences, although the funding is conditional. That means the city will receive the funds if the state has them.

Nonetheless, the news is a significant breakthrough, financially and morally, for all those concerned parties who have braved strong winds and high surf in their efforts to see the museum become a reality. Let's just keep our fingers crossed.—G.D.G.

Larry LaRossa

Citizen Of The Week

Pavilion Grounds Upkeeper

Citizen of the week this week is Larry LaRossa, a 25 year-old Virginia Beach native who is responsible for upkeeping of grounds at the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

From pruning bushes and shrubs around the convention center to mowing the grass between the facing lanes of Interstate 44, LaRossa is committed to keeping the Pavilion looking great.

"There are always a lot of important events going on and always a lot of important people here," he said. "The greatest reward of my job comes when one of those people tells me how nice the grounds look. And they tell me that all the time."

"Larry has worked very diligently for us since he first came here nearly six years ago," said Henry Ruiz, superintendent of grounds maintenance for the city of Virginia Beach. He explained that LaRossa began his city career at age 20 as a Groundskeeper One. He was promoted to Groundskeeper Three in 1980, and was given the responsibility of maintaining the city's newest showpiece, the Pavilion.

"We weren't taking a gamble with Larry," Ruiz said. "We had already had about three and a half years to gauge his reliability and loyalty. He had a strong background in horticulture, and he had a good eye for aesthetic values. He was the prime candidate for the job, and the results, I think, speak for themselves."

It's all in a day's work, according to LaRossa. "I just like being outdoors," he said. "This job almost isn't a job; it's fun."

LaRossa has attended horticulture classes at Tidewater Community College, and he plans to receive a degree in the future. "I've sort of put my education on hold for a while, but I do plan to finish it some day."

On weekends, LaRossa and his brother, Steve, 27, race dragsters at the Suffolk Speedway. "It's kind of funny," said LaRossa. "I work outdoors all week and then on weekends I work with cars. My dad sells cars all week and then on weekends he works in the yard."

LaRossa's father, Mauro, is employed as a salesman at Hall Pontiac in Virginia Beach. He and his wife, Mary, reside in Kempsville. LaRossa has another brother, Gary, who is his twin.

Voice Of The People

Should City Adopt Stricter Gun Controls? (See Story Below)

"Yeah, I think it would be a good idea. A lot of people really shouldn't have guns. Kids, for example, just don't know how to handle them, and a lot of times they accidentally shoot themselves. Also, people that have been declared mentally incompetent should not be allowed to have guns. That's sort of like handing matches to a pyromaniac."

Skip Nowell
Student
Nine-year resident

"No, I don't think so. There are already way too many damn laws around here. Between city laws, the state laws and the, federal laws, there is just too much to contend with. Besides, if somebody wants to get a gun, he can get it just by going to Hampton. New restrictions would just add hassles to our lives that we don't need."

David Cutright
Bricklayer's helper
Three-year resident.

"Yes, the city should definitely impose tougher requirements for buying handguns. There are a whole lot of people out there who are unaware of the damage a gun can really do; like children and insane people. Also, if somebody is a convicted criminal, he shouldn't be able to buy a gun."

Jeff Ferrier
Student
Five-year resident

"I think imposing more stringent requirements is a very good idea. As for the people like the National Rifle Association who are opposed to such moves, I don't give a damn about them; they are wrong. My thought is this: our lives would be a lot better off if there were no guns in this world."

Council Actions

New Gun Proposals

More than 35 citizens apparently believe that no gun permit law is a good gun permit law.

And many more called in the Virginia Beach City Clerk's office to have their names read at a recent Council meeting as being opposed to an amendment clarifying a gun permit law that has been on the books. City Clerk Ruth Hodges Smith read the list of names before Council and asked those at the Council session to meet with Assistant to the City Manager Giles Dodd to let their wishes be known.

What the 35 or 40 persons there wanted, Dodd said, is to repeal the ordinance entirely and to put none in its place. He said that the group consisted of representatives of the National Rifle Association, business people who sell guns and individuals with their own convictions.

Council deferred consideration of the ordinance for 90 days. A city ordinance already requires that the purchase of a handgun be permitted only with a permit granted by the chief of police or his designated officer, in writing. All the amendment did was to specify conditions under which no permit will be issued. These include that no permit be issued to any person under the age of 18, any convicted felon, any person under indictment or information for a felony, any person who at the time of application is charged with a crime involving violence, any person who has been found to be not guilty of a felony on the basis of insanity, any person who is a fugitive from justice, any person who presently is an unlawful user of or addicted to marijauana, a depressant, stimulant or narcotic drug, and any person who has been committed to a mental institution.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that he received a call from a man whose wife gave him a gun. Since the ordinance prohibits giving a handgun to anyone, the wife was in violation of the ordinance. McCoy said that to get the information required from a computer may take time. In the interim the individual will go to a nearby city where the laws are less stringent.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said she had received calls from people who are concerned. She said under the law a person could not loan a pistol to someone at a firing range. She said that some individuals need to train for shooting competitions.

McCoy said that he agreed with the opposition that the verbage was not too good, but that the law has been there. He said he thinks it's unfair not to be able to give a gun or to lend a gun or to compete with other cities for the business.

Dodd said the people apparently were not aware there was any law.

ler Plymouth, joined Wall in fighting drunk drivers. "We, the car dealers, are the ones providing the public with the potential weapons and we feel a responsibility to couch that," he said.

Heischober said he has convinced around 40 other automobile dealers in the Tidewater area to dispense literature about the dangers of drinking and driving. "We can be the focal point for this effort." He said that car dealers may use billboards and posters in the campaign as well.

Lillian DeVenny, chairperson of the mayor's committee on drunk driving and vice president of the Virginia Beach Many Against Drunk Driving, applauded the efforts of the police and concerned citizens. "I'm very pleased that everyone is finally beginning to work in conjunction with each other," she said. "We've been trying for so long to get some recognition and cooperation, and now we are finally starting to get it."

DeVenny said she is optimistic that operation Project R.A.I.D. will help police in their efforts. "I'm certain that this will assist them," she said. "We have to take every approach we can to combat drunk driving. It is a very, very complex issue, and there is no one answer."

Council Discusses Executive Session

Councilman John A. Baum delayed his exit from the Council Chambers to try to convince Henley to change her mind. "I think a lot of Barbara," he said later.

After the 20-minute session, Councilman Harold Heischober moved to defer the item for one week, Baum launched a highly emotional attack on the action of Henley and Oberndorf while directing most of his comments to Oberndorf, while Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy agreed with Baum and said that a couple of members "made us look bad."

Baum termed the action of Henley and Oberndorf "demogoguery" and said, "I'm getting sick of it."

The item, which was under unfinished business, involved the request of R.G. Moore Building Corporation to have removed restrictions on a 35.5 acre—parcel in the Bay Lake Beach-Ocean Park area in the Bayside Borough calling for setbacks of 250 feet and 150 feet for all buildings from the property lines on the west and south sides respectively.

Grover Wright, attorney for Moore, said that the restrictions should no longer be in effect since the use permit under which they were included had been withdrawn. Area residents object to removing the restrictions because they fear an increase in density in the area. Approximately 50 area residents showed up to oppose the request, So did a court reporter, always a harbinger of a suit in court. She was employed by Wright.

Whichever way Council voted, it looked as though the city would be involved in a law suit.

After listening to both sides for more than a half hour, Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. moved for an executive session, seconded by Councilwoman Nancy Creech. The vote was 7-2 with Henley and Oberndorf dissenting. Councilman Robert G. Jones and Councilwoman Reba McClanan were absent.

It wasn't the first time Council had interrupted the business at hand to go into executive session. During the 1980 mayoral election, Council went into executive session more than once before deciding upon McCoy over Oberndorf. At that time, McClanan had voted against the executive session and remained outside.

When Council returned, Heischober said that in view of the fact that "additional information of consequence was received and heard from Wright," City Council felt it should confer with the city attorney. He said the Council would like to please everyone but that this was not possible.

He said the Council found it "absolutely necessary" to discuss legal matters with the city attorney and the rights, equities and disposition of this concern as well as the remedy for the people. He moved to defer the item for one week. Council approved unanimously.

Mayor Jones then instructed the two sides to get together to work out an amicable agreement in a manner acceptable to both parties.

Baum then unleashed his rebuke. He said it was proper to go into executive session for a legal matter. He said he had gone through trial by press once (he refered to the incident when Council members had been charged with meeting secretly in North Carolina. He said it was not proper for individual Council members to decide something immoral was going on in the back room. "Who else would consult lawyers in public?" he asked. He said Council did that once in the case of Lakeside Construction, to its regret.

Then he said, "Meyera, you've accused us of violating the freedom of information act (in the past)." He added she accused the School Board of meeting in Williamsburg. Also, in violation of the freedom of information act, and one week later expressed disappointment that no progress had been made in consolidating of services of the School Board and Council. He asked whether she actually expected some progress after the accusations.

He said the Council had a murky matter before it no matter which way it went. He pointed out that Grover Wright's clients don't consult him in public. "What is wrong with going into executive session?"

Henley replied that she was sorry Council had to be airing its dirty linens in public. She said she had asked the mayor and Council whether there was any new information had received no answer. She said this was the first time this had occurred and that her action in no way was passing judgment on the other members who attended the meeting. If Council could not make the decision, it could always defer the matter which would give the Council an interim in which to confer, she said.

McCoy said that he felt like Baum, that Council had to get with its attorney. "We see a court reporter taking every word...a couple of members made us look bad..."

Heischober said that it was too bad that two serious, well-thinking members of Council took the position they did. He said that Council does not need new evidence or information to call an executive session. Then, addressing the audience, he said, "You, the citizens, are the ones whose money is going to pay for the legal costs. All we want are the applicant and the citizens to be able to spend a little more time to (find a viable solution) instead of going into court."

Baum noted that Council discontinued recording executive sessions because of the legal problems which arose a few years ago when Council's tapes were subpoenaed. He said that the opposition to an executive session was the smartest political thing to do.

He said later that "populism is 85 percent demogoguery. It's good politics to take some popular action that has no chance of success, he said.

By trying to please a crowd, you're fooling them and fooling yourself. He admitted that "all of us want to please a crowd," but that "you can't expect to get (legal) advice publicly.

He said Council made a mess so many times by trying to be its own lawyer.

Oberndorf, who made no comment on her action at the meeting, said later that by her action she did not mean to cast aspersions on anyone else. If one needs to consult an attorney, she said, the matter can be deferred to give Council the opportunity to explore. She said she was not comfortable with setting a precedent, and that the legal aspects had been discussed at an executive session before the formal session. The Council ran that session a half hour into the formal meeting.

She said she did not believe in going along to get along because it would mean giving up her basic beliefs. She said it isn't worth it. She said she did not hear them say anything new.

Wright told Council that he needed Council to direct the staff to process Moore's site plan in accord with the zoning regulations. He said that one restriction is applicable, requiring a 75-foot buffer strip, because it was recorded in the clerk's office in May 1975.

The property was originally zoned under former Princess Anne County ordinances for duplexes and was rezoned on Aug. 7, 1972 to multi-family. At that time, a use permit also was needed for multi-famlly construction, and one was granted for 385 units including a high-rise structure. The 250-foot and 150-foot setback restrictions went with the use permit. However when the property was rezoned under the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance (CZO) in 1973, the property was rezoned R-9 (roughly nine units per acre) while normally property zoned multifamily was zoned A-1, Apartment District, under the new CZO, Wright said.

He said the use permit was never activated and expired on Feb. 7, 1974. The city officially rescinded the use permit on Jan. 18, 1979. Without the use permit, Wright maintained, the restrictions also are not applicable. Moore wants his new site plan to be processed.

City Planning Director Robert Scott said that about 50 units were built in the early '70's on part of the site.

Wright maintained that the restrictions do not apply any longer and the site has to be developed under the R-9 zoning classification.

Heischober said that the parcial originally contained 43 acres and that Water Oaks was built on 7½ acres along the beach front.

Tom Ackiss, of 2401 Lookout Point, Baylake Pines, said the city had installed a pumping station and sewer lines in the buffered area.

Scott said he did not think the property was downzoned as claimed by Wright. He said the R-9

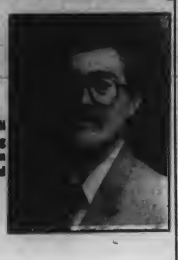
The Builders Block



By Doug Hickman
Real Estate Editor

The Builders Block will be a feature highlighting new construction in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake.

A Timely Development——

With the F & M Building due to open soon, the groundbreaking for Loehmann's Plaza, and the proposed library site near by, many are viewing the centrally located Pembroke area as the hub of Virginia Beach.

But just minutes from there in suburban Larkspur is a development whose time has come. Custom townhouses born of the urban tradition and set in an atmosphere of tranquility. These are antiqued brick units with bay windows, large inviting foyers with curving staircases, extensive crown molding, shadow boxing, chair railing, generous use of wallpaper and bright sunny rooms.

There are four models, each with two bedrooms, two and one half baths, and a fireplace (a third bedroom is optional). The construction is all brick with maintenance free vinyl shutters, double hung windows and well insulated walls, ceilings and floors. The units are built on crawl space, have storage sheds, and are protected by the ten year HOW warranty.

"Efficiency is a concern of today's buyer which we share, so we used energy efficient appliances and heat pumps," said Ray Roenker, one of three principals who make up Dimensions Inc.

Roenker is the marketing arm and places buyer financing, Walter Monahan is the developer and arranges construction financing, and Jack Clifton is the construction superintendent.

Dimensions and Tidewater Development Corp., (a subsidiary of Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association) are the builders of Olde Towne. Dimensions has a proven track record in Chesapeake Beach, Haygood Point, Fairfield Forrest, and Le Cove.

The experience gained at these earlier developments is quite evident at Olde Towne in the quality of construction and attention paid to detail. One only needs to walk through to appreciate these differences, which obviously many have done. In less than 3 weeks, 19 of the proposed 58 units have been sold. "Our goal is to give our customers what they want, not whatever we can build for the cheapest dollar that week," said Ray Roenker. With this attitude, Dimensions Inc. can only continue to prosper.

Ann R. Palmateer Receives Award For Excellence

Ann R. Palmateer, managing broker of Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corporation's Chesapeake office, has been awarded the company's Award for Excellence.

A Managing Broker since 1980, Palmateer received the Award for her outstanding management performance during 1982.

Palmateer is a Director of the Tidewater Board of Realtors and Vice Chairperson of the Education Committee of the Virginia Association of Realtors, region 6.

Sell Or Keep?

By Roger Pyle

If you own an income property purchased prior to 1981, now is the time to sell. Why?

1. Because the new tax laws enacted in 1981 allow far better depreciation for property purchased after December 1980. It would behoove an owner to sell his pre '81 property and buy another now and take advantage of the increased tax break. The result is a better return on the invested dollar which is the whole reason for investing.
2. Spring, historically, is the best time of year to sell. More buyers are looking to buy, the property shows better, and you will have a better chance of finding a property yourself. It has been my experience that the highest prices are paid in the spring and summer months.
3. There is talk of Concress lessing the aggressive depreciation they allowed after 1980 so if you sell and buy another property now, you will take advantage of the grandfather effect because it is unlikely that any new reduction in depreciation benefits will be retroactive.
4. Many owners keep a property too long. They don't take the time to evaluate their position which should be done yearly. They get complacent in the comfortable security that their property is operating well and don't realize that the return on equity is probably stagnating. All too often, emotions seem to govern the dicision to sell rather than a rational financial decision based on an evaluation of where they now stand (present position), where they want to be (goals), when (the future) and what steps they have to take to get there (the decision point).

Usually, the most successful real estate investors are those who do not fall in love with their property. They are the people who recognize that to move ahead, you must generate activity, sell every 2 to 5 years and move up the ladder.

Citizens Trust Names Barker Campbell & Farley

Barker Campbell & Farley has been named to represent Citizens Trust, a $100 million asset bank based in Portsmouth, Virginia. Citizens Trust has 13 offices throughout the Tidewater area. Barker Campbell & Farley is a three year old, $6 million agency headquartered in Virginia Beach, Virginia. Executive vice president Palmer Farley of Barker Campbell & Farley and vice president Peyton Bowden, representing Citizens Trust, made the announcement.

Housing Affordability Index

The National Association of Realtors is issuing its first monthly Housing Affordability Index today. The index is designed to show the relationship between median family income and the income needed to qualify for the purchase of an existing single-family home.

For example, a Housing Affordability Index of 83 would mean that a family earning the median income is making 83 percent of what is needed to qualify for the purchase of a median-priced existing home with prevailing mortgage terms.

Conversely, an Affordability Index of 154 would mean that a family earning the median income has more than enough income to qualify for the purchase of a median-priced home. An Affordability Index of 100 would mean that the median family oncome in the nation is just enough to qualify for the median-priced existing home.

In conjunction with the Affordability Index, the National Association of Realtors provides monthly data on the median sales price of an existing home, the average mortgage rate on loans closed, the average monthly payment, median family income, the percentage of income requried for mortgage payments and the income necessary to qualify for the median-priced home.

The qualifying oncome is based on the prevailing mortgage loan requirements of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. and the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The monthly Affordability Index release will include current as well as historical data.

Realtors Issue First Housing Index

Lower mortgage interest rates, relatively stable home prices and rising family income combined to make housing more affordable in January, according to the National Association of Realtors.

In the first monthly report of its newest statistical series, the Housing Affordability Index, the Association study showed that the January index was 78.9 percent -- a 1.1 percentage point improvement from December's index.

"The January index means that a family earning $23,917, the median U.S. income, had 78.9 percent of the income necessary to qualify for the purchase of a median-priced home, which was $68,300 in January," explained Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the Association.

Historical data indicated that the last time the Housing Affordability Index was 100 -- meaning the median family income was exactly what was needed to qualify for the median-priced home -- was in February 1979. The index has been below 100 ever since.

"While the affordability picture is still less than bright, January represents the eighth consecutive month of improvement from the low of 64.2 recorded in May 1982," Carlson said.

The improved affordability picture was reflected in the record monthly increase in existing-home sales reported by the Association last week, Carlson noted. On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, home resales in January rose to 2.61 million units from 2.26 million in December. The percentage increase was the biggest in the 16 years the Association has been compiling the monthly sales data.

"Clearly, steadily falling mortgage interest rates have played the largest role in improving housing affordability over the last eight months," the economist noted.

The average interest rate on institutional mortgages closed in January fell again to 13.64 percent -- down from 13.98 percent in December and significantly lower than the 16.11 percent rate reported eight months earlier.

However, rising income and relatively flat home prices also contributed to improving affordability, Carlson noted.

The annual income necessary to qualify for a median-priced home in January was $30,330 -- down $340 from December and $4,912 less than the necessary qualifying income last May.

The percentage of median family income necessary to make mortgage payments on a median-priced home fell in January to 31.7 percent -- the lowest level since October 1980.

Despite the gap between median family income and qualifying income for the median-priced home, housing sales, of course, have increased in recent months, Carlson noted.

"There are some obvious reasons: for example, half the families in the country make more than the median income and many homes are priced at less than the median," he said. "Also, such devices as seller financing are enabling many home-buyers to obtain more affordable mortgage rates than those offered by lending institutions, which are the rates used in calculating the Housing Affordability Index."

However, Carlson noted, if institutional mortgage rates are to decline to levels that will permit a sustained and steadily strengthening housing recovery, it is essential that Congress and the administration solve the federal deficit crisis.

"As long as the threat of government borrowing requirements in the $200 billion range hangs over the private capital markets, interest rates will be prevented from falling to the historic 3½ percentage points above the inflation rate.

"Based on the experience of the past 30 years, mortgage interest rates should be 8½ percent," he said. "And if that were the case, the Housing Affordability Index right now would be $118.6."

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents more than 600,000 individuals involved in all phases of the real estate industry.

Multifamily Housing

Government Should Encourage Private Sector Investment

The Government should play an active role in stimulating private sector investment in multifamily housing that does not qualify for low and modest income subsidies, according to Alan V. Davies, CPM, 1983 president of the Institute of Real Estate Management.

Davies, who heads J. Clarence Davies Realty Co., Inc., New York, New York, states "the current economic situation in this country has created a crisis concerning the affordability of housing -- both single family homes, and, more importantly, in multifamily residences.

•Ten or fifteen years ago, many apartment projects were financed at interest rates of 7% to 8%, using balloon mortgages which are now coming due. These developments were predicated on the presumption that refinancing would be possible at reasonable rates of interest and that cash flows would be increased significantly."

"But at current interest rates," Davies emphasizes, "it is virtually impossible to renegotiate these mortgages and make these projects work -- despite the recent downward trend in interest rates. Although precise figures are not available on the dollar amount of these outstanding loands, the National Association of Home Builders recently estimated the figure at between $15 and 30 billion, or 10% to 20% of all multifamily units in the country."

According to Davies, "As renters continue to pay a higher percentage of their income for housing multifamily construction must be financed with long-term fixed-rate mortgages in order for these projects to be viable. The current problem, however, is that fixed rated mortgages are available only from the nonprivate sector and rarely to housing that was privately financed."

Although Davies does not suggest that the Government take over the job of private financing sources, he believes that Government stimulation of the private sector to invest in multifamily housing is crucial. He concurs with the recommendations of a study conducted by the Institute of Real Estate Management in cooperation with the National Association of Realtors. The recommendations directed to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the President's Commission of Housing include:

•Reduce and stabilize mortgage interest rates

•Increase and stabilize availability of mortgage funds.

•Establish tax incentives for mortgage investors.

•Reinstate interest and tax deductions incurred during the construction period in that some period.

•Encourage the active participation of secondary mortgage market agencies in the mortgbage market.

•Eliminate rent controls and prevent the threat thereof.

Fourth Major Acquistion

Goodman Segar Hogan Acquires Riley & Assoc., Inc.

Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corporation recently announced its acquisition of Riley and Associates Realtors, effective April 1, 1983 according to a joint announcement by Goodman Segar Hogan Executive Vice President, Jack Pope and Riley President, Cathy Riley.

Riley is the fourth real estate firm Goodman Segar Hogan has acquired. The John Wright Realty Co. in Virginia Beach was acquired in 1980. In 1982, the real estate firm Century-21 Commonwealth in Newport News joined the GSH organization and Goodman Segar Hogan also acquired the residential business of Pembroke Realty, Inc.

The recent acquisition of Riley, a 30 associate company, is yet another step in Goodman Segar Hogan's expansion plan for the future.

"The real estate industry is growing and changing. It's a much more complex business than it was 10 years ago," said Pope.

"Because today's buyers and sellers require more, a real estate company has to be ready to fulfill those needs. This takes strong organization and good, committed people, like the Riley Associates."

Recent measures were taken by Goodman Segar Hogan to insure a strong organization. Several of its top management team and senior managing brokers were promoted to the positions of vice presidents.

In addition, the company began 1983 with the opening of a Settlement Services Department. Nationally many large real estate firms have opened Settlement Departments as a means of totally servicing a real estate transaction -- saving buyers and sellers time and money. Goodman Segar Hogan is the first real estate firm in Southeastern Virginia to offer this service to its customers and clients.

Executive Session

zoning classification was selected because it most closely approximated a density of 350 for the property.

Jack H. Stewart, an engineer who lives in the area, asked why the residents would agree to have zoning changed from duplex to a higher density unless they got something in return. He said that what they got was protection from the higher density by means of setbacks and buffers.

The setbacks, he said were not tied in with the highrise development but as protection from the density. He said the people felt at the time that they had made a contract with the developer. Moore did not own the property at the time.

James W. Hayes, of Baylake Road, said the community negotiated with the developer for many months.

Charles Thompson. of Shady Oaks Drive. in representing the Ocean Park Civic League, said that his league voted with Baylake Pines. He said the conditions were put in because of the higher density zoning. He said that ten of the acres in question front the existing Water Oaks residents. He said that the 50 homeowners there had obtained an agreement in 1979 with the landowner of the undeveloped parcel that nothing would be built on the ten acres on the bay for 50 years. He said the intent of the agreement was to retain access to the beach for the people who bought property with a waterfront view.

Heischober noted that with ten acres of the 35.5 acres involved facing the beach, only 25.5 acres were located behind the existing units.

Residents say that since the ten acres is on the primary dunes, the owner would not be permitted to build there. Their concern was that the land would be figured in with the remaining acreage allowing more units on the remaining parcel.

New Road

Design Plans Approved For Great Neck Project

Design plans for the improvement of Great Neck Road in the City of Virginia Beach have been approved by the State Highway and Transportation Commission.

The project, 2.2 miles long, would extend from Shorehaven Drive along the existing roadway to the intersection with Thomas Bishop Lane. From that point, the new road would curve easterly from the existing road and be constructed on new location parallel to, and east of, Great Neck Road to the northern end of the project at its intersection with Shore Drive (US 60).

The roadway from Shorehaven Drive to the bridges over Long Creek and Long Creek Canal would have four lanes, two for each direction of travel, separated by a 40-foot-wide raised median. The median would provide space for two additional lanes if needed later.

Also, left-turn lanes would be built at the intersecting streets, and curb and gutter would be installed on both sides.

Twin bridges will carry two lanes each over Long Creek and Long Creek Canal. The structures will be about 1,200 feet long and have 36 feet of vertical clearance over both channels. The bridge design will permit future, if needed, widening for an additional lane.

A five-foot-wide sidewalk would be constructed on the west side of the roadway and the western bridge, with a combination sidewalk-bikeway on the east side.

At the intersection of the improved Great Neck Road with Shore Drive, about 600 feet of the new roadway and 1,200 feet of Shore Drive would be built for six lanes of travel, three in each direction, plus turn lanes, to accommodate the large volume of turning traffic.

During the public hearing, a number of speakers suggested several modifications of the plans. Engineers of the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation recommended the following modifications, which were approved by the commission: bridge design to incorporate the lowest feasible structure elevation to maintain a minimum of 36 feet of vertical clearance over Long Creek and Long Creek Canal.

•Additional connection between existing Great Neck Road and the new roadway in the general area of an extension to Lynnhaven Drive.

•Location of a suitable area other than woodlands for the mitigation of wetlands.

The City Council of Virginia Beach adopted a resolution endorsing the project at its February meeting.

The project has an estimated cost of $16.5 million. The cost will be shared with 75 per cent in federal funds, 20 per cent state funds, and 5 per cent city funds. Construction is scheduled for the first part of 1984.

On Curriculum Assessment

Brickell Addresses Jersey Group

Virginia Beach Public Schools Superintendent Dr. E.E. Brickell recently spoke to a forum session of the American Association of School Administrators convention in Atlantic City, New Jersey. His topic, "Schools for the Future," dealt with the Curriculum Assessment and Development project that has been underway in Virginia Beach for nearly two years.

Although the session was scheduled on the final day of the four-day convention and at the same time as a number of other sessions, between 225 and 250 superintendents and other top school administrators from around the country attended. More than half of those who attended asked for more information on the project following Brickell's presentation. A superintendent from a large midwestern school system asked that he be allowed to visit Virginia Beach schools to view the project firsthand.

Brickell said, "I continue to be amazed at the number of people from all over the country who want to know something more about our project. I'm not sure how they know about it, but I am glad they do."

The session where Brickell spoke was moderated by Charles S. Terrell, Jr., superintendent, San Bernardino County Schools, California. Also on the program was Kenneth W. Olsen, superintendent, Wheaton, Illinois, Public Schools.

Brickell and members of the Curriculum Assessment and Development Team have made presentations on the project to a number of regional and national educational organizations in recent months; several other presentations are scheduled into this summer.

The final report of the Curriculum Assessment and Development task force, containing the recommendations for the future curriculum in Virginia Beach schools, will be delivered to Brickell on March 10; Brickell will present recommendations to the School Board in April.

Seniors Presented DAR Awards

The Adam Thoroughgood Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, recently presented Good Citizen Awards of 1982-83 to three outstanding Virginia Beach High School seniors.

The awards, (a Good Citizens Certificate and a Good Citizens pin) were presented to the students by Mrs. Milton Thorpe, Regent of the Adam Thoroughgood Chapter.

The Good Citizens award has been presented by the various DAR chapters in all 50 states since 1934. The award stresses the qualities of Good Citizens of the U.S.A. The Good Citizens are then judged on a district, state, divisional, and national level. The winner of state receives a $100.00 educational award; division receives $250.; national receives, 3rd place, $500., 2nd place, $750., and 1st place receives $1000. Remodeling The Kitchen

Kitchens remain one of the most popular remodeling projects in the home improvement field. An estimated 2.3 million kitchens are expected to be remodeled or installed in 1983, according to the National Kitchen Cabinet Association. Perhaps yours is one.

In terms of spending, more than $5 billion will go towards kitchen remodeling this year alone.

There are a number of reasons why kitchen remodeling remains so popular.

First, the average homeowner tends to remodel his kitchen every 15 years. As the number of existing homes grows older, more and more kitchens become prime candidates for modernization. Add to this the economic conditions of the last couple years-high interest rates, inflationand interest rates, Inflation and tight mortgage monies- and its easy to see why more and more homeowners are improving rather than moving.

Remodeling Popular

Changing lifestyles and new trends have also contributed greatly to the popularity of remodeling. Today's working couple, for example, may want a kitchen with enough work space for two, plus the latest in energy-efficient, time-saving appliances. The single homeowner, on the other hand, may want the same time-saving appliances, but a kitchen that is compact, organized and easy to maintain as well. For households with a growing family, incorporating the kitchen into a "great room" may be the ideal. Great rooms are like having a living room, kitchen and dining all in one.

Think Storage

Regardless of what course your remodeling plans take, one thing is essential -- provide adequate storage. If new cabinets are in order, consider units that feature built-in organizers. Such features as lazy susans, adjustable and pull out shelves, partitioned lid and cutlery drawers and vegetable bins will not only provide a place for everything, but make it easier to keep everything in place.

Since the kitchen is one of the busiest rooms in the house, remember to select cabinets that are not only attractive, but durable. To be sure the cabinets you select will be able to withstand hard daily use, overloaded shelves and drawers, hard pulls on the doors of wall hung cabinets and resist staining from a variety of spills, look for the certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association.

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

January 17, 1980.

Today, as you may recall, is Benjamin Franklin's birthday; and when such a figure's birthday comes along, I often indulge in a common exercise—that of wondering what he might have to say about the current state of affairs.

I ran across a quote immediately that seemed to be perfectly tailored to the news, that our ally Japan, which owes much of its success as an economic power to us, finds it cannot go along with sanctions against Iran or economic pressure on the Soviet Union.

Franklin's words: those who would give up a little liberty, for safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety.

January 14, 1980.

The news from Iran is likely to be second or third hand and even more confusing in coming days.

The revolutionary council which heads up the chaos in Iran has decreed that all American reporters must leave.

They're biased—the American reporters—and so Iran is kicking them out.

It seems they failed to notice the difference in the system employed by the Shah and the new system put into effect by the Ayatollah and his mob.

You see, under the Shah, one group ruled the other group by repression and murder; under the Ayatollah, it's just the other way around.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

The Art Of Scribbling

The scribblers.

They just can't help themselves, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.

They've just got to close their fists around those fat black crayons--and scribble. Around and around they go, in huge arcs, angular zig-zigs, blurs, and blobs. Unfortunately, scribblers like to use walls for their canvases.

(If you provide an alternative for a scribbler, like a large chalkboard and colored chalk, an easel with newspaper and paint, or lots of plain paper (the back of computer printouts or shelf paper in rolls make marvellous drawing pads) you'll have fewer pictures on your walls.)

Scribbling may look like nonsense to adults but there is some sense in it for a three-year-old.

When children learn to stop their arm movements in time, those big circles become faces. Tight round scribbles makes eyes, looser ones make curly hair.

Sweeping lines stop short for arms, fingers, mouths, spiky hair. Pointing with the point of the crayon, when it becomes less violent, makes pretty dots of snow and gentle raindrops. Scribbling is necessary preparation for drawing--and writing, too.

But it's hard to know what to say to a youngster when you're presented with a work of art. "That's very nice" sounds as phony as it is. "What is it?" is embarrasing since the child probably doesn't know either.

"I really like purple scribbles" is probably the most honest, appreciative, and gracious thing you can say!

For more information about the physical and social development of children up to the age of six, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, IN 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter costs $11.95.

Excessive Exercise

Is too much of a good thing "bad"? Maybe.

Researchers at the University of California/San Francisco School of Medicine note that slender women who exercise heavily might be more prone to "brittle bone" syndrome—known medically as osteoporosis.

A tough multi-mile running schedule or other sustained aerobic exercise can lead to an early loss of bone mass.

The key consideration, according to Christopher E. Cann, Phd, of USCF's Department of Radiology, is premature cessation of menstruation (amenorrhea), which can be caused by ultra-heavy exercise.

Medical World News magazine recently reported Cann's findings of a study of 25 amenorrheic patients in which he examined the relationship of bone loss.

"What's new from this particular study," Cann told Medical World News, "is that women with amenorrhea due to exercise are at risk of bone loss." Two women with stress fractures were referred to his group by the orthopedic department, and both turned out to be runners.

Cann notes that amenorrheic women with little fat, such as the athletes in his study, are known to lack normal concentrations of estrone, the female sex harmone. Loss of estrogen production at menopause is accepted as a critical factor in the development of osteoporosis in older women.

UCSF researchers have no formal data on runners and other athletes who continue menstruating, but Cann sees no serious problem with this group.

Due to factors others than lost estrogen production, osteoporosis continues as a problem for many American women. Long-term calcium deficiency, too, is cited by experts as a major case of the disease.

An emphasis on dieting.

An emphasis on dieting, which usually mean high-calcium, high-calorie foods are shunned, could contribute to osteoporosis, say many medical experts. And while estrogen replacement therapy is sometimes recommended in serious cases of osteoporosis, increased calcium intake through the use of calcium supplements is often recommended.

The Hint Man

Dandruff Remover, Making Your Own - Dissolve a dozen aspirin tablets (any brand) in one-half cup of warm water. Apply to scalp and gently massage for fifteen minutes. Rinse out thoroughly in lukewarm water.

Decals, Removing - Soak a cloth in warm white vinegar and place it on the decal. Repeat two or three times, and then scrape off the soaked decal with the back of a knife.

Dents In Wood, Removing - If dents are not too deep, the best thing is to place a cloth (cotton is best) soaked in warm white vinegar directly over the dent. Leave it there for one hour, keeping the cloth wet with more warm vinegar as it dries out. Then, after an hour, press the moist cloth with a fairly warm iron for about three to five minutes. The dent should disappear. Note: Repeat if necessary.

Deodorant Stains, Removing - Soak the affected area in warm white vinegar for twenty minutes. From time to time, work the material between the fingers in the vinegar. Now, wash in the normal way. If the stain remains, soak in denatured alcohol or sponge it with a cotton ball for ten minutes. Wash in warm, sudsy water.

Diamond Rings, Cleaning - Soak them for twenty minutes in white vinegar, then rinse and polish.

The Chopping Block

Since this is 'The year of the Pig' as celebrated by our Chinese friends, the following recipe sounds really delicious:

Since it feeds a family of 4 or 5, it also sounds very economical to me.

Hope you celebrate 'The Year of the Pig' by giving this recipe a try.

'Pig out' and enjoy!

Pork Chops Cantonese

4 to 6 pork chops (about 1-½ pounds)	1 tablespoon cornstarch
Salt and ground black pepper	½ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ cup vegetable oil	3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 cup chopped onions	1 cup sliced celery
1 can (20 ounces) pineapple chunks (drain; reserve syrup)	1 cup thinly sliced carrots
¼ cup dry sherry	2 to 3 cups hot cooked rice

Season pork chops with salt and pepper. Heat oil in large skillet. Add chops and brown on each side. Remove all but 2 teaspoons fat. Add onions and saute lightly. Stir in pineapple syrup and water to make 1¼ cups. Add sherry. Cover and simmer 30 minutes or until chops are tender. Blend cornstarch, ginger, and soy sauce. Stir into meat mixture. Cook about 1 minute or until slightly thickened. Add celery, carrots, and pineapple chunks. Cover and cook until vegetables are tender crisp, about 10 minutes. Serve with beds of fluffy rice. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Everywhere you look, there's someone advertising that they have the best this or that. From the best original "hotdog" to "the best of the west veal parmesan".

But I must say, that when Evelyn Foxe, a contributing factor to Portsmouth's economy whom lives in Chesapeake, asked me over to try her Orange & Lemon Pudding, I was so impressed.

Through Long Island, N.Y., by way of the Black Bass Restaurant, Evelyn has held ground to her family recipe, since she first set out as a prospective entrepernuer in her field. She says, "this is one of my family favorites". And I can now see why this is true today, even with me.

Orange & Lemon Pudding
Evelyn Foxe-Chesapeake, Va.

Sugar	1½ cups
Butter	4 tbsp.
Four	2 tbsp.
Juice of 6 Lemons	2 cups
Rind and juice of 2 Oranges
Eggs, separate	6 ea.
Cream	2 cups

Cream together butter, sugar and flour. Add lemon juice and orange juice and rind. Beat egg yolks and fold into mixture along with cream. Place into individual baking dishes. Put them into a shallow water bath pan and bake 35 minutes - 350°. Serve cold with or without whipped topping.

Flaming Western Style Omlette

Eggs	3 ea.
Onions, diced	2 tbsp.
Peppers, diced	2 tbsp.
Ham, diced	2 tbsp.
Butter	2 tbsp.

Brandy	1 tbsp.

Beat eggs in bowl and save shell on side. Saute onions, peppers, and ham in butter over medium heat for three minutes. Set aside and drain. Heat a small frying pan over medium heat with a little bacon drippings (3 tbsp.) Just before pan starts to smoke, pour eggs into pan and spread evenly. Pour cooked vegetable & ham mixture down middle of omlette. Reduce flame down to very low. Fold all edges of omlette over mixture of vegetables and ham overlapping center. Season with salt and pepper, then flip over. Press gently with a spatula, if yu desire a well done omlette. Season this side also. Just before removing from pan, lay two slices of swiss cheese on top. Place a ¼ part of an egg shell on middle of cheese, with cup side up. Remove omlette from pan and pour brandy into shell. Light and serve immediately. This is great for late nights and candle lights.

Baked Crab & Spinach Casserole

Butter	6 ounces
Flour	4 tbsp.

Old Bay Seasoning	1 tbsp.
Sherry	1½ tbsp.
Crabmeat	1½
Chopped Drained Spinach .2(10 ox. frozen boxes)	ea.
Breadcrumbs	1 cup
Sourcream	½ cup

Add remaining ingredients and mix well; add sherry last. Pour into buttered baking dish and bake 25 to 35 minutes at 325°. Serves 6 to 8 people.

Praline Cheesecake Noble Prize

Graham Cracker Crumbs	1 cup
Sugar	3 tbsp.
Margarine	3 tbsp. (melted)

Combine all three ingredients and mix well. Press into a 9" to 10" pan. Bake 350° for 8 to 10 minutes.

Cream Cheese	1½ lb.

Also use a knife to loosen sides of cake from pan before cooling.

Next week we'll discuss a good recipe for veal cutlet and someone else will share that very special, "it's my favorite", dish. Please, with all recipes sent to The Uprooted Gourmet, include your name, occupation, address and (or) telephone number.

I bid you a good day.

In 1981, Roche was named "Outstanding Fire Educator of the Year," and to "Outstanding Young Women of America."

The Virginia Beach Rotary Club, Inc. dates back to 1927, and currently has 90 menbers, according to Hugh Barton, the organization's vice president. Internationally, the club dates back to 1904. Today, Rotary has 980,000 members in 127 different countries. "We are a men's service organization founded to bring people from all different professions together for fellowship and community service," said Barton.

Other officers of the group include President Richard "Dick" Swope, an attorney; Secretary John Fahey, a Russian professor at Old Dominion University and a member of the Virginia Beach School Board; and Treasurer A. James DeBellis, director of the Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development.

This is the third year the club has selected an outstanding municipal employee based on nominations from the public and fellow employees.

Previous winners have been Richard Branich of Parks and Recreation, and Billy Ballou of the Circuit Court. Sitting on this year's selection committee were J.C. "Jo" Downs, assistant to the administrator at Virginia Beach General Hospital; Robert E. In late February, the Virginia Beach Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit in connection with the Virginia Beach School System began a new pilot program entitled "E.S.C.A.P.E." The purpose of the program is to teach children positive alternatives in the area of victimization and criminal involvement.

A detailed review of the E.S.C.A.P.E. Program is available by contacting Sgt. D.H. Kappers or MPO R.C. Poyner III, at the Virginia Beach Police Department, Crime Prevention Unit at 427-4146.

The People Are The Church

Open Door - Eight Years Of Outreach

"People should be discipled and nurtured" — Rev. Fritz Stegemann

The Open Door Chapel will be eight years old this coming August. The fellowship began in the Elks Lodge in the Rosemont area and from there moved to Holland Road where the ministry and attendance grew immensely. Now the chapel is located in the old Princess Theatre and shopping mall.

The church has changed significantly since its days at Holland Road. Pastor Stegemann feels that people should be discipled and nurtured and because of this, many outreach ministries have developed.

During the week the pastor keeps very busy with seven sermons in addition to hosting a daily radio show.

One outreach ministry is a restaurant where lunches are served to the public daily.

Originally opened as a soup kitchen to feed only the poor, it now is opened to the public on a non-profit basis. The only thing that is asked is an offering.

Another outreach is the thrift shop where people who are poor can obtain clothes. Also it acts as assistance to people who have lost homes due to fire or other circumstances. People who can afford to pay can obtain clothes there for tremendously low prices.

Christian education is an extension of Open Door's goal in Christian discipleship. A new Bible college opened recently to teach the Bible from "cover to cover." A high school program is presently underway with 54 students attending.

Located on 25 acres of land, Open Door Chapel has plenty of room to accommodate future growth and development.

There is a deep concern for meeting the needs of the people. Of course this is not just for the people who regularly attend Open Door Chapel, but for all who are in need.

There is a pleasant atmosphere and a feeling of desire to serve.

My Own Two Feet

I didn't need God! Used to boast about how I could stand on my own two feet.

Then came the broken leg. With lots of time to think and little to do I began to discover another dimension of our existence. We aren't simply "on our own." Some divine purpose links our life to the Creator. Seeking that purpose and striving to fulfill it — that's what life is really about.

I started going to church on crutches.

The leg is fine now, except for that ache when it's going to rain. My larger view of life continues to enrich each day.

And I'm finding it easier to attend worship — on my own two feet!

•That the time of day in which alcohol-related accidents most frequently occur in Virginia Beach is between 12 and 2 a.m.?

•That the day of the week in which the most alcohol-related accidents happen in Virginia Beach is Saturday?

•That drivers between the ages of 21 and 24 are involved in the greatest percentage of alcohol-related accidents in Virginia Beach?

•That males are involved in 93.9 percent of all Virginia Beach accidents and are arrested for DUI in 87.9 percent of all cases?

While such revelations were enlightening, they were not the featured attraction of the gathering. Rather, the meeting was called to announce the launching of "Operation R.A.I.D. (Report All Intoxicated Drivers)." The program calls for citizens to report to police whenever they see suspected runk drivers on the road.

Residents are asked to call the 911 emergency number, give a description of the car, the license number, and its last known location and direction of travel. Police units will then be relayed this information by a dispatcher. If said car can be found, police will then follow and determine if the vehicle should be pulled over.

The hope is that potential drunk drivers will seek other means of transportation if they figure somebody else is watching besides the police.

The problem, however, is that human beings can be very apathetic; not enough of them get involved in community actions. Also, it seems somewhat unlikely that a reported drunk motorist could be located by the police once they have been alerted. He might be long gone down the road.

Still, the program does have much potential, if the public would, for once, get off its collective hindquarters and become involved.

The police can't do the job alone. Lobbying groups such as Many Against Drunk Drivers can't do it by themselves. Drunk driving is like a sore which continues to fester. So long as the masses accept it and ignore, the problem will continue to plague the community.—M.M.G.

For the past 3 years Ronnie Buchanan has been owner-president of Buchanan Auto and Auction, Inc., after serving 12 years as owner of Buchanan Auto Sales, and a former General Manager of Tidewater Auto Auction.

Mr. Buchanan, just 39 years of age, is considered one of the area's leading authorities on the value of motor vehicles, having sold over an estimated 150,000 automobiles in his 18 years of auctioneering.

He is a member of the National Auctioneers Association, National Society of Appraisers, Retail Merchants Association, Virginia Independent Automobile Dealers Association and the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce.

He conducts an average of 12 to 20 sales per year involving business foreciosures, bankruptcies, liquidations, estate sales, and various other types of outside sales.

Ronnie Buchanan, a native of Canton, North Carolina and lifelong resident of Tidewater, presently resides in Chesapeake and may be reached at his office 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday at 485-3342.

Buchanan Expects '83 To Be Best Year Ever!

Buchanan Auto and Auction, Inc., of 3201 South Military Highway in Chesapeake is presently entering its sixth year of service to the residents of Tidewater. During that time they have developed a reputation as one of the finest and largest public auction houses on the East Coast.

Buchanan's offers a unique opportunity for the non-dealer buying public to purchase automobiles on the same wholesale basis which has for years been the exclusive domain of local automobile dealers. Their Saturday morning auctions offer for sale over 3,000 vehicles a year, which are vehicles repossessed on behalf of over 25 major banks, credit unions and finance companies serving the Tidewater area. This selection is complemented by the addition of late model vehicles from various leasing and rental agencies.

On a given Saturday at Buchanan's, you can find anything from late model (82 - 81) to antiques. Price range of vehicles may vary from $15,000 to $200 on any given occasion. Contrary to many popular myths surrounding automobile auctions, this sale is fertile ground for retail buyers to purchase at whole sale dealer prices.

Over half the vehicles they sell are bought by the non-dealer public. In the words of Ronnie Buchanan, "The day of the public auto auction has arrived." The future of the company appears to be limited only by the confines of present available space. Buchanan expects 1983 to be best year ever. Anyone interested in purchasing or selling a vehicle through Buchanan's may contact any of their six full time employees by dialing 485-3342. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Professional appraising services are available by scheduled appointment.

Notice of sale is available through the Chesapeake Post and the classified sections of most local newspapers.

Agriculture Yearbook Offered

"The 1982 Yearbook of Agriculture," a practical book for farmers and consumers, is available from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Titled "Foods from Farm to Table," the book contains marketing information for farmers and buying information for consumers.

The theme of getting more for one's money is stressed in the book's three major sections--production, marketing and smart food buying by consumers.

At the same time, the 416-page book shows how the food chain affects our economy, generating about 20 percent of the nation's gross national product and employing 23 percent of the labor force.

The hardback book has 32 pages of color photographs, more than 90 black-and-white photos and an index.

Copies of the 1982 Yearbook, "Food from Farm to Table," may be purchased by sending a $12 check or money order to Suprintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402. Sales copies also are available at government bookstores in many cities.

368,000 Jobs And $17 Billion

Virginia's No,. 1 Industry

"In 1982 Virginia agriculture was credited with generating $17 billion in direct activity and supplying jobs for 368,000 people," said Agriculture and Consumer Services Commissioner S. Mason Carbaugh. "While we benefit three times a day from the products of our Number 1 industry, most of us know very little about agriculture and its importance as a major force in our economy."

"The week of March 20-26, 1983 has been set aside as Virginia Agriculture Week to call attention to the continuing importance of this great industry and its economic and cultural impact on the Old Dominion. From its beginning and to this very day farming has been the basis of Virginia's well being. There is a continuing need to impress upon all of our citizens the contributions and importance of this industry.

"In spite of being the most productive segment of our society, agriculture today stands at the cross roads and it cannot be too strongly emphasized that neglect and low priority will eventually lead to deterioration of almost any worthwhile activity, endeavor or industry."

"Let me recall the words of the respected historian Bernard De Voto who noted that the Spanish in search of gold neglected their agriculture and have been hungry ever since. This was brought home to me on my visit to China where I saw first hand the destruction of the forest lands where the pupulace used it for fuel, but made no plans for replacing natures gift, or a trip to

Dairy Producers Wait For Information

Although milk production figures aren't available for 1982, production should show a two percent increase. The average dairy herd also increased about three cows per farm, bringing the average milking herd size to 98. The average Virginia cow produces about 15,000 pounds of milk a year.

"Average milk production per cow," the specialist said, "has increased about 250 pounds a year for the last six or seven years. Previously, the gain in production was about 140 pounds of milk per cow."

Farms have become more efficient and practice new technology. Low grain prices for feed, stable milk prices, and low beef prices for culled cows made dairying quite attractive, Jones observed.

Jones said that, unlike some states, Virginia's consumption of dairy products just about matches the amount produced so that the state is not classified as one that exports milk.

Egg Prices Vary...

Preliminary cost estimates suggest that Virginia egg producers only had somewhat favorable prices for their products during the first three months of 1982.

Paul L. Ruszler, Virginia Tech Extension poultry scientist in commercial eggs, said that lower egg prices during the remainder of the year caused returns to dip below costs in many instances. This was almost a repeat of what happened in 1980 and 1981.

In 1981, which is the latest year for which figures are available, Virginia producers sold 947 million eggs for a gross income of $63.2 million.

Virginia's 145 commercial egg producers produced most of that total, he said. The 40 to 50 non-commercial producers with less than 1,000 birds add a little to the total but most eggs come from the 145 producers.

Ruszler noted that the recent bumper grain crop was a contributing factor in keeping many producers in business due to the fact that grain prices are low. He said many of the state's egg producers have been operating at a margin or below costs for several years and cannot continue to do so indefinitely.

Nationally, he noted that producers have been reducing the number of replacement pullets being added to their flocks. Through September, eggs hatched for the production of commercial pullets were one percent below the 1981 figures and seven percent below 1980.

An indication of the decline in replacement pullets is the percentage of the flocks that has been force molted. Force molting is a process that gives hens a rest from laying so that when they start laying again, they are more productive than before their rest.

"In 1982," Ruszler said, "The percentage of the flock force molted stayed above 18.6 percent. The percentage increase of the laying flocks being force

Soybeans Have Record Yields

Virginia soybean producers had a very good year during 1982, except when it came to selling their products.

Preston H. Reid, Virginia Tech Extension agronomist in soybeans at the Tidewater Research and Continuing Education Center, said soybean producers had good yields but received "exceptionally low prices during 1982."

Despite the fact that wet fields considerably slowed harvesting of the crop, a new record yield of 28 bushels per acre was achieved. The record yield of 28.5 bushels per acre was set in 1979.

Reid said that although the final figures have not been tabulated, they should not change too greatly.

The prices at the Norfolk terminal ranged from a low of $5.02 to $6.90 per bushel during the year. The average price, however, was between $5.20 and $5.30 per bushel.

The number of acres planted in soybeans in Virginia continued to expand as new varieties have made it possible to grow soybeans in every county.

Last year, more than 680,000 acres of soybeans were planted in 80 Virginia counties. Reid explained that a country isn't included in soybean production unless more than 100 acres of the crop are planted.

Fifty-five percent of this year's was double-cropped. This means that the producer grew two crops on the same field in one growing season.

The Extension specialist pointed out that no-till soybeans are continuing to be popular among Virginia farmers. Seventy-five percent of the double-cropped soybeans were grown by the no-till method.

Reid believed that the number of acres planted in soybeans will continue to increase in 1983. Some acres in the federal set-aside program ultimately will result in more soybean production.

A measure of stability was added to the production scene, he said, when President Ronald Regan signed the Contract Sanctity Bill. The bill primarily says that contracts signed before a trade embargo is established will be honored. The only exception would be in the case of war.

"This bill gives our growers a sense of security," Reid said. "A lot of people don't realize that 55 percent of Virginia's soybeans are sent overseas. "The two previous presidential embargoes that cancelled existing contracts had an adverse affect and made the producers a little leery about participating in programs which could be stopped even when valid contracts existed."

Sheep Industry On Rise

After nearly two decades of decline, Virginia's sheep industry appears to be on the rise.

That's the opinion of Steven H. Umberger, Virginia Tech Extension animal scientist in sheep.

Noting that Virginia's sheep industry is the largest in the East and the second largest east of the Mississippi River, Umberger observed that despite a dip in prices during the year, more producers seem to be showing an interest in raising sheep.

He attributes much of this interest to cattle producers who are adding sheep to their livestock inventories now that research has shown that sheep and cattle can graze the same pastures.

"A cattle producer," Umberger said, "can add one sheep per cow to his holdings without damaging his pasture. Since sheep are more efficient in converting grass to pounds of live body weight, they can produce a choice carcass by grazing on pasture alone."

He observed that three major supermarket chains have committed to always having lamb at their meat counters, a situation that has not been always the case in Virginia.

Last year, Virginia averaged 129 lambs saved per 100 ewes. The 129 percent lambing rate placed Virginia in the number two spot nationally in that category.

Last year, Virginia producers raised 100,000 market lambs and sold 950,000 pounds of wool.

Agusta, Highland and Rockingham counties continue to lead the state with 40 percent of the sheep but flocks can be found in almost every country. Flock sizes ranged from five to 1,500.

Prices were down during the year, he said, ranging from 70 cents a pound in the spring to 45 cents in the fall. The average value per head dropped from $69.50 to $58.50 while cash receipts from marketings were somewhat lower at $5.6 million.

"I believe the sheep industry will continue to grow," Umberger said. "It is the only livestock species which will make a profit year in and year out."

Brazil where their rail transportation system suffered because of an aggressive road building program."

"The industry of agriculture is no different than these examples. Although it has strength today, neglect and low priority can destroy all that we have spent over 375 years creating."

"Today agriculture is the cornerstone of our economy. But it will be so only if we make plans for the future."

"Our support today will assure a bright tomorrow for Virginia's Number 1 industry."

Record Crop For Corn

Virginia corn producers needed a record corn crop in 1982 to come close to breaking even financially and they got it.

Although final production figures are not yet available, it appears that the state average will be at 105 bushels an acre with total production being in excess of 62 million bushels. This shatters the previous record of 90 bushels which was set last year.

Virginia producers needed the increased production, said Virginia Tech Extension specialists, because corn prices remained low during the year. Corn was selling in late 1982 for $2.17 a bushel and the specialists estimated that it costs farmers about $3.25 a bushel to grow a 100-bushel per acre crop.

These costs include seed, chemicals, machinery, labor and land. The only way to make money on corn production at current prices is to grow high yields per acre and use top management practices, the specialists said.

The number of Virginia producers growing more than 200 bushels per acre exploded during the year. Charles City, James City and New Kent counties had 10 farmers which exceeded the 200 bushels per acre figure. C.H. Branch of James City County achieved 220.97 bushels per acre.

As remarkable as these figures were, they were not the highest. Two Hanover County farmers, using irrigation, averaged 227 and 224 bushels per acre. Several other producers in the Shenandoah Valley also were reported to have topped the mark.

Corn acreage for grain during the year was estimated at 595,000 acres which was down from the previous year. Also down from the previous year was the figure for corn silage–180,000 acres. The corn silage figure averaged 16 tons to an acre with total production being 2,880,000 tons.

Farm Depression

A Virginia Perspective

Dust bowl images of plummeting farm income and bankruptcy abound in natural press reports on American agriculture, but Virginia agriculture is not a picture of total destitution, said Virginia Tech agricultural economists recently.

There will be disaster in the futures of some Virginia farmers, but diversification works in favor of the commonwealth when facing severe recession.

Virginia features both sizable livestock and cash crop industries; northern and southern crops; products with government price supports and those not so supported; and products heavily involved in contract pricing and those not so involved.

Among top Virginia commodities are several with fairly good income pictures. Virginia tobacco, which was the state's number two cash receipt commodity in 1981, enjoyed good prices in 1982. Peanuts, the number seven commodity, had a healthy support price.

Hog producers in 1982 enjoyed a year's respite from low prices and bad conditions to be profitable in the year following their number five ranking in Virginia agriculture.

Contract pricing (committing future production to a buyer at a predetermined price) is the key to relative stability in the face of weakening prices in broiler, turkey, and egg industries which made up fourth, eighth and tenth places in Virginia 1981 cash receipts respectively.

Price support programs helped the number one cash receipt agricultural industry dairying weather a crisis of surpluses, but the number three industry in cattle and calves had weak prices.

Soybean and corn producers, sixth and ninth respectively in 1981, had to rely on exceptional productivity in 1982 to hope to break even. There are no prospects for dramatic improvements in prices in the near future since export markets, on which the producers depend, are weak.

Low grain prices provided a silver lining for Virginia broiler, turkey, egg, swine, and dairy industries which rely heavily on grain from other states.

It is a short-lived blessing Tech agricultural economists said, since livestock producers will be faced with lower grain production and higher costs in the future.

Tech agricultural economist Wayne Purcell casts gloom for beef and hog producers.

"Beef cattle producers will stay in trouble in 1983 and hog producers will be in trouble."

The state dairymen could face rough times if the federal government is successful in implementing levees to, in effect, reduce price supports, said Tech Extension farm management specialist Robert K. Reynolds.

"If the two 50-cent milk tax payments are imposed, I expect to see a number of dairymen sell off assets this year."

Tobacco producers fear the future holds a downtrend in per capita consumption of tobacco, strong competition from overseas and an increase in tobacco excises which could cause a decrease in demand.

Tech agricultural economist L. Leon Geyer said the recession will likely force many farmers to work "smarter."

"One positive aspect of the recession may be to encourage more producers to contract price their products," said Geyer.

The fact that many Virginia farmers have diversified farm incomes helps blunt the effects of the recession, said Geyer. Those who lose money on one commodity may be able to make money on another.

The greatest asset many Virginia farmers have during the recession is off-farm income. Virginia farms on the average are smaller than the national mean and there is a large percentage of part-time farmers. So, while farm income plummets, off-farm income can keep many farmers in limbo until better times.

"Generally, in times like these producers who are farming marginal land located far from markets are those who face ruin, like the Okies of the 1920's," said Geyer.

While Virginia farmers generally escape this description, Geyer said individuals will still face the prospect of giving up farming. Not only poor managers will drop out, said Geyer, but good managers who are victims of unforeseen changes in the market which turned out to be devastating under their personal circumstances.

"In the 1920's, it was some of the best farmers who were wiped out."

Exports Up, Volume Down

U.S. Agricultural exports are expected to total about $40.5 billion for fiscal 1982. That's an eight percent drop from the $43.8 billion volume in 1981 and the first decline since 1969.

The fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

Meanwhile, the physical volume of exports continues to climb and the early count suggests 165 million metric tons of agricultural products were shipped in fiscal 1982. This is a record volume but not a big jump from 1981.

When higher volume generates fewer dollars, it means prices are lower. This was the situation in 1982. Agricultural prices were not high going into 1982 and prices of several commodities continued to fall throughout the year.

High levels of production have been the rule rather than the exception for many commodities during the past two years. When demand is not expanding, the only way to move more production through commercial channels is with lower prices.

Another factor is weak conditions in the world economy that have restricted demand for U.S. agricultural exports. High unemployment rates in several countries are restraining consumption, especially of meats. So a drop in livestock feeding hit U.S. feed grain exports which were down 10 percent.

The American dollar grew stronger on foreign markets, especially during the summer. The gains of the dollar against foreign currency during the year made U.S. goods more expensive to foreign buyers.

While exports were off somewhat in value, agricultural trade continued to be an important contributor to the U.S. balance of trade in 1982. Agricultural imports also dropped more than $2 billion during the year.

molted suggest that the average age of the flock is older and that producers are keeping their hens longer."

Ruszler said national authorities are predicting that production through July may be down slightly and, if there are signs of an economic recovery, that the output may increase toward the end of the year.

Basing his figures on New York market quotations, he predicted that if producers keep their outputs near 1982 levels, 1983 egg prices may average between 67 and 73 cents, near last year's 70.8 cents.

The specialist noted that the 1982 average was half a cent below 1980 prices.

Cattle Prices Not Much Improved

Virginia cattle producers suffered four disappointments for every pleasant surprise they received during 1982.

K.C. Williamson, Virginia Tech Extension animal scientist, said costs continued to rise during the year but at a slower rate than in previous years. Prices received by most producers were described as only slightly improved over 1981.

"This adds up to two very mediocre years in a row for most Virginia cattlemen," Williamson said.

Feeder calves and yearlings, the product for most Virginia farmers, saw early 1982 prices that were below the level of a year earlier. By April 1982, finished cattle prices reached $69 per hundredweight and "it looked as though they surely would bring $75 in only a matter of weeks.

"Fed cattle did average $72 in May. Cattle feeders, with high interest rates and the pessimism that prevailed at the time, failed to get excited about bidding up the prices of feeder cattle even though they were making a profit on fed cattle being marketed," Williamson said.

Yearling steers sold during the special spring feeder cattle sales in April had an average weight of 644 pounds and averaged $65. This was about two dollars per hundred below the average price of steers at the 1981 spring sales.

The conservative attitude of cattle feeders proved to be a wise one, Williamson said, as fed cattle prices dipped lower during the fall. At times in October and November, choice fed steers were selling well below $60 per hundredweight. Some went as low as $55.

The Extension specialist said, "The lower fed cattle prices during the fall dealt an unkind blow to Virginia feeder cattle producers as the prices of feeder cattle moved lower in sympathy with lower fed cattle prices. This lower price trend took on even greater insignificance when one considers that 75 percent or more of Virginia feeder cattle are sold during the fall."

Steer calves sold through the special fall feeder sales averaged $64.24 per hundred. This was one dollar per hundred or about five dollars per head more than the previous year. Heifer calves sold through special sales averaged $51 per hundredweight in 1982, about the same as in 1981.

Since there was a slightly lower average selling weight in 1982, the gross return per calf sold in the fall of 1982 was $280.50 per head, the same as in 1981. This did not cover total production costs for most calf producers in the state.

The same cost-price relationship must prevail throughout most of the nation since the U.S. Department of Agriculture inventory of cattle numbers on farms last July 1 suggested total cattle numbers are not increasing and beef cow numbers even may be declining slightly.

The traditional 10-year cattle cycle suggested that cattle numbers would increase between 1980 and 1985.

Williamson said that the final 1982 reports are expected to show that beef cow and total cattle numbers were reduced in 1982.

"This will be fairly good evidence that the peak in cattle numbers which was expected in 1985 will be smaller than expected and that the peak even may be postponed to a later date. Depending upon the extent of those reduced numbers and if there is some improvement in demand, there could be some increase in cattle prices in 1983 and 1984," Williamson said.

Minor Bulbs Are Harbingers Of Spring

by DIANE RELF
Virginia Tech Extension Home Horticulturist

Despite the late start of winter this year, many of us are looking longingly toward spring and take delight in those first few signs of its eventual arrival. For those already familiar with the minor bulbs, renewed faith in warmer weather is probably as close as a rock wall or a raised bed around the house.

For those who would like to make acquaintance with these little flowers, there are a half dozen or so that it would be well worth watching for over the next few weeks. These include:

Chronodoxa or glory of the snow--The informal starry flowers of vivid blue, shady to white in the center, are borne in clusters of eight or more on a stem reaching three to six inches in height. Chronodoxa naturalize easily and make lovely cut flowers.

Winter-aconite--The bright yellow flowers on this four-inch tall plant resemble a small buttercup, blooming as early as January. Planted in a raised bed, in a rock garden or atop a stone wall, they are easily seen without stooping. They also naturalize well on southern banks with deciduous trees to provide summer shade.

Snowdrops or galanthus--The six-inch tall blooms are pure white with green spots. These solitary, drooping blossoms appear fragile but will withstand frost, snow, and ice and may bloom as early as January. Snowdrops

March 20-26

Why An Agriculture Week?

This year, March 20-26, will mark the 8th observance of Virginia Agriculture Week. Governor Charles S. Robb will be serving as Honorary Chairman of the annual event that calls attention to the first, and largest industry in Virginia that has in so many ways contributed to the quality of life for each of us.

The original idea for such a celebration came from the Board of Agriculture and Consumer Services in 1976 during the country's Bicentennial observance. The first theme was "Freedom's Roots-Agriculture."

In 1977 the theme of the event called attention to the work of the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services as that state agency celebrated its 100th birthday, A Century of Progress.

Other themes over the years have included: Virginia - Where Agriculture Works, Agriculture A Reason For Giving Thanks, Virginia Agriculture--More For Your Money.

In Recent years the week of the celebration also includes National Agriculture Day, this year March 21. Since 1981 the people of the United States are called upon to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities in recognition of the nation's "most basic industry."

18.5 Million Pounds Produced Daily

For each day in 1982 Virginia Farm production averaged:

2.5	million eggs
2,560,000	quarts of milk
1,617,880	pounds of broilers
1,443,800	pounds of cattle and calves
1,178,100	pounds of apples
754,800	pounds of peanuts
547,900	pounds of hogs
339,300	pounds of tobacco
493,200	pounds of turkeys
74,000	pounds of peaches
6,100	pounds of potatoes
328,200	pounds of tomatoes
900	pounds of sweet potatoes
171,200	bushels of corn for grain
51,000	bushels of soybeans
38,500	bushels of wheat
4,590	tons of hay

That totals over 18.5 million pounds of production per day.

One U.S. farm worker today supplies enough food and fiber for 78 people. In 1930 the number was only 10.

Attention: Small Farmers

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculdture - Cooperative Extension Service is in the process of updating their mailing list for small farmers. Anyone wishing to receive educational information relative to small farms in the City of Virginia Beach that is not currently listed on the mailing list should contact the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture at the Municipal Center by March 11 and give their name and address so that they can be included on the list.

S. T. Moore Jr.

It Helps To Know Your Efforts Are Recognized

"I am pleased to see the efforts of those involved in agriculture recognized through activities promoted by Virginia's Agriculture Week" said S.T. Moore Jr., of South Hill, president of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation.

Moore, referring to the week of March 20-26, notes that the agricultural community hasn't had it too easy here of late. "Sometimes", Moore stated, "it helps to know that your efforts are recognized."

Virginia Farm Bureau numbers almost 80,000 member families in 87 county Farm Bureau organizations. In 1982, Virginia ranked at the top in terms of membership gain for the larger states, as part of the American Farm Bureau. Only two states, much smaller in size, achieved a higher percentage of member increase.

"This membership gain shows that farmers are concerned about their industry" Moore said. Farm Bureau is a grassroots organization with voluntary leadership starting at the county level. "These county leaders are backed by staff personnel at both the state and national level" More said. "It is a team effort that gets the job done," Moore continued.

Agriculture in the state has had it rough the last few years with high interest rates, double digit inflation and other factors affecting the cost of inputs such as equipment, seed, fertilizer and chemicals. "With interest rates coming down and inflation seemingly under control for now" More says, "maybe we can get the economy turned around."

Noting the state of the agricultural economy in the country, Moore said "production costs must either go down, or the prices received must go up or many farmers will be bankrupt."

Arbor Day Proclamation

Governor Charles S. Robb has proclaimed Friday, March 11 as Arbor Day.

"Although it isn't a legal holiday, it is a very important day--a day to pause and pay tribute to the trees," said W.F. Custard, State Forester, Virginia Division of Forestry, Department of Conservation and Economic Development.

It is a day during which youth and adults throughout the State conduct programs and participate in memorial tree planting ceremonies.

According to Custard, the Commonwealth's 16½ million acres of forestland provides raw material for the forest products industry--an industry that employs one out of six wage earners and contributes 2¼ billion dollars a year to our State's economy.

A tree means many things besides supporting a multibillion-dollar-a-year businsess. It provides shade, fruits and nuts. It provides fuel, lumber and raw material for paper. It helps hold the soil in place and provides a home for wildlife.

"Even though Virginians plant millions of forest trees each year to reforest idle, eroded and harvested lands, Arbor Day is a time for everyone--city and country dwellers alike. It is a time to plant a tree or shrub in recognition of what the forests have meant to our forefathers and what they will mean to future generations," Custard said.

"Governor Robb has set aside this special day in 1983 in observance of Arbor Day. Let us all share this day with him by taking part in a tree-planting ceremony on courthouse, or school grounds, public parks or even – in our own front yard," concluded Custard.

Agriculture

Virginia's Largest Industry!

Agriculture is Virginia's largest industry. In 1982, $17 billion of direct and indirect economic activity was generated by the total agribusiness industry in the production of food and fiber. This represents 33 percent of total economic activity in the State, and 368,000 jobs or 15 percent of total jobs in the State.

Over 2 billion dollars worth of agricultural products move through Virginia ports annually. (Of this amount, approximately $278 million are Virginia farm products). Two out of every 5 acres of Virginia's major crops go to exports.

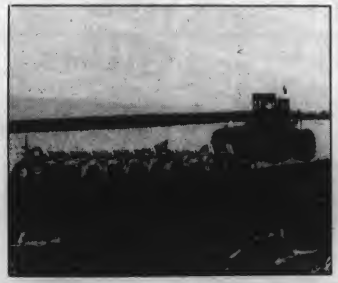
These statistics become even more astounding when you realize that it all starts at the farm where less than 2 percent of the population of the Old Dominion works on 39 percent of the land area. There are 85,000 full-time equivalent farm workers on Virginia's 60,000 farms.

The average size farm is 163 acres.

Average value per farm (land and buildings) $169,000.

The 1982 estimated total gross income: $1.9 billion.

The 1982 estimated total farm production expenses: $1.8 billion.



Profile

The Virginia Farmer

A statistical comparison of Virginia farmers with their national counterparts indicates the former has higher ownership of land, works a little more off the farm and is a bit older.

The most recently compiled census of agriculture for Virginia indicated 62 percent of the state's 56,869 farm operators own the land they work. The census, taken every four years by the Census Bureau, was completed for 1982 in January. The national average of ownership is 59 percent.

Twenty-seven percent of Virginia farmers are part owners--operators who both own and rent land--and 11 percent are tenants.

The number of Virginia farms has declined about 12 percent during the nine years between 1969 and 1978, going from 64,572 to 56,869. However, the figures are not directly comparable due to improved methods of data collection in the latter census and a change in the definition of a farm.

Looking at work off the farm, the most recent census data shows that 40 percent of the Virginians were employed 200 or more days off their places in the census year, as compared with a U.S. average of 37 percent. 47 percent of Virginia farmers, as compared with the U.S. average of 54 percent, gave their principal occupation as farming.

From an age standpoint, the average Virginia farmer is 52.3 years, compared with the U.S. average of 50.1. Some 22 percent of the Virginians were over 65, and only 13 percent under 35.

The average size of a Virginia farm is 175 acres, compared with 415 acres for the nation. Seventy-eight percent of the state's farms are under 220 acres.

Virginia has about 10 million acres of farmland, of which 2.7 million are in harvested cropland. Only 43,900 acres are irrigated, less than one percent of the total cropland.

Virginia's value of farm products sold reached $1.3 billion in 1978, with a per farm average of $22,933, well below the U.S. average of $43,618. The value of land and buildings per acre was reported at $930, about 50 percent more than the national average of $628.

VIRGINIA AGRICULTURE GROWING FOR YOU

Virginia Agriculture Week

prefer a heavy soil and so well in deciduous shade where they look best in clumps or naturalized along with an evergreen groundcover.

Spring snowflakes or leucojum--Following the snowdrops in bloom, these are similar but larger and taller, 6-12 inches in height. Best planted in the sun, these will bloom as early as February. Two other leucojums, the summer snowflake and autumn snowflake, are also attractive for later season blooms.

Grape hyacinth or muscari--These are among the most commonly found of the small bulbs, probably because they spread so freely and persist without cultivation for many years. Because of the large number of different species, muscari may bloom from early March to June. Rarely over six inches tall, the spires of deep blue bell-shaped flowers are the most frequently seen. But others have light blue and white blossoms. All will thrive in almost any well-drained soil in full sun or partial shade.

Netted iris (iris reticulata)--One of the earliest iris usually blooming in late March, the flowers are up to six inches tall. Lightly scented, the most common are violet-purple; however, white and blue cultivars are available. These are excellent additions to rock gardens and sunny borders.

All of these bulbs are hardy and require no tender kindness. They prefer a location with good drainage and thrive in hot, dry summers. A rock garden or raised bed offers protection from accidents and enhanced visibility as well as optimum cultural conditions. For earliest color, they should be planted facing south with protection from north winds.

After selecting your favorites from those you encounter in public and private gardens this spring, mark your calender for an early September day to buy and plant a dozen or more of those little beauties so spring can start early in your garden.

Door Opens On Peanut Profits

Virginia peanut growers can save as much as $150 per acre if they will only lay down their "shotguns," says a Virginia Tech Extension specialist.

"In the past, farmers have used the 'shotgun' approach to production," explained Allen H. Allison, peanut specialist at Tech's Tidewater Research Center. "They've used everything in the book to produce a crop and it's been a very expensive practice."

By using the prescription-type approach to production, farmers can save up to $150 per acre. "This is a very common-sense approach," Allison said. "You use what is needed, but no more."

The Tech specialist also revealed that at least 90 percent of Virginia's growers can cut $100 in production costs from each acre without affecting yield or decreasing profit.

Production cost savings are important with a crop such as peanuts where production costs are extremely high--between $700-$750 per acre compared to corn or soybeans where costs are between $200-$250 per acre.

"Peanuts are such a costly crop because they are grown underground and are subjected to more diseases and insect damage," noted Allison. "The drying and curing process is also very costly."

Although peanut production in Virginia is limited to eight major producting areas (the counties of Isle of Wight, Surry, Prince George, Sussex, Dinwiddie, Southampton, Greensville and the City of Suffolk), it represents a major field crop in the state, ranking seventh in terms of cash receipts.

Virginia farmers receive about $95 million annually for growing peanuts. Processing complexes throughout the state contribute another $200 million to the state's economy. Suffolk is one of the largest peanut processing cities in the United States.

"Virginia's 5,000 peanut growers rank fifth nationally in production," Allison noted, "and they produce a top-quality product." Virginia farmers raise the Virginia-type peanut, the larget in size of any grown. For this reason, they are used less for peanut butter or peanut oil.

Also known as the "ball-park" type peanut, Virginia peanuts are mainly marketed raw, salted, salted in the shell and roasted in the shell. Some of the kernels are used in premium-grade cocktail peanuts.

"A depressed world economic situation tends to depress consumption of peanuts," Allison said, "especially in the U.S. where peanuts are thought of as a snack food or luxury item instead of a highly-nutritious food as they are thought of in foreign countries." Approximately one-third of the Virginia peanut crop is exported to Western Europe where the in-shell roasted beanut is popular.

Allison predicted a bright future for peanut farmers provided that growers nationally will hold production steady so that the supply/demand situation can be kept in line. Virginia farmers reduced acreage 8.8 percent in 1981 because of a surplus.

"Growers had a pretty good year in 1982 and prices were excellent," he said. "The $550 per ton support price allowed farmers with high yields (upwards to 4,000 pounds per acre) to make a reasonable profit.

At the same time, Allison cautioned growers to hold production levels steady. "The peanut farmer also grows corn, soybeans and grain," he noted. "Because the peanut part of his operation was the only area he made money on last year, there will be a tendency to plant more paanuts in '83. Instead, production should be held steady or even reduced."

1983 Forecast "Steady"

Hardwood Production Steady

Despite the fact that the wood products industry has been experiencing bad times in recent years, Virginia hardwood producers have maintained a steady rate of production. State softwood producers, however, have noted a softness in the demand for their products.

About 60 percent of Virginia's lumber production is in hardwoods with softwoods making up the remaining 40 percent.

Marshall S. White, Virginia Tech Extension wood products specialists, noted that Virginia, unlike many states, has alarge number of producers on private land who regulate their output so that there will be no glut on the market.

Nationally, the performance of the wood products industry during the first eight months of 1982 was poor. There were only 1.1 million housing starts, the same number as in 1981. Continued high interest rates and uncertainty in the economy hurt the industry.

Southern pine prices were up slightly, but production was down 10 percent. Total softwood production, shipments and orders received all declined by 12 percent.

Hardwood production was down 29 percent. Shipments and orders received were down 23 and 25 percent, respectively.

New orders for furniture were down 20 percent while production of paper and board declined six percent.

Stumpage prices for yellow pine dropped and the volume was down 18 percent nationally.

"Virginia, however, has not been as hard hit as a number of states," White said, "as the producers make a concentrated effort to meet the demand."

Virginia Christmas tree grower in 1982 harvested an estimated 170,000 trees valued at approximately $1.5 million.

For 1983, projected housing starts are 1.3 million units, up only 18 percent from the 1982 level. Helping this comeback should be new orders for replenishing inventories which declined last year to very low levels.

Cook, over medium heat until butter is melted. Arrange apples around ribs and brush all with lemon glaze. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until ribs are tender. Serves 3-4.

Virginia's Horse Industry

Virginia's heritage with horses is part of her image and is a multi-million dollar industry as well.

The annual gross value of the horse industry in the state amounts to $322 million when the value of the several aspects of the industry are looked at together, said Arden N. Huff, Virginia Tech Extension animal scientist.

The figure was reported after an industry-wide inventory conducted from 1979 to 1981 by the Virginia Cooperative Extension Service.

The horse industry includes over 36,000 individuals who own horses, ponies, mules or donkeys. There are about 86,000 horses. Over 6,600 persons were employed in aspects such as tack and equipment sales, as well as the farms, schools and stables. There are 1,200 breeding farms in the state and the industry produces a total annual income of $70 million, the report showed.

"The economic condition has placed many farms and owners in very difficult conditions, like it has to all agricultural industries," said Huff. "However, interest in horses and the quality of horses will continue to increase."

Farm Depression Hurts Nations Industry

Depressed farm prices and low farmer profits don't only hurt farmers, they also hurt the rest of the nation's economy, and can cost urban industries billions.

Farmers are the single largest group of purchasers in the nation, stimulating all business, from banks to steel mills.

When prices are adjusted for inflation, farm prices are at their lowest since 1934. That means farmers can't afford new equipment, and must make do with repairs instead. That's bad news for the U.S. Steel industry, which earmarks over five percent of its production for agricultural equipment and building materials each year.

Other items on the annual agricultural shopping list include:

•$13.7 billion worth of fuel and lubricants.

•Nearly $12 billion worth of machinery.

•Over $20 billion worth of feed and seed, plus $6.7 billion worth of fertilizer and lime.

•About 33 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity, which could light the homes in New England, Maryland, Kentucky and Washington.

Significant purchase losses in any of these areas affect jobs nationwide. And none of this takes into account the more than $4 billion farmers pay in real estate and property taxes each year.

Farm Land Disappearing

Farm land is continuing to disappear in the United States according to Virginia Tech Extension agricultural economists.

Daily, four square miles are shifted to uses other than agriculture in the United States.

In the war between the bulldozer and the plow, one million acres of America's prime farm land are urbanized each year. A million acres equals a one-half mile wide strip from New York to California.

In addition to the prime farm land being lost, the nation annually is losing another two million acres of lesser quality agricultural land to non-agricultural uses. The total annual loss of three million acres a year is the equivalent of 320 acres an hour.

V. B. Farmers Market Gets Parking Area

E. R. Cockrell, Jr., Director of the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture announced recently that the Farmer's Market will have increased parking facilities before the peak marketing season of the summer.

City Council approved $55,000 in C.I.P. budget for the expansion. Cockrell estimates that approximately fifty (50) additional spaces will be made available by June.

Cockrell said that the extra spaces will be for customers and increased spaces for farmers who sell from their trucks. "This has been one of our objectives for several years. I am quite pleased that Council has authorized this expansion," said Cockrell.

Hog Prices May Be Good

Virginia hog producers should get good prices when they take their hogs to market in 1983.

That's the opinion of many agricultural marketing specialists.

Charles R. Cooper, Virginia Tech Extension swine specialist, said recent U.S. Department of Agriculture figures show that nationwide, there are about 41.9 million hogs and pigs on farms. This is the lowest inventory level since 1973. Hogs kept for breeding and for market also have been reduced, by seven and nine percent, respectively.

"These figures clearly suggest that pork supplies will continue to be limited for consumers in at least the first half of 1983 and that actual expansion is not yet under way."

In looking at Virginia, Cooper found support for the national figures. Breeding hogs dropped from 91,000 in 1981 to 83,000 in 1982. This was a nine percent decline.

Market hogs declined 24 percent--from 549,000 to 417,000. Total hog numbers were down 22 percent, from 640,000 in 1981 to 500,000 in 1982.

Cooper emphasized that complete figures for 1982 are not yet available and cited figures which were compiled before year's end. However, he did not expect very much change.

He said that the state's 9,000 producers received strong prices during the year. Prices per hundredweight equaled or exceeded the $50 figure for most of the year. This was a far cry from 1975 record of $74 but still a profit.

Cooper noted that the Virginia hog producers were assisted by the record corn crop during the year. The corn surplus kept feed costs down which saved the producers money.

Cooper noted that many experts believe hog prices may again exceed $60 per hundredweight at some point during the first part of 1983. Whether or not they will continue at that level will depend upon whether or not producers begin to build their inventories.

"We are in a four-year down cycle," Cooper said, "and most of us expect the numbers to bottom out sometime in 1983 and begin climbing again.

"If that occurs, then there will be some decline in hog prices," he concluded.

In talking about the 1982 corn crop, one Extension agent noted, "It seems like only a few years ago when we had a target of 100 bushels to an acre. I never thought I would see a year when the state average would reach that figure."

However, unless market prices improve, the bountiful yields will not help the farmers make money on their corn crops. Good management is a must but prices will have to start rising in 1983 if the economic situation is to improve, the specialists said.

The formers may get some economic relief if the payment in kind program, supported by both President Ronald Reagan and agriculture secretary John Block, is put into place.

Peanut Munching Month

Virginians can celebrate March, National Peanut Munching Month, by stocking up on the state's third largest cash crop. The large-podded, Virginia-type peanut is known as "the peanut of gourmets," hence the 1983 theme "Virginia Peanuts for the Discriminating Muncher."

What makes the Virginia-type peanut "the peanut of gourmets?" Its large size, beauty, superb flavor and high nutritional value. Virginia ranks second in the nation in the production of this premium peanut. In the fall of 1982, Virginia's 3,000 peanut farmers produced approximately 140,000 tons, about eight percent of the country's total peanut supply.

Agriculture Week Celebrated Every Week

During the week of March 20-26 all Virginia will be celebrating Agricultural Week. We'll be doing the same in Virginia Beach. There is one difference; we celebrate Agriculture every week in our city.

Agriculture is an important industry, so important that we have a Department of Agriculture. On behalf of our total department I wish to thank the people of Virginia Beach for allowing us the privilege of serving you in a variety of ways since 1918.

We as a total team have enjoyed knowing you and working with you in Agriculture, Horticulture, Family Resources, and 4-H. Through our many years together we've seen a lot of each other. The closeness we have enjoyed is akin to family. Just being so close to you gives us many special pleasures.

We've received birth announcements, invitations to attend high school and college graduations, invitations to weddings, seen your sons and daughters graduate into your businesses. You have allowed us to be a part of you and for this we thank you.

So, my hat is off to agriculture. You are the strength of this land for the power of this great America flows through your veins to keep us strong. Keep us that way.

IRS

The Fear Of The Unknown

Americans reportedly are the best group in the world in voluntarily and accurately paying their income taxes. Why then do many of us feel near panic when contacted by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) for an audit?

Much of this uncertainty can be attributed to a fear of the unknown, sometimes a lack of records and a lack of knowledge regarding IRS procedures. Generally, only about one in 50 returns are audited. Individuals who are in higher income brackets or who have more complicated tax returns are more likely to have their returns audited.

For example, persons with incomes of more than $50,000 reportedly were audited during calendar year 1981 eight times as often as those with incomes under $10,000.

We also find returns with unusual expenses may bring an audit. If you make $10,000 and give $3,500 to charities, you may want to furnish some evidence with your tax return to help prevent an audit. Tax shelters are another "red flag" for an examiner.

Generally, those audited receive letters asking them to come to a certain office at a specific date and time. It most often is the IRS office closest to their residence. The letter will have various items listed and checked that they wish to have audited.

Sometimes, a phone call to the agent involved is all that is needed. You can negotiate the time or date if there are conflicts. Occasionally, field audits are made at a home or business but this generally is with very complex returns.

In preparing for an audit, you may want to review your records to see if there are deductions that you have overlooked. Look over your cancelled checks, date book and former tax returns to see if you have missed the obvious. Many persons understate their exemptions, particularly contributions to charities and interest paid on small accounts.

If you have documentation for the items in question, you probably don't need a tax professional with you. Whether it is a $50 or $3,000 item may dictate the hiring of help. If it is complex or if a professional tax preparer did your return, you may feel more at ease in having expert assistance.

Most persons come from the tax audit saying they were surprised how nice the IRS personnel treated them. If, however, you are unsatisfied with the auditor, you can stop the interview and ask to see the supervisor about changing the auditor.

Do not expect the IRS to be swayed by the alleged unfairness of tax laws, the underground market, or tax breaks of corporations. The IRS administers the law; it does not legislate it.

If you disagree with the agent's decision, you can appeal to a supervisor, through the IRS appeals office or directly to court. Contrary to popular belief, there are no quotas imposed on auditor to collect a specified amount of dollars.

There are some "catch 22" factors involved. For example if any institution, such as a bank, employer, or stock company, makes an error in reporting what was paid to you, you are liable for this amount until the issuing institution makes a correcting statement to the IRS.

Unless fraud is involved, you generally are safe from an audit after three years have elapsed. A 1979 return with a filing deadline of April 1980 would be subject to audit until April 1983.

Receiving a refund does not mean you are free from an audit. These procedures are done in different sections so be sure to keep all records.

Being audited is a sure way of getting you to keep better records and to be informed on tax laws and procedures. The IRS audit is a source of discomfort, but consumers can reduce that discomfort by planning intelligently and keeping good records.

The Quest For 100

A heady dream for wheat producers leads to higher productivity

"I believe Virginia farmers can grow 100-bushels-per-acre wheat on a regular basis. Research and Extension efforts by agronomists, entomologists, and pathologists are being expanded at Virginia Tech to develop the total package—including the best varieties, cultivation techniques, chemical applications, and other practices—that will produce 100 bushels to the acre in most years.

"Admittedly, this is a little way down the road, but I believe it is a realistic goal. It is a goal that we can attain, but one that is out of the reach of the farmer in the drier regions that currently grow most of the wheat in the United States. High production will give our Virginia producers a competitive advantage."

—Daniel E. Brann

100 Bushels An Acre Possible

For more than a year, Virginia Tech Extension agronomist Daniel E. Brann has been telling Virginia wheat producers that wheat yields of 100 bushels an acre are well within the realm of possibility for the Old Dominion.

To emphasize that prediction, a team of Extension and research specialists have managed to exceed the 100-bushel mark in experiments at the Virginia Crop Improvement farm at Mount Holly. The research team includes Brann; David E. Babineau, Extension plant pathologist at the Eastern Virginia Research Station at Warsaw; and Marcus M. Alley, Tech research agronomist in soil fertility and crop management.

In demonstration plots, the researchers averaged 112 bushels to an acre with three varieties--Tyler, McNair 1003 and Pioneer S-76--by using irrigation. They also averaged 105-bushels an acre for the three varieties on the non-irrigated land.

Brann noted that the Virginia wheat producers will have to go a long way to regularly attain this figure but believes it to be a harbinger of the future.

Although the final figures for the 1982 wheat crop have not been tabulated, Bran estimated that they would average about 38 bushels an acre on the 390,000 acres that were planted. This was down sharply from the 44 bushel average in 1981.

He attributes the decline to the severe winter temperatures which reduced the fall development of the late winter wheat and drought stress when the crop was in the heading stage around May 1.

The 1983 crop, the specialist said, "looks as if it could be a record one." He termed the growing conditions for late planted grain as "ideal," while conditions for early grain were called "satisfactory."

Brann noted that prices have not been good to the wheat producers. Prices dipped during the year to as low as $2.69 a bushel after going as high as $3.65.

He observed that farmers should get a return of $3.32 a bushel if they wanted to make a profit with their 50 bushels an acre. This figure takes into account the various operating costs, taxes or land rental and machinery depreciation.

He said farmers cannot afford to receive less than $3.25 a bushel over any length of time or else "they will be in trouble financially."

Total domestic use and exports of U.S. wheat in the current marketing year are expected to fall below the record 1982 production of 2.82 billion bushels.

Carryover stocks will be substantially higher than a year earlier.

Domestic use likely will reach 865 million bushels, up two percent, but exports will be down to about 1.65 billion bushels.

World wheat output is forecast at 462 million metric tons, up four percent. Global wheat consumption is expected to rise about three percent but carryover stocks will be heavy. The United States holds about 44 percent of world stocks, up from 39 percent in 1982.

Prices should begin rising in late winter and early spring to bring the average farm price to around $3.45 a bushel, about 20 cents below last season's $3.65.

Some exonomists predict U.S. wheat prices could be 25-50 cents a bushel higher for this year's crop.

Tobacco Growing Changes

Virginia tobacco growers enjoyed both the good and the bad during 1981.

James L. Jones, Virginia Tech Extension agronomist at the Southern Piedmont Research and Continuing Education Center, noted that there was at least one record set during the year and the 1981 bumper crop resulted in less tobacco acreage.

For example, the flue-cured acreage quotas were reduced from 55,000 acres to 48,000 in 1982. Complete returns on the 1982 crop are not available as several of the markets are open.

Jones noted that the price supports for 1983 are expected to be at the same or slightly higher levels than 1982.

In 1981, the 8,400 flue-cured growers in Virginia sold 120.1 million pounds of tobacco for $165.90 per 100 pounds. The growers compensated for the reduced acreage by growing a record 2.185 pounds of leaf an acre.

Flue-cured tobacco primarily is used for cigarettes.

The 2.219 dark-fired tobacco growers raised approximately the same amount of tobacco in 1981 as they did in 1980--5.1 million pounds oin 4,100 acres. They received $131.20 per 100 pounds, up slightly from the $230.54 they averaged in 1980.

Dark-fired tobacco primarily is used for snuff and cigars with a great deal of the product being exported to other countries.

The burley tobacco producers grew 31.2 million pounds for an average of $180.30 per hundred pounds. The producers averaged 2,350 pounds per acre. The number of pounds was one million above the previous year while the price was up significantly from the 1981 figure of $143.57 per hundred pounds.

Jones said that burley, which primarily is used for cigarettes and chewing, includes between 10,000 and 11,000 growers on 16,650 farms with allotments.

The sun-cured tobacco grower continues to have the fewest numbers. The approximately 300 growers had 510 acres which produced 673,000 pounds or 1,320 pounds per acre. They only received an average of $131.70 per 100 pounds. Although the price was up about four dollars per hundred, Jones expects the number of growers to decline as prices do not make it worthwhile.

Sun-cured tobacco is used in chewing tobacco, snuff and for export.

Virginia In Top 10

More Poultry Consumed Production Not Rising

Virginians are, like their counterparts in the remaining 49 states, eating more poultry.

In fact, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) forecasters have said that its possible that final figures on 1982 consumption of poultry--including broilers, other chicken and turkey--may show it surpassed pork as the number two meat.

The USDA specialists said poultry consumption may average 61.8 pounds per person while pork consumption may drop to 55.8 pounds.

Despite the increased consumption, William D. Weaver, Virginia Tech Extension poultry specialist, predicted that broiler production during the year only will increase one percent while turkey numbers will be about the same.

He observed that in 1981, the latest year on which complete figures are available, Virginia poultry producers raised 134 million broilers which was up six percent over 1980 figures.

The state produced 10 million turkeys for the year which resulted in an income of $66.6 million. This means, he said, that producers in the state realized sales of over $290 million in broilers, turkeys and eggs.

He believed that the final compilation of 1982 production figures in broilers and turkeys will insure Virginia will remain among the top 10 poultry and turkey states in the nation.

Producer numbers did not change much in the past two years, Weaver said. He said there are approximately 1,000 broiler producers and 350 turkey growers.

The broiler growers are located in the Shenandoah Valley, Central Virginia, Eastern Shore, and the Suffolk areas while the turkey producers almost exclusively are found in Rockingham, Shenandoah and Agusta counties.

As for the outlook in 1983, Weaver said poultry producers can look to lower feed costs with prices averaging near the levels of this year. Feed costs represent about two-thirds of the total costs of production.

"Price rises are expected to be limited by the consumers being reluctant to pay more when their incomes are not growing. If there is a sharp upturn in the economy, prices may get stronger," the Extension specialist said.

He observed that the low cost of grain caused by the nation's record production has been a large help to poultry producers to make a little money despite the low prices.

If grain was in short supply and its prices high, many poultry producers in the state would be in a severe financial bind, he said.

Bane Or Barb

Virginia Off-Farm Income

The economic impact on the farms of Virginia was not harsh enough to cause liquidations this year, but it may be next year, say the financial advisers. The farmers themselves, however, are feeling the stress and strain now.

Financial experts view farms in the aggregate. The indication is that because 62 percent of Virginia's 56,869 farms are owned by those who farm them and the fact that may have off-farm income, the state has not seen the large number of foreclosures or farmers going out of business, as compared to the number in the West, said David M. Kohl, agricultural economist at Virginia Tech.

Virginia farmers have a great deal of equity. The amount of money borrowed has not been as great as in the western states. The typical Virginia farmer has debts amounting to about 13 percent of the assets--that's about 50 percent better than the national average.

"With that kind of equity, they have absorbed two to three years of low prices," said H. Earl Longest, general manager of the Richmond Association of Farm Credit. But in the next few years they will inevitably exhaust the ownership equity and there will be commercial farmers that can't make it. Agriculture is not profitable."

Virginia farmers are "hanging on," Kohl said. He expects they will continue to do so for another year--but that may be as long as they can go.

"If any of three critical factors change to the detriment of the farmers, the farmers will be in a bind," said Kohl, listing the factors as interest rising, adverse crop conditions, or changes in the price structure.

A farmer, however, may add another factor to the list--stress.

The farmers view farms in the singular instead of the aggregate. They too feel this year is definitely a crucial point in the transition of the family farm.

"The need for off-farm income to subsidize the farm will result in a different kind of individual in farming," said L. Chester Carter, a 26-year-old farmer from Stony Creek. It will not be one that has the dedication of today's farmers.

Today's farmers are being driven out by the stress. The farmer of just four or five years ago still had the initiative and ambition that was part of the image of the farm family working together to make a good life as well as produce food and fiber, he said. If a tractor broke down, for example, Carter said, he fixed it at night so he could be back in the field in the morning.

Now as the economy tightens, farmers are not able to receive prices for their crops and animals that allow them to pay their debts and continue farming. He sees Virginia farmers becoming seriously stressed and truly beginning to question if it is worth it to continue. He continued his analogy saying that the stressed farmer just goes home and plans to fix the tractor the next day. Then if the rain catches him, and he can't get the crop in, he has made a poor management decision.

It gets to be a vicious cycle, Carter described. The stress of farming and the low prices farmers receive for their produce cause emotional stress within the family, the team spirit deteriorates, and the farmers make poor management decisions.

"Then the lenders look at the farmer and say you're not doing a good job," Carter said.

The solution the lenders suggest is getting off-farm income to keep the farm going, he said.

Carter knows the problems. He helps his father take care of a service station and a bulldozer service in addition to running a 700-acre corn, soybean and hog operation.

"If farmers get in a depressed state, it really takes a strong family to hold together and not give in to selling out."

A farmer's drive to get the work done would be more if he were getting a fair wage, he said.

Virginia Beach 4-H

A Proud Agricultural Heritage

The Virginia Beach 4-H program is very proud of its deep agricultural heritage. In fact, much of its strength comes from ties to the Colleges of Agriculture at both Virginia Tech and Virginia State, Virginia's Land-Grant Universities.

Through the years the 4-H program has grown tremendously as a result of support from the many agricultural organizations who saw its value to farm boys and girls.

With the tremendous change in demographics as well as the changing needs of today's youth the 4-H program has expanded to many part of urban America. This is particularly true in Virginia Beach as the City's 4-H program enjoys the best of both worlds offering over 100 different projects and programs for both rural and urban youth without regard to race, sex, religion, or national origin.

During 1982 the 4-H enrollment in Virginia Beach exceeded 6,000 youth involving over 300 volunteers. Last year's 4-H Livestock Show and Sale involved over 52 youth from the Cities of Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, with the sale of their animals grossing $33,109. 4-H enrichment programs were conducted in forty-five of the City's Public Schools. Over 239 Virginia Beach youth were involved in 4-H summer camping programs at the Southeast 4-H Educational Center in Wakefield, Virginia.

The Southeast 4-H Educational Center is a dream come true for all citizens of Virginia Beach. Virginia Beach has pledged to raise $150,000 toward the continued development of the Southeast 4-H Educational Center. To date, over $64,000 has been raised towards this pledge.

Perhaps the most valuable attribute of 4-H is the fact that it teaches the development of individual life skills and talents. Statistics have shown that a tremendous value can be put on a young persons 4-H involvement. It costs approximately $20,000 to incarcerate a youth offender. Studies have shown that youth actively involved in 4-H have fewer problems dealing with lifes many challenges.

The Virginia Beach 4-H program is interested in the youth of the City. The program is also seeking parents who would like to give of their time and talents to assist with community 4-H groups throughout the City.

For more information regarding the Virginia Beach 4-H program please call the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/4-H Office at 427-4617.

WHY GMC DIESELS ARE GROWING ON MORE AND MORE FARMS.

Because farmers know a good piece of farm machinery when they see one. And that's just what GMC diesel trucks are.

Take that GMC pickup, for instance. It's powered by an optional 6.2 liter diesel. A real truck diesel engine. Built for work and plenty of it. With typical diesel economy.

Then there's our medium-duty diesel tandem-axle rig up there. Power is supplied by an available 8.2 liter Detroit Diesel Fuel Pincher. The Caterpillar 3208 diesel is also offered in GMC Top Kick models.

The point is, all your farm trucks, whatever the size or type can be economical GMCs. And if you already run other diesel equipment, you can standardize on diesel fuel for all your farm machines. Talk it over with your GMC truck dealer.

Use estimated MPG for comparison. Your mileage may differ depending on speed, distance, weather. Actual highway mileage lower. Estimates lower in California. Some GMC trucks are equipped with engines produced by other GM divisions, subsidiaries, or affiliated companies worldwide. See your GMC truck dealer for details.

Republican Rivalry In The 7th

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

It's not even spring, but already fall politics dances lightly on the cool sea breezes whispering over Virginia Beach.

There will be two state senate elections on the Nov. 8 ballot and a possible referendum on the direct election of the public school board. It's yet to be seen how many, if any, of Virginia Beach's five members to the House of Delegates will be challenged.

Attention thus far has been focused on the newly created 7th senatorial district. It covers the Kempsville and Bayside Boroughs, and lies west of an imaginary line that begins on the Chesapeake Bay at the Lynnhaven Inlet, down the river through Thalia, to Green Run, and southwest on to the Chesapeake border. The district was created a year ago by General Assembly redistricting actions.

In this race two republicans, at-large city council members Meyera Oberndorf and Harold Heischober, will vie for the Republican party nomination at a party convention scheduled for this June. Oberndorf made headlines recently for a slander suit filed against Heischober after last spring's councilmanic election, at which Heischober allegedly insulted some Council members.

The Democrats don't want interparty opposition going into the election. They will field one candidate, Dr. Clarance A. Holland, a former 12-year council member and former two-year mayor.

In the city's 8th senatorial district, which includes all of Virginia Beach not included in the 7th, veteran senator Joe Canada, a Republican, will likely face opposition from Democratic at-large city councilman Robert Jones, an attorney. "It's definitely possible that

Noona Supporters, Foes Point Accusing Fingers

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

The recent firing of Virginia Pops conductor Walter L. Noona, Jr., by the Norfolk-based Virginia Orchestra Group has resulted in Virginia Beach's city council being cast as referee in a brawl between two very stubborn boxers.

In one corner is the VOG, parent organization of the pops, which dismissed Virginia Beach native son Noona on March 3 when the maestro refused to accept a substantially altered contract for next season. In the other corner is the Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission and its chairman, James W. Roebuck, who asked council to withhold a $38,500 grant for the VOG's Pops series in favor of forming a new Virginia Beach Pops under Noona's direction.

The contest, thus far, has been a stalemate.

City council seems reluctant to mediate this bout. "I feel very strongly that we should not get involved in this," said Councilwoman Nancy A. Creech.

"It never does any good for city council to get involved in things like this because we are always the ones who wind up with black eyes," said Councilman J. Henry McCoy, Jr.

"I believe it would be ill-advised for council to get into this one," said Councilman H. Jack Jennings.

"I think we have to be careful at this point not to get swallowed up in the emotion of the situation," said Vice Mayor Barbara M. Henley.

Yet, the same council members may have already begun to take sides. "I will do whatever the Arts and Humanities Commission asks me to do," said Jennings. "I believe in following the recommendations of our boards and commissions because they represent the voice of the people."

Henley concurred. "I place pretty heavy weight on what the commission recommends," she said. "The commission has always demonstrated sound judgement in the past and I have always been open to their suggestions."

McCoy begged to differ. "The Arts and Humanities Commission is supposed to be advising council in an unbiased way," he said. "A lot of the commission's members are friends with Noona and I think that might be swaying their opinions. I've known the man since I was six, but I really think we ought to keep this issue at arm's length."

Added Creech: "I don't think we need another orchestra playing in Virginia Beach. Mr. Noona is a much loved figure and I respect him greatly, but there comes a time when you have to choose between what you personally want and what is best for the entire city."

"We are planning a full season next year of pops concerts at the Pavilion. Among the guest conductors we're planning is Henry Mancini. When it's all over, people are going to be saying, 'Walter who?' - VOG President's Clay H. Barr.

Council will formally address VOG funding in May when it begins work on the City's 1983-84 budget.

When the time comes for decision-making, council should opt to continue its promised funding, according to Clay H. Barr, president of the 61-member VOG. "When we voted to fire Mr. Noona, there never was any intent to slight Virginia Beach," she said. "We are planning a full season next year of pops concerts at the Pavilion. Among the guest conductors we're planning is Henry Mancini. When it's all over, people are going to be saying, 'Walter who?'

Schools' Curriculum Assessment Completed

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

"This is the real heart and soul of education," said Dr. E. E. Brickell, Virginia Beach's superintendent of public schools. "This will set a direction for us; give us a master plan. We may spend a lot of time on day-to-day junk, but this is what school is really all about."

Brickell was referring to the Virginia Beach Public Schools Curriculum Development and Assessment task force recommendations, a document he was recently presented by Sharron Smith, chairperson of the 36-member committee.

The report, which represented nearly two years' work by the task force, was based on input from 5,500 school system employees, 1,600 parents and students. The 140 recommendations contained in the report, which are expected to be adopted by the School Board, will shape the curriculum of public schools in Virginia Beach into the 21st Century. Brickell said School Board members will be given a presentation of the report at the regular April board meeting.

"There are certain things every child should have," said Smith, a U.S. studies teacher at Frank W. Cox High School. "They need increased math skills, exposure to the fine arts, improvement of communications skills and a basic emphasis on literacy."

To achieve these goals, Smith said the report contains "strong recommendations" for staff development. "In order to reach the point where we want Virginia Beach schools to be, there has to be an improving of methodology. Attitudes are going to have to change."

Added Brickell: "Changing attitudes is a little more difficult, but a lot more permanent."

Brickell, who had not yet read the report, said he would evaluate it thoroughly before making a presentation to the board. "I've heard bits and scratches about it, and from what I've heard I understand the committee has gone pretty much right down the line of a position paper I wrote two years ago," he said. Although no specifics were revealed, Brickell and Smith suggested that several notable changes were in store, including stricter graduation requirements, more required math and science classes, computer competency, and keeping students in school the entire day throughout the high school years.

"We're going to teach people to reason and to

Sciortino Says

Without More Money Prosecutions May Drop

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Paul A. Sciortino has put the State Compensation Board "on notice," and is also trying to rally public support.

Facing a budget cut of $45,000 from the compensation board, Sciortino will later this month try to persuade the board to increase his $862,252 budget by $162,801. This additional revenue would allow the purchase of one more computer and the employment of four more attornies.

The compensation board, however, may be tightfisted.

At a recent press conference, Sciortino in a press release, that said the compensation board has "indicated that it was unlikely that the state would supply the additional staff to continue to prosecute all criminal cases in all of the city's courts," Sciortino said in a press release.

This means, the press release said, that it "would be necessary to curtail the prosecution of less serious crimes in order to properly prepare for trial those cases which are more violent such as murder, rape and robbery."

Sciortino said that violent crime in Virginia Beach is up dramatically, and without proper funding, his office will continue to be stretched thin.

"Criminals do not cut back on the commission of crimes just because some bureaucrat in Richmond says that we cannot afford to prosecute them," Sciortino's press release said.

"I hope the citizens of Virginia Beach will find this state of affairs as

Beach Franchise Not 'Cut And Dry'

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

Choosing beach equipment rental franchises is proving to be anything but cut and dry. Although Virginia Beach City Council has gone through a bidding process to help in selecting the company or companies that will run the rental/lifeguard operations on the beachfront, members Monday afternoon apparently were reluctant to give up the old and acceptable for the new and unknown.

On the basis of the proposals of three companies, the city staff recommended that the franchises for both the north and south areas of the beach be awarded to Virginia Beach Patrol, Inc. The other two bidders were W.H. Kitchin Jr. who has operated the service at the north end and Ocean Rescue Service, Inc., who has operated the service at the south end. Kitchin submitted a bid for the north beach franchise and Ocean Rescue Service for both the north and south franchises.

Noona

The situation surrounding the dismissal of Walter Noona as conductor of the Virginia Pops orchestra is most unfortunate. Many old wounds have been reopened, and the healing process may take quite some time.

When the old Virginia Beach Pops merged with the old Norfolk and Peninsula symphonies, forming the present Virginia Orchestra Group, the aim was, and remains to this day, to forge a cohesive regional unit that would benefit citizens of all cities in Hampton Roads. Through the cooperative efforts of several cities, a first-rate professional orchestral ensemble would result. It was to be a pooling of resources.

Under the direction of Maestro Noona, the Pops flourished here in Virginia Beach as well as in Newport News and in Norfolk, where the orchestra also performed. Noona gained additional prestige for the VOG and for Virginia Beach by touring the United States as a guest conductor for other orchestras. He has been invited to return to 12 of the cities in which he has conducted. Additionally, Noona was named Virginia Beach's First Citizen in 1981.

Behind the scenes, however, the picture was not quite so rosy. Many VOG members, in effect the employers of Mr. Noona, were not completely satisfied with the maestro's conducting techniques and with his administrative performance. The VOG, as any dissatisfied employeer would, advised Noona of its displeasure and in essence demoted him. Noona, calling the proposed changes in his contract "degrading," said he would resign rather than accept a cut in salary and an elimination of his title as music director of the Pops. When Noona appeared before the Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission proposing a reformation of a new Beach Pops orchestra under his leadership, it was the straw which broke the VOG's back. He was dismissed by a 26-13 vote by the 61-member VOG.

Was the VOG right to attempt to reduce Noona's role with th Pops? Was Noona right to appear at the Arts and Humanities Commission meeting? Answers to these questions can only be speculative.

At issue now is the future of orchestra concerts in Virginia Beach. Arts and Humanities Commission Chairman James W. Roebuck has asked City Council to withhold its $38,500 grant for the VOG's Pops, and use the money instead to form a new Beach Pops under Noona.

Such a move would be ill-advised.

Noona's contributions to this city have been unquestioned. He has been an invaluable asset to the cultural and economic well-being of the resort city for a number of years. However, to create a separate Beach Pops merely to spite the VOG would be ludicrous.

The VOG has already laid plans for a full Pops schedule in the Pavilion next year featuring, among others, Henry Mancini as a guest conductor. Another group, The Virginia Beach Community Orchestra, provides semi-professional orchestra concerts at cheaper prices. The question is: could Virginia Beach support a third Pops orchestra?

These are hard times. The working man has only so many ways he can divide his working dollar. Arts patrons have only so many nights per month in which they can attend orchestra concerts. Further, any moves to create a Virginia Beach-only Pops group would probably cause polarization between the resort city and its neighbors.

All told, a Noona-led Beach Pops would be an unwise endeavor.—M.M.G.

Sciortino's Plea

Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Paul A. Sciortino painted a less than promising picture at a recent press conference.

In a press release, he writes, "that without additional prosecutors, it would be necessary to curtail the prosecution of all misdemeanors and some felonies." His curtailment actually means elimination.

Sciortino is faced with increasing numbers of cases to be tried, but with no more prosecutors with whom to prosecute them than Virginia Beach had in 1978.

"We can no longer handle the 1983 case load with the 1978 staff," Sciortino said. He needs more attornies, which costs more money.

Scirotino's office receives two-thirds of its funding from the State compensation Board in Richmond. The other third comes from the city. State budget cuts have adumbrated a projected $45,000 budget cut for Sciortino's department at a a time when he needs well over an extra $100,000 annually to keep up with a rising number of trial cases caused by Virginia Beach's constantly increasing population, coupled with the Virginia Beach Police Department's escalating arrest rates and rising crime trends.

Sciortino said the city had "not foreclosed us," and indicated that it may give his office funding for two more attornies. The State Compensation Board has, and can allocate the funds Sciortino needs, he says, but the city is not receiving them because the board is not reacting fast enough to meet the needs of Virginia's largest city. He will take his concerns to the board later this month. As far as the funding formula goes for each city, Sciortino's Deputy Commonwealth's Attorney Bob Humphreys said the board must "toss a coin" to decide what city gets how much money.

Sciortino said that if he doesn't get the money to hire more staff, he would have to "curtail the prosecution of less serious crimes in order to properly prepare for trial those cases which are more violent such as murder, rape and robbery."

Sciortino is required by law to prosecute cases in the Circuit, and Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, but he is not required to handle cases in General District Court, thus suggesting that criminals may go free due to lack of prosecution. In addition, he said, more police officers are finding themselves in the role of investigator as the commonwealth's attorney's staff stays overworked. Consequently, the police and sheriff departments are overworked, and public safety is jeopardized.

Sciortino is asking residents to write the governor, the State Compensation Board and legislators and ask for local funding support in the name of responsive law enforcement and criminal justice.—G.D.G.

Letters To The Editor

The School Board Election Question

Editor:

Appointments to various City Boards and Commissions have long been a source of concern to me. Having learned our elected body, City Council, had appointed a member of the Virginia Beach School Board whose wife is employed by that body as a teacher, I questioned, based on the State Conflict of Interest Law, whether this person could vote on the proposed school budget.

Attorney General Gerald L. Balilies, in an opinion dated February 25, 1983, states: "The material financial interest is employed at a general salary level where all employees within a class are treated equally and the matter before the board, the budget, is not directly related to the identity of a specific employee. I am, accordingly, of the opinion that the transaction in the instant case is one of general application. Therefore, the School Board member need not refrain from participating in the consideration of the budget." This is a blatant example of how the 'lawyer dominated' General Assembly in Richmond writes laws that sound good to the public yet are meaningless when it comes to protecting the public's best interest. No matter how you cut it, this person will benefit directly from any proposed salary increase as well as hospitalization, retirement benefits! With the exception of one Councilperson (Reba McClanan), all others voted on the School Board appointments this past December affirmatively which included the person in question, Rev. B.G. Campbell. As a result of this request, I learned that another member of the Virginia Beach School Board, James N. Fletcher, has a daughter employed as a teacher in Virginia Beach!

With the number of persons residing in the Kempsville Borough, surely a person with no direct ties to the School System could have, indeed should have been appointed.

If ever a case were to be made for direct election of the School Board, here it is! The public would be exposed to the background and affiliations of candidates and determine for themselves the person best able to chart the course for the care and nurturing of school children and their quest for knowledge. I honestly believe the voting, taxpaying public would be far more scrutinous in their selection. We must make a try at this! Petitions are being circulated to get this issue on the ballot November 8, 1983. The question on the petition (as it will appear on the ballot) reads: "Shall the members of the Virginia Beach School Board be selected by popular election of the qualified voters?"

Let's show that bunch in Richmond and our City Council that the taxpaying public does care and can make a difference.

St. Patrick's Day

Learn About Patty At Library

Library SUNlines

By Beach Librarian Carolyn Powell

As Virginia Beach residents get ready to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, it may be appropriate to sit back, sip your green beer and contemplate this particular holiday and the saint for which it is named.

St. Patrick was born in the vicinity of Dunbarton, Scotland around 384 A.D. to a family of successful Christians, his father an official in the Roman government. The young boy's name was Maewyn, Patrick being derived later from his writings where he referred to himself as patricius, or well-born. At 16, Patrick was captured by Irish raiders and carried into slavery in Ulster under the High O'Neill. He served as a shepherd for six years finding comfort for his loneliness in prayer. He would leave Ireland on board ship and would escape again after reaching France with the intent of devoting his life to God. After study in Europe, Patrick heard a voice urging him to return to Ireland and after further study and preparation would return as a bishop sometime after 431 A.D.

Moving from place to place among the predominantly Druidic Celts, he preached Christianity seeking ways to combine the old and new religions together. After 30 to 40 years he made his home in Armagh and it became the Church center for Ireland. He is said to be buried near the River Quile in Downpatrick, County Down, Northern Ireland. After his death, many stories and legends became entwined in the truths of the historical St. Patrick making up the folklore we know today.

St. Patrick's Day is the observation of the day of his death, not birth. Originally, the day was a religious holiday, becoming more festive and secular as time passed. Over the centuries, as the Irish people continually struggled for independence, St. Patrick became a symbol of their determination for survival.

Immigrants brought their traditions with them to the New World. The first celebration of St. Patrick's Day probably occurred in Boston in 1737 under the sponsorship of a group known as the Charitable Irish Society of Boston. It was a Protestant social relief organization. The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, made up of both Catholics and Protestants, began celebrations in Philadelphia in 1784. As more and more Irish immigrants entered the United States to escape the potato famines of the 1840's, they encountered hostility and discrimination: They clung to their traditions and St. Patrick's Day became an expression of pride in their heritage. By the end of the 19th century, observation of the holiday was widespread. Today it has lost much of its real reaming. The holiday has become a commercial, secular, particularly Americanized holiday wherein everyone professes to at least a drop of Irish blood.

Take a moment, then, to reflect on the real man and the real meaning behind the day. It is in the mingled history and legend of our respective heritages that we can find ourselves. Dia's Muire agus Padraig dhuit.

Further information on St. Patrick and St. Patrick's Day celebrations can be found in the various Virginia Beach Area Libraries. There's No Hole In His Soul

Citizen-of-the-Week this week is Jessee Austin, a first line foreman and maintenance supervisor for the city's highway department.

Whenever there is a sidewalk that needs mending or a pothole which needs patching, Austin and his nine-man crew are likely to be on the scene.

"He's a good man, a good worker and most of all, he knows his job when it comes to concrete," said Clarence Grimstead, Austin's supervisor. "We have several crews, but our top crew is Jessee's. They get the job done right every time." Austin was nominated by Joe Russell, director of highway operations for the city.

Austin, 46, was found last week repairing a curb on the corner of 31st street and Pacific Avenue in the resort section of Virginia Beach. "We go everywhere in the city and believe me, it's a big city."

A Roanoke native, Austin has worked for the City of Virginia Beach for nearly seven years. "I really enjoy this city and contributing to it in any way I can," he said.

Winter is generally a busy time for highway maintenance crews, but this winter has been different, according to Austin. "For the first time in several years there hasn't been a whole lot of snow or really bad weather," he said. "It's made our job a whole lot easier."

Every morning, Austin leaves his wife, Annette, and his children, Jesse, Jr., 20, and Cathy, 17, for a 7 a.m. arrival at the highway maintenance yard on Landstown Road. Often, Austin does not punch out until well after the 5 p.m. quitting time. "I don't mind the hours," he said. "It's all a part of the job.

"The best part of this job," Austin concluded, "is being in the outdoors. That alone makes the long hours and the hard work all worthwhile."

Send your nominations for citizen-of-the-week to The Virginia Beach Sun, 138 S. Rosemont Road, Virginia Beach, VA 23452.

New School Textbooks

Several new textbooks which have been recommended for adoption for use in the public schools of Virginia Beach will be on display at several locations throughout the city, beginning immediately. Several subject area texts are under consideration this year.

On the elementary school level, spelling, handwriting, and music textbooks for all grades will be considered; on the secondary level, physical science, applied physical science, earth science, applied earth science, biology, and chemistry textbooks will be recommended.

The texts under consideration will be on display at each of the five branches of the Virginia Beach Public Library through April 18. In addition, the books will be on display at the School Administration Building at Princess Anne until the day of the regular School Board meeting, Tuesday, April 19, 1983, at 2 p.m.

During that meeting, the School Board will take action on the adoption of the recommended textbooks. Should the recommendation of the Department of Instructional Services be accepted and the texts adopted, they will go into usage in the fall of this year and remain in use at least through June 30, 1989.

Trible Hosts Beach Students

Virginia Senator Paul Trible met with visiting Virginia Beach Presidential Classroom students. The students spend a week in Washington, visiting the House and Senate, meeting with top officials and learning about the federal government.

Voice Of The People

Regarding assaults, should police officers be afforded more protection than civilians?

"I think so. Policemen are out there in the streets with their lives on the line more than other citizens. It's not that I'm any great friend of the cops mind you, but I really think that they need more protection."

George Omohundro
Painter
20-year resident

"I really think that there ought to be more protection for the police. They're exposed to a lot more violent situations than average people. I've wanted to hit a cop many times, but I didn't because I thought I'd be in big trouble. Now I could get into even worse trouble. I guess it's a good idea."

Ricky Zieglar
Gas station attendant
21-year resident

"Nobody respects policemen. It's a real shame because they are the ones who have been given the responsibility of protecting us, yet they can't even protect themselves. I'm glad that they are thinking about affording more protection to policemen."

Maria Dagostino
Word processor trainee
Five-year resident

"The fact that a man in a police uniform doesn't necessarily mean that he is above unprofessional actions. If a policeman initiates violent action, he should expect a similar reaction. The citizen has the right to defend himself without going to prison. I realize police face a lot of violence, but they still shouldn't be elevated above the citizenry.

Richard Hellinger
Administrative aide
Eight-year resident

Beach's Miss Virginia - USA

This Year They Were Looking For A Blonde

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Virginia Beach's Tanquil Lisa Collins, the newly-hailed 1983 Miss Virginia—USA, is no stranger to winning.

In high school the honor roll student was selected three times to the homecoming court, and named homecoming princess in her senior year. She was homeroom president, a cheerleader, a student journalist, a member of the foreign language club (Latin and Spanish), and ran track one year for the girl's and two years on the men's team. In 1978 she ran a 55-second 440 yard sprint that set a state record.

"Tai," as she is known to her friends, is still athletic, running two miles a day, swimming regularly, and bicycling. But the demands of serving as Virginia's latest beauty queen, coupled with the responsibilities of being a manager/assistant buyer for a local clothing store, will be a new hurdle for her to jump. Not to mention her contemplation of attaining the title of Miss Universe.

Tai, 5' 8", 110 lbs., moved to Virginia Beach two years ago, last December. The daughter of a Roanoke clothes buyer, Norma, and a former baker, Hivett, she is a Ronoke native and has two brothers and a sister. Her father, now living in Colorado, is disabled, the result of a stroke at the age of 33. His entire right side was affected. One of her brothers, Timmy, 21, is also disabled, the result of an automobile accident when he was 16, which broke his neck. He finished his junior and senior years in a wheelchair, and in one year instead of two years. He is now working with braces.

A 1980 graduate of Patrick Henry High School, Tai attended Virginia Western Community College for a year and a half, studying biology with aspirations of becoming a professional journalist.

"That's what I thought I wanted to be," Tai, 20 years old, said. "But I wasn't sure what I wanted to do."

Tai quit college, moved to Virginia Beach and took a job in the sportswear department of LaVogue's, where she was later placed in charge of accessories. She worked there for about a year and then went to work at GiGi's at Hilltop, and next moved to Margot's, Laskin Road, where she now works.

Tai, one of 74 contestants at the recent Miss Virginia-USA Pageant, held at King's Dominion, was also one of 2,500 applicants. She entered the pageant for her grandmother, but admits she had always wanted to.

"I've always dreamed of winning a pageant," she said "Every year I've faithfully watched them. It's like a dream come true.

"My grandmother had always wanted me to be in one and sent me a little ad out of the paper," she continued, "and I sent away for an application."

The application requested a picture and information, such as the applicant's measurements, eye and hair color, accomplishment's in life and future ambitions.

Tai said there were about eight contestants from Tidewater in the pageant, six of whom were originally from Virginia Beach. The first-runner-up was from Portsmouth.

"More Glamorous"

The first week in May, Tai will represent Virginia in the Miss USA pageant in Knoxville, Tenn., whose winner will go on to compete in the Miss Universe pageant, to be held this summer in Columbia.

The Miss USA pageant differs from the Miss America pageant. The nine Miss USA judges look primarily for facial beauty, physique, and personality. Miss America judges look for scholastic ability, talent, and then beauty.

"This one is more glamorous," Tai said, "It goes on to Miss Universe."

In the future Tai hopes to open her own business in Virginia Beach, noting, "it looks like I'm going to. I've had a lot of offers."

She doesn't want to open a small shop,she said, but wants to find an old three-story house, refurbish it, and sell gifts and china on one floor and Couture clothes on the other two.

She would prefer not to open it near the ocean-front.

"I'd rather have the locals and not the tourists," she said. "The locals are here all year 'round."

Tai has been modeling since the age of 10, and hopes to pursue that avenue more seriously after she opens a business. Her modeling experience helped ease the pageant pressure of being scrutinized by the cameras, audience and the judges.

"I've been modeling for a long time, so I'm pretty used to it," she said. "I wasn't nervous at all through the whole pageant until I was one of the 15 finalists. Then I was more shocked than nervous."

At the pageant, Tai focused on the judges and on not letting the audience or cameras distract her.

"I concentrated on the judges, eye contact is real important," she said. "You want to make them look at you."

This year's pageant ended with four of the five finalists having blonde hair.

"Every year they're looking for a different look," Tai said. "Obviously this year they were looking for a blonde."

Virginia has had the most winners in the Miss USA pageant's history, Tai said, and is also the only state to have back to back winners, in 1969 and '70. In 1970 a Virginia Beach resident, Debbie Shelton, won the Miss USA pageant. In the 1950's Virginia Beach also had a Miss USA winner.

"I just feel honored they picked me to represent Virginia," she said. "Virginia has an excellent record in the Miss Universe pageant." Donna Dixon, featured on the television show "Busom Buddies," was the 1976 Miss Virginia-USA. "That's how she got started in television," Tai noted.

Tai wants to be a businesswoman, but she also wants to marry and have a family. She likes Virginia Beach for its boardwalk, beaches and the sun.

She also likes being a winner, but hasn't let her latest victory go to her head.

"I guess everybody loves to be a winner, it's exciting," Tai said. It's funny though. Now I sign autographs but I'm still Tai Collins. People think you're different because you win something like that."

Tai's prizes for winning the pageant include: the use of a new 1983 Plymouth for one year; a full-length rabbit coat; a portable stereo system; a home video; a necklace with a Miss Universe emblem; her winning pageant sash; the pageant crown; a small pin in the shape of the crown; $3,000 in cash ($1,000 from Maybelline, $10,000 from the pageant committee, and $1,000 from Hawaiian Tropic); $200 worth of Hawaiian Tropic products; $250 worth of Maybelline products; a trophy; and pictures from the pageant. The pageant committee will also pay for all of her pictures in the future, and for Tai's traveling and lodging expenses while traveling as the reigning Miss Virginia-USA.

Tai's other brother is John, 26, an artist. Her sister is Bambi, 23, who works in a specialty shop. Tai lives at the Hilltop area of Virginia Beach.

"I guess everybody likes to be a winner, it's exciting. It's funny though. Now I sign autographs but I'm still Tai Collins. People think you're different because you win something like that."

600 Attend Fights

Virginia Beach boxing fans include Jenise Batchelor and Lee Goldstiker

Beach businessmen Stanley Bennett, president, Surf Rider Sports, Inc., produced the fights.

Lainhart, Harris, Bush, Hurley Win

Approximately 600 fight fans attended a night of professional boxing, held recently at Rogue's in Virginia Beach.

Of the seven fights on the card, five of the bouts featured Virginia Beach boxers, or kick-boxers.

Virginia Beach fights included:

Ric "The Bomber" Lainhart of Virginia Beach, now 6-4, knocked out Richmond's John Greene in the fifth round of a scheduled six-rounder.

Virginia Beach's Ricky Butts, 1-1, was knocked out in the first round in a welterweight battle with Charles Carter of Charlottesville, 3-3.

Virginia Beach's Pete Harris, 3-4, knocked out Carl Phillips, 1-1, in round one in a light heavyweight fight.

Virginia Beach kick-boxer Curtis Bush pulled a first round knockout on Portsmouth's Charles Davis. Virginia Beach kickboxer Jim Hurley stopped Virginia Beach's David James in round 1.

Ricky Butts, a four-year member of the Virginia Beach Boxing Club, had the most talent of anyone on the April 17 card, one observer said.

Mike Vaughan, the club president said, "Ricky Butts was the most talented fighter that night on the card. He knew he had a piece of cake and relaxed and got hit. That wouldn't happen again if the guy fought Ricky 1,000 times."

Amateur boxing is scheduled at Rogue's for April 21, Vaughan said.

Safety Is Council's First Concern

Equipment Rental franchises, reported that the ciriteria used in making the recommendation highlighted the safety of the Beach and the qualifications of the bidders with the fee considered only as a tie-breaker.

He said Beach Patrol offers innovations which will provide for a much safer beach than offered in the other bids. The innovations, in fact, appeared to be the deciding point. Also given as reasons were the experience of the vice president, Edward Kuehn, who will serve as beach captain, and the quality of the bid.

Councilman Robert G. Jones summed up the attitude of Council members Monday afternoon when he said he belonged to the school that believed that if the pump isn't broken, don't fix it. He said that Council asked for bids for the franchises, the first time ever, because of concerns about violating the anti-trust laws and because of the reportedly extreme profitability of the operations.

He said he did not think that a gain for the city should be a trade-off against the safety of the public. He expressed concern that the city, which had a "working pump," now had a bid for a pump with whistles which works no better. Based on the innovations and the experience of the bidder, Jones said he could not go along with the staff.

Fees offered by the bidders for the five year franchise period were, for area #1, the north end, Ocean Rescue Service, Inc., $83,397; Kitchin, $4,566, and Virginia Beach Patrol, Inc., $62,548, and for area #2, the south end, Ocean Rescue, $20,849; Ocean Rescue, $62,548, contingent on receiving the Area #1 franchise as well, $62,548, and Virginia Beach Patrol, $62,548.

As a result of the uncertainty over making a decision, Council has asked that the three bidders meet with Council next Monday at 11 a.m. before the meeting where a decision will be made.

Council also asked for a report from Grochmal on how the present operations work.

Grochmal said that the task force felt that all the bidders were qualified.

Councilman John A. Baum pointed out that Council did not have much time to decide. The successful bidder will have two months to get ready for the summer season if the contracts are awarded Monday. He said that since the recommendations have been made public, Council, if it went contrary to the recommendation, would have to say why. He said that people often say what they will do, but don't always follow through.

Grochmal said he could not assume that any bidder would do more than he stated. He said that since the bids were opened, all of the bidders had the opportunity to review bids of the others.

Baum said that in his experience with the Federal government, the government often ended up with what appeared to be the best contract but that it cost the government money. He said he hoped everything worked out for the best, but he had misgivings.

Mayor Louis R. Jones asked whether Kuehn, who would run the operation, was a stockholder.

Grochmal replied that he was listed as vice president, but not as a stockholder. E.Christopher Worrell, president, said later that he holds the majority of the stock and will oversee the operation. Kuehn is not a stockholder, but Worrell said he has stock option. Worrell operates Worrell Brothers Restaurant at 1910 Atlantic Avenue and is a former lifeguard.

Mayor Jones said that Kuehn could leave and "we'd not have a qualified person running the service." He added that the opening up of the area for franchises started over the projection of amillion dollars in revenues. "The bids don't reflect a million in revenues. Where is the million?"

He suggested that most of the points submitted as

Oceana C. O. Tinker Wins Navy Gold Star

Captain C.L. Tinker, Naval Air Station Oceana Commanding Officer, recently received a Gold Star in lieu of a second Meritorious Service Medal during a recent ceremony. Rear Admiral J.H. Fetterman, Commander Tactical Wings Atlantic, presented the award which cited Captain Tinker's superior leadership while in command of NAS Whiting Field, Florida from August 1980 to July 1982.

The citation noted that Whiting Field became the first Naval activity to complete a study on contracting base operating services during Captain Tinker's tenure. Under his guidance, the station runways and air traffic control tower were completely renovated without disruption of intense flight training schedules. He gained support of local civil and government groups after presenting a comprehensive Air Installation Compatible Use Zone study for the properties adjacent to Whiting Field. He also implemented a Human Resources Management Department and established a Family Services Center two full years prior to funding.

Rear Admiral Fetterman recognized that Captain Tinker has carried this same professionalism and competency to his duties as the commanding officer of NAS Oceana.

The Race Against Time

Life is one evil race
Against the speed of time
It can make you, or break you
Or laugh at you with a piercing rhyme.
So turn the other cheek,
And the stinging blow will pass you by
For if you don't find the dream you seek,
At least you gave it a try.
It's not too late for tomorrow
Unless you bow to King Sorrow
So be off, and on your way
Thank God man, you lived another day.
Don't stand powerless
Against the elements of hatred
They'll stomp you out,
And knock you about
Until things seem hopeless
So don't falter, and keep a strong head.
Thank God man, you're not dead.

By Lesley Ann Doyle, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Doyle. Lesley is a junior at First colonial High School.

Poem

Lizards are small,
And sometimes green.
They hide under rocks,
And make you scream.
They live in the desert,
They scamper and run,
And as far as I know they
Are not much fun!
They live in the sand,
Eat bugs and flies,
And this is what keeps
Them alive!

By Shannon Kimberly Bloor, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bloor. Shannons is a fifth grader at Newtown Road Elementary School.

My Animal

I know a polar bear
Who lives in a zoo.
He's big, white and fuzzy,
And his nose is blue.
His nose is blue
'Cause he likes it real cold.
He's strong and courageous,
Powerful and bold.
He looks real friendly
But you better beware,
Don't get too close,
'Cause he'll give you a good scare!

By Edgardo (Eddie) Crosby Layseg, 10, son of Edgardo G. and Carol Jeanne Layseg. Eddie is a fifth grader at Newtown Road Elementary School.

Dear Mr. Reagan,

I think you should work on something different this year. Something like making new laws or having a day off and let Mr. Bush do all the work that you do. You are a good president for the United States. Why don't you mow your lawn?

Your friend,
Jason

2-Year Study Is Completed

solve problems," said Brickell. "I wish people would spend as much time worrying about trigonometry as they do about making the cheerleading squad. These are the kinds of attitudes we are trying to change."

The project began in July, 1981, when the five-member Curriculum Assessment and Development team, appointed by Brickell and headed by Virginia Beach Public Schools Director of Curriculum Assessment and Development, Dr. Benjamin L. Troutman, began gathering data. Members of the team met with every employee of the school system to discuss their ideas about the future of Virginia Beach schools.

Exemplary schools systems throughout the country were visited, and noted educational consultants visited Virginia Beach. Three public hearings were held in which citizens expressed their ideas on the matter. Then, the 36-member task force, composed of teachers, students, curriculum assistants, administrators and citizens at-large, drafted a new philosophy and goals statement, which was adopted by the School Board last fall.

Meanwhile, once all the data was in, the team and task force devised an initial set of proposals for curriculum. A citizens advisory group was appointed by Brickell to review those proposals and to offer suggestions.

Again, the team met with every school system employee to discuss the proposals. The final recommendations were assimilated during the first two months of 1983.

The result is a comprehensive, 88 page document. With School Board approval, all that is left is implementation of the report, which Brickell said could commence with ninth-grade students next fall.

More than $200,000 has already gone into the project according to Brickell, and another $250,000 has been requested from the 1983-84 budget, he said.

"It was always a labor, and sometimes a labor of love," noted Smith. "The reason I can come to Dr. Brickell today and smile as I present him with this report is that I am confident of all the support the task force has received. The key to this has been the involvement of literally hundreds and hundreds of people."

It's "Possible" R. Jones Will Challenge Canada

I will run," Jones told The Sun.

Recently, The Sun discussed politics and their candidacies with Oberndorf and Heischober. An interview with Holland, Jones, and Canada will be forthcoming.

Oberndorf

At home in Carolanne Farms, Oberndorf discussed many things.

She's not in favor of a convention because voters have to pay to vote. "I'm not in favor of poll taxes," the former 10-year chairman of the Virginia Beach Library Board said. Oberndorf is also the first woman ever elected to council and is currently chairman of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission.

Oberndorf doesn't plan to spend huge amounts of money on her campaign. "I've never had the luxury of a massive campaign chest," she said, "but in exchange I've had the liberty to vote my conscience and do as I please."

Her campaign manager is her husband Roger, an engineer for the Norfolk Ford assembly plant. Her treasurer is Larry Carper.

Oberndorf knows her name has been publicized more than Heischober's and attributes it to "living in the real world," which is a brief way of saying she's involved with many local, state and national activities.

Oberndorf, if elected, said she would call for a regional caucus of lawmakers to meet regularly and determine if state laws are equitable to all localities.

She has run once before the Senate.

Heischober

Meeting in Heischober's office at his car dealership on Virginia Beach Boulevard, he said he doesn't consider himself a politician. "That word has some overtones," he said. "I don't think being in government is necessarily being a politician."

Heischober has never run for the senate, but first became involved in the local legislative process in 1952 during a Norfolk city council race. He became interested at the state level in 1964 as chairman of the legislative committee of the Virginia Automobile Dealer's Association.

Heischober has been active with several state republican gubernatorial elections, and congressional. He has had state appointments, and has served as president of the Virginia Automobile Dealers Association and of the Tidewater Automobile Dealers Association.

Heischober has the support of his family and friends in his civic endeavors, and says he's looking for a state office because "I have nowhere else to go in the legislative capacity." He has "no intention" of running against Delegate Buster O'Brien, who represents the district in which Heischober lives.

Heischober's campaign managers for the convention are Shirley Sudduth, and Loretta Tate.

Potential candidates have until April 15 to file.

Petitions

Vivian Hitchcock is circulating petitions calling for the direct election of the public school board. She needs 15,220 names to have the question in the form of a referendum for the Nov. 8 ballot.

The questions read, "...shall the members of the Virginia Beach School Board be selected by popular election of the qualified voters?"

Detectives Seeking Robber

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is seeking information about an armed robbery that occurred on Dec. 12, 1982, at the Econo-Travel, at 5819 Northampton Boulevard.

On that Sunday at 10:25 p.m., a man waled up to the front door of the lodge and, after the clerk unlocked the door, asked the clerk for change for a dollar. Once inside, the man pulled a sawed-off shotgun from under his coat and demanded money from the cash register. The clerk was also robbed of his wallet.

A police composit

The robber left through the same door and was last seen walking westbound on Northampton Boulevard.

The suspect was described as a black male, with black hair and brown eyes, in his mid twenties, between 5' 10" and 6' tall, and about 155 pounds. He was light skinned, had a thin mustache, and spoke with a soft southern accent.

At the time of the robbery, he was wearing a tan or cream color coat and a knit winter hat.

Anyone with information about this or any other robbery is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers are eligible for cash rewards of up to $1,000 when an arrest is made.

The Crime Solvers program pays cash for information about any crime, and for information that leads to the arrest of wanted persons or the recovery of drugs or stolen property. You do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

"A man ought to read just as inclination leads him, for what he reads as a task will do him little good."

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

November 12, 1979

I have managed, not to quit smoking, but to wean myself from cigarettes to what many consider a less harmful form of smoking.

I smoke a pipe and though I have always smoked a pipe to some extent, I now smoke a pipe to the exclusion of all other forms of smoking.

I would like to do more but I cannot; and I know that the twenty-four-hour Great American Smokeout will be, for me, an exercise in guilt.

My colleagues will parade their smokeless selves by my desk and shake their heads sadly at my degradation; and I will feel guilty—from behind a cloud of smoke.

The Hint Man

Crazy Glue, Removing - The best thing to use is a soft cloth soaked in fingernail polish remover.

Cream, Preventing Curdling - Adding a pinch of bicarbonate of soda before mixing or beating will prevent cream and milk from curdling or souring.

Curtains, Removing Smoky Smell - To remove a smoky smell from curtains, simply soak for at least two hours in cold water to which powdered borax has been added. Then wash in the usual way.

Cut Glass, Cleaning - Dip a nail brush in warm water (no soap). Shake the brush out, then dip in baking soda. It'll come up sparkling.

Tinkering With Deserts, Some Have A Peel

(Thank you very much for the great response I've received over the past few weeks. Other columns to follow will continue to be as exciting as the first. Keep the recipes and letters coming.)

Everyone has an eye-a-peel for the banana and other fruits that bring us all so close to nature. That's just the way I anticipated my reaction would be when I was interviewing Mrs. Jean Parker, grandmother of 6, who has loved in Portsmouth over 35 years. In our first conversation she said, "I never write down the recipes". After being convinced that I was not one to give-up, she not only gave forth a banana delight, but also gave me another handy hint for cooking fresh ham.

The Chopping Block

By PAT BEASLEY

Now that the end of winter is upon us, 'Thank The Lord', this recipe sounds 'Real Inviting'.

With the air still somewhat brisk, what could be better than a cup of coffee or hot chocolate and these cheesy bacon puffs? Sounds like a good breakfast or brunch to me.

These muffins are nearly a meal in themselves with crumbled bacon and maple syrup and a cube of natural cheddar cheese inside added to convenient buttermilk baking mix.

Bite into them - meltingly delicious. Try and Enjoy!

NOTES

I hate to do it but I will have to bring to bear the ultimate weapon at my command: I plan to fix each one with an icy stare and ask: "When was the the last time you wrote to your mother?"

November 28, 1979.

According to reports that have been circulating all week, there's a photographer from Playboy Magazine in Tidewater on a recruiting mission; that being, to recruit women in uniform.

I guess that's misleading. The fellow from Playboy is looking for women who might otherwise be in uniform if they were not auditioning for an appearance in the pages of Playboy magazine.

We have been unable to get a clear statement of policy from the military as to just how out of uniform one has to be to incur the wrath of the brass. But, as I understand it, the policy of Playboy would dictate that the women in question be extremely out of uniform.

I wouldn't know for sure, of course. I only read the articles.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

HINTS

Dogs, Itching and Scratching - To stop the itching and scratching, sprinkle the dog or cat with powdered brewer's yeast and rub it in with the ends of your fingers. Even if they lick it off, it won't hurt them; brewer's yeast is good for them.

Or mix three tablespoons of olive oil with one tablespoon of sulphur and rub it onto the area of itching. This is also a good healer.

Dogs, Keeping Them Off Your Property - Buy one-half ounce of oil of cloves at the drugstore, then mix it with one gallon of warm water. Fill a spray bottle and spray your grass, steps, and sidewalk. One spray a week is usually enough to keep them away.

Dogs and cats also hate hot pepper. Run a hot pepper through your blender, add an equal amount of warm water plus a teaspoon of liquid detergent. Strain and spray it onto the area using a spray bottle if possible.

Dog and Cat Rinse - The best rinse is one-half cup of dry or fresh rosemary in one quart of water. Boil, remove from heat, and let it cool. Strain it if using fresh rosemary. When it's cold, pour it, a cupful at a time, over the dog or cat. If possible, let them dry in the sunshine so toweling wont be necessary.

Chuck Faulkner is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Chuck Faulkner. The book is available in most book stores.

Beware Of Gimmicks

Despite escalating premiums, today's homeowner stands to make a "wise buy" with an investment in home insurance, reports Consumers Digest in the March/April issue. Even very affluent families would find it hard to survive an unpredictable disaster that destroyed their home--so most people wonder "How much is enough?" Appropriately, the title of this article.

"Too many consumers let insurance agents tell them what gimmick their company has to offer," comments one of the many insurance professionals interviewed for the article. "The consumer should tell the agent what coverage is required!"

Homeowners can only know how much is enough if they look carefully at both the home and its contents, and compare-shop policies, which vary widely in strengths and weaknesses. "It's better to clarify your needs before buying the policy than to discover them when it's too late," Advise the editors of Consumers Digest. "Premiums for an inappropriate policy are too expensive no matter how low they are."

One way homeowners can economize is to install safety features that encourage discounts, such as smoke detectors or fire and burglary alarms. Homes built since 1973--or updated since then--also can earn discounts on many policies. And if you're buying or building a new home, you can hold premiums down by building or acquiring a structure with better than average fire protection (A brick home will cost less to insure than a wood home). If your town has a volunteer fire department, chances are your taxes will be less--but home insurance premiums are higher!

Consumers Digest also suggest checking differences between HO1, HO2 and HO3 levels of coverage. HO1 rates may be much lower than HO3 rates with certain companies, and homeowners with older structures might want to opt for HO1 or HO2. The wisest way to economize, say the editors, it is to avoid being overinsured. Homeowners can hire an independent appraiser to compute replacement costs, and check that against the construction cost index, which is used to determine a value of a house, and may be imprecise.

An inflation guard endorsement, found on many homeowner policies, is another way many homes become overinsured. The inflation guard endorsement automatically adjusts to the value of a structure in tune to rising inflation. Unfortunately, consumers Digest points out, an insurance company can write itself an automatic increase that exceeds inflation! "If you ask for an inflation guard endorsement, watch over it," warn the editors. "And if you don't have it, watch the inflation rate and adjust coverage upward as needed."

Consumer Digest also advises "replacement cost contents" as additional coverage, though it may cost 10-15% more on the premium. It guarantees that the insurance company will pay for or replace the contents of your house, new or old. That additional coverage costs only $24 above the base premium with the American family "Gold Star" policy and $43 on a State Farm policy.

Since a standard homeowners policy covers contents to a limit of 50% of the insured value of the house, Consumers Digest advises collectors to protect their antiques, stamps and other valuables. Single limit policies add the value of home and contents together, and allow for complete recovery if either structure or contents is lost.

Even after your policy is in effect, Consumers Digest suggests preventative tips that could alleviate loss from flood, fire ore theft:

•Keep valuables in lower drawers. In a fire, those drawers are the last to burn. Always keep copies of important documents offsite in a safe place.

•The more solidly books are packed in a bookcase, the better their chance to survive a fire.

•Be sure that you have the proper documentation that your insurance company requires for proof of ownership.

•Keep items that may not be insurable in fire-resistant, tamper-proof boxes.

Mayors Breakfast Scheduled

Thursday, November 17, 1983 is the date set for the 8th annual Tidewater Mayors Prayer Breakfast.

Contract To Norfolk Firm

Chesapeake Enterprises, Inc. of Norfolk is the recipient of a significant contract to provide mess attendant services at the Naval Air Station at Quantanamo Bay, Cuba.

M. Hawley Smith, Director of the Richmond District Office of the U.S. Small Business Administration announced execution of the contract. Valued at $472,000, the contract was awarded under the SBA's 8(a) program. Participants in the 8(a) program are firms that have been declared socially and economically disadvantaged by Public Laws 95-507 and 96-481. The intent of the program is to assist such firms in achieving specified business development goals which will ultimately lead to a higher degree of comparability with non-disadvantaged firms.

"I Had A Dream"

By Rip Coard

David Colvin "had a dream." David is owner of the Cedar Cove Inn, an elegant new restaurant located in the Fernwood Section, off Great Bridge Boulevard and on the Albemarle Canal in Chesapeake. He and his wife Robin, brought a wealth of experience to the new venture. The husband-wife team also have successful restaurant/lounges in Norfolk and Virginia Beach, but this one, said Dave is "exciting" and "my every waking hour is spent in finding ways to make it even better." The property Cedar Cove is situated on is practically surrounded by inland waterways that provide a beautiful setting for dining. From practically every vantage point, one can enjoy the view through large picture windows. The interior is served by a tremendous bar situated center-room, a seafood bar, banquet room for fifty, fireplace for elegant and romantic fireside dining and the warmth of natural wood and beautiful greenery throughout.

The patio will seat over 200 in the summer, and there are plans for an enormous playground for the kids adjacent to the arch-style patio.

Situated as it is, the Marina, docking facilities and gas stations serve the boating community well. Add the interior seating capacity of 170 to the 50 in the banquet room and potential 200 on the patio and it doesn't take long to realize this is an enormous restaurant.

"I had a dream," said Dave last week, "and it's coming to fruition." Colvin is so right! Having eaten at the Cedar Cove Inn on two occasions already, I and many of my staff can attest to the fact that Dave Colvin "has arrived," and Chesapeake is to be well served by his arrival! The food, prepared by Chef Spike Markatos, formerly of Athens, Greece and a highly professional, totally creative "old-country-chef" with over 27 years experience, is superb.

The service is the friendliest down-home style I've witnessed for such an elegant restaurant. It is a pleasure to be served so quickly and courteously.

A class act, unlike any other in Chesapeake to our knowledge.

Peugeot, Europe's second largest automaker, has developed robots to drive cars on company test grounds in eastern France. The robots occupy the rear seat of a test car; the front (shown here) accommodates a computer on the passenger side and on the driver's side, complex machinery manipulates the clutch, brakes, accelerator and steering. The track simulates African trails and Belgian cobblestones and is too rough for human drivers. An average test takes 14 weeks of non-stop 24-hour-a-day- driving.

Realtors Propose "Double Freeze"

The National Association of Realtors today proposed to congress that a "double freeze" to put into effect, starting with the fiscal 1984 federal budget and consisting of a freeze on aggregate real spending and a freeze on changes in tax rates.

Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the Association, described the proposal and the beneficial effects that would result in testimony presented to the House Budget Committee.

The benefits would include:

•A strengthening of the current recovery from recession, including greater growth in output, income and employment;

•A reduction in the inflation rate and a lessing of fears that inflation will once again skyrocket;

•Declines in interest rates to levels closer to their historic relationships with inflation which would result in increased job opportunities and increased investment in general and specifically in housing;

•An improved standard of living for most Americans.

The Association recommends that Congress restrict increases in aggregate federal spending during fiscal years 1984-86 to no more than the 5 percent growth of inflation in 1984.

This would require limiting the growth of cost of living adjustments (COLA) applied to public programs to match the COLA growth in the private sector, which ranges from one-half to two-thirds of the changes in the Consumer Price Index. Congress also would have to consider slowing the growth of defense spending to 5 percent to 7 percent above the inflation rate--a range previously supported by Presidents Reagan, Carter and Ford, Carlson said.

"The multi-year freeze in spending alone would produce a significantly better fiscal condition compared to the president's proposal of a one-year spending freeze and then spending growth as usual," Carlson said. "By 1986, spending would be $104.5 billion less, the trigger tax in 1986 would not be necessary, tax receipts would be $46 billion lower and the deficit would be down to $129 billion--trending to zero by 1989."

In addition, there should be no across-the-board tax rate increase or decrease in 1983 or 1984--which would mean eliminating the 1983 cut in personal income taxes of 10 percent and moving the effective date for indexing personal income tax brackets to Jan. 1, 1984--and no tax rate changes in 1985 or 1986, the economist said.

"The double freeze would lower the deficit every year from $207.7 billion in FY 1983 to achieve a balanced budget at high employment by the end of 1986 and a potential $47 billion surplus during 1987--which would be used to generate greater savings, or cut taxes, or increase government spending," Carlson told the committee.

"If tax cuts are considered, they should be aimed at increasing savings and investment in both human capital (training and education) and physical capital (residential, commercial and industrial structures and equipment)," he noted.

This improved fiscal policy would allow a less restrictive monetary policy resulting in lower inflation, said Carlson. Combined with greater availability of savings for investment the reduced inflation will mean lower interest rates. Home mortgage rates, now 7 percent to 8 percent above the inflation rate could be reduced to a more normal 4 percent above the rate of inflation, according to National Association testimony. The lower level prevails in other industrial countries that have kept deficits down to reduce government's competing demand for private savings.

Between 1984 and 1987, lower real interest rates would increase new home sales by 1.3 million, existing home sales by 800,000 and housing starts by 325,000, according to National Association of Realtors calculations. The Gross National Product would improve by 1.1 percent, there would be 500,000 additional permanent jobs and an average $520 increase in wage earners' incomes, resulting from lower interest rates and inflation and improved productivity and investment, the calculations show.

The Builders Block

By Doug Hickman
Real Estate Editor

The Builders Block will be a feature highlighting new construction in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake.

This End May Be Your Beginning

From Land's End, you're only eight blocks from the ocean, a few minutes from the expressway, and a short drive puts you in the country. If this sounds good to you, you're in the company of a rapidly growing list of young, as well as older, professionals who have one thing in common, a love of leisure living.

Land's End is designed to free you from the worry and drudgery of exterior home maintenance. The units are brick with cedar shake mansard style roofs, and the windows and sliding doors are resistant to the corrosive effects of salt air.

Two townhome styles, with optional floorplans, and three garden type units, with optional floorplans, comprise the five types of units available in the condominium. The garden units come eight to a building, the townhomes, four. All units employ an L shaped design (if viewed from above the building takes the shape of a cross), which is quite efficient in that only half your walls are exterior ones, and each unit has the distinct advantage of being an end unit. This design also allows for each unit to have a courtyard/patio, enclosed by a five foot wooden privacy fence. Also standard are detached storage sheds, wall to wall carpet, heat pump and central air, energy efficient appliances and generous closet space with mirrored doors.

Land's End is the product of twenty years of building experience. George Powell is the builder and developer who is realizing what many beach builders had scoffed at. Moderately priced, contempory units at the south end of the beach and near the ocean. "I've lived at the north end for years and I know what beach weather can do to a house. Most people just glance at the exterior and rush inside to see the interior and within a few years they'll pay for this mistake. But these brick and cedar shake units can take it. Years from now, they'll be just as sound as when they were built, and with no maintenance." Powell should know, his past accomplishments include: Dorchester Village, Glyndon Village, Willowood, Burnam Woods, Kings Grant Landing North, Park Ave. Apartments, a five building office complex in Haygood, and Pinewood Square Shopping Center. Powell was also active in Stratford Chase, Governor Square and Kings Grant Landing East and South.

Pyle Realty, Inc. of Virginia Beach is the marketing arm and driving force behind the early acceptance of Land's End. "We're available from morning to late afternoon and weekends to show these properties, and explain what condo living is. I think the word condo scares many people, but it shouldn't," said Ann Hargroves, site agent for Pyle Realty.

"I'm very pleased to be marketing Land's End. I feel we have a winning combination with George Powell, the location, the price and our agents. We have what the public wants and can afford," said Roger Pyle, President of Pyle Realty.

Pyle Realty is no stranger to success. They officially opened Station One condominium in Virginia Beach on December 15th, and in less than three months, all 104 units were sold. It appears Land's End will also be quite successful from early indications. Prices start at $44,600 and go to $66,500.

Using A Hedge Effectively

A Hedge is a form of price insurance...an important marketing tool in the production of livestock and crops, and vital management practice for processors.

Anyone owning a commodity for a long period of time whether he's a producer, processor, or manufacturer, can suffer financial loss by the ownership. Adverse price movements on the cash market can wipe out a producer's profit. A sudden—or steady—rise in the price of the commodity required by a manufacturer can undermine the pricing of his finished product.

A properly placed hedge can protect the owners and users of a commodity from such catastrophe.

There are basically two types of hedges, the selling, or short hedge and the buying, or long hedge.

.1) The selling hedge is used to protect a commodity being produced, or in storage, against a price decrease when it is eventually sold. A cattle man feeding calves, a hog producer with a confinement house full of pigs, the farmer with a few hundred acres of corn, and the warehouse operator storing pork bellies all own commodities at certain periods of time that are susceptible to price decline. They sell futures contracts against a portion of the commodity they own to asssure that price level when they eventually sell the commodity on the cash market.

If the cash price goes down they recover the money through the futures contract when they buy a contract at a lower price to offset the one sold. If the futures market rises, the cash market always follows. So, if he is forced to buy back his futures contract at a higher price, the rise in the cash market offsets the loss and assures the price he hedged at.

2) A buying hedge is used to protect a user of a commodity against a price rise. A soybean packer, feed manufacturer or livestock feeder requires a certain amount of commodity in the future at a set price which will permit him to make a profit. Such people buy a futures contract in the commodity. If the cash market on the commodity rises, the futures will also. They sell the contract back at the higher price and receive any price rise in the cash market. If the futures market falls, the cash price will also. He buys the commodity at a lower cash price, offsetting the loss in the future contract, and, again, assuring the price he hedged at.

"Quality"

By Roger Pyle

I have noticed that some builders use much better quality materials on the exterior of the homes they build than others. The exterior of the home is extremely important. That is the part that must face the elements, which are harsh in this area, and last for 30 to 50 years. Unfortunately, some home buyers eagerly walk through the front door of the home without really taking a hard look at the construction and quality of materials used on the exterior. They are dazzled by upgraded carpets and fancy extras that some builders use and base their home buying decision largely on those factors.

Some General things to look for on the exterior:

1. Door Moldings-quality of materials, knotholes and poorly fitted joints
2. Quality of Siding- I have seen some siding cut on a diagonal that, while it has good thickness on one side, is thin enough to poke your finger through on the other side. What kind siding is used on the exterior? Cedar, Juniper and Redwood siding is maintenance free and will last much longer than other types of wood. Better builders use brick. Bricks are maintenance free, will easily last 40 to 50 years and are a better insulator.
3. Go to the edge of the building and look along the wall for irregularities in fittings and joints. Look along the entire wall. Is it plumb or wavy?
4. Beauty of the exterior is important- Are corners mitered? Do architectural lines flow well? Chimneys always add to architectural elegance. The home should look pleasing and sturdy while still giving convenient and well engineered liveability.

Always take a hard look at the exterior. It's critical!

Consumer Digest Alert

Interest rates and the cost of money may well be the hot potato of the eighties, but an alarming number of Americans are simply not paying attention to the finer points of shopping for the best interest. In an article entitled "Ins and Outs of Interest Rates," in the March/April issue of Consumers Digest, writer Don German hammers home the point: "as a consumer, you are now able to--and should--shop for loan rates as carefully as you would shop for the best price on a washing machine or refrigerator. It is patently foolish to save $100 on the purchase of an item, and then pay $200 in additional finance charges by failing to shop for lower rates."

According to German, many consumers are pressured by the "heat of the moment": A home is available, so buy now! The roof has to be fixed for the next rain! So most borrowers will ask only two questions: Can I get the loan? What is the monthly payment? Consumers Digest emphasizes the need to ask a third question: How much will the loan cost--in the long run?

For mortgages, Consumers Digest advises to both shop for the best rates and the shortest term mortgage that is possible. Also, never sign a mortgage with a prepayment penalty, or one that doesn't allow prepayment, which is another way of saving long term money. When you can afford to, Consumers Digest advises to make your current mortgage payment, plus the amount of principal on the last payment on the amortization schedule, which the lender will give you, usually for a $10 service fee.

Consumers can save finance charges on installment loans by following the Consumers Digest mortgage rule--shop low rates and go for the short term. The loan-shopper should check several banks, particularly where he/she already has an account, for rates--and ask for the lowest rates. Credit Unions may offer comparable loan opportunities. It is also possible to borrow against a life insurance policy for low rates.

Borrowers should also investigate a one-payment loan, with the entire balance due on maturity. Though it costs a higher interest rate, you'll have the money longer, and can invest it in a highyield money bearing account, offsetting the cost of the loan.

Credit cards enable Americans to live high on the hog conveniently--but they too are loans, and should be treated as such. To avoid the "credit card trap", Consumers Digest suggests:

•Find the lowest annual fee. Some banks charge $15, some $20, and a few still charge nothing at all to regular customers.

•Shop for rates. All credit cards are not equal, contrary to popular belief. Though most banks charge the maximum set by state law, some banks have moved their headquarters to South Dakota where there is no limit, and customers of such a bank pay 23% instead of the usual 18% on unpaid balance.

•Look for a bank that offers a grace period, usually 25 days, and try to pay as much of the charges accrued within that period, as you can.

•Pay as much as possible on your bill every month.

Financial Planning... The Key To Success

By Madeline Fortunato

Financial Planning has become a very important and necessary tool for successful money management. Families, individuals, and corporations as well as small enterprises benefit from a confidential plan and personal interview with a qualified planner.

A good financial planner will help you to achieve tomorrow's goals today. These goals vary. For some it's reducing taxable income, for others, it's providing additional income at retirement with continued growth on the original principal. For most people it's whether your dollars are working as hard and as smart for you as they should be. What ever your goals may be, it is important to accumulate those dollars in the best vehicle suitable to your objectives.

How you choose your financial planner is important. Some charge a fee for their personal time and services on the plan. Some, through their companies can offer it at no cost. In either case, usually commissions are earned by the planner if you can see the advantages of following through on the recommendations made.

The key to success, most importantly, is to not procrastinate!

History Of First Baptist Church of Norfolk

First Baptist Church of Norfolk, Virginia was organized as Cumberland Street Baptist Church in 1805, the first srvices being held in a rented hall on Cumberland Street. On October 1, 1886 the name was officially changed to First Baptist Church, Cumberland Street.

In April 1895 the church building of the Epworth Methodist Church on Granby Street was purchased at a cost of $27,000.

Due to its proximity to business locations, this building was sold in 1906 and property purchased at the corner of Westover and Moran Avenues. Dedication services for a large granite gothic-style church building were held on June 21, 1910, the original building being constructed at a cost of $68,213.81.

During these years the Church continued to experience growth and in 1956, the Church began a mission work in the Thalia area of Virgjginia Beach, the same being constituted as Thalia Lynn Baptist Church on June 30, 1957.

Again in 1959 a major expansion program was necessary and additional property was purchased, the auditorium remodeled education area expanded to accommodate 1000 people, and a taping and broadcasting facility was added. Beginning in the late 1950's and continuing through the 1960's, Norfolk experienced an exodus of an urban population moving to the suburbs. This resulted in a declining membership. On Sunday, October 2, 1969, fire completely destroyed the sanctuary and party of the educational structures. educational structures.

For a period of time services were held at the Lakewood Elementary School and the Freemason Street Baptist Church. In March 1971 the present seven acre site of land was purchased and in 1972 construction began on the present 700 seat auditorium.

Rev. Hemphill's Philosophy

"Keep It Simple"

"Reach people for Christ and equip them in the word," is Dr. Kenneth Hemphill's "keep it simple" philosophy for Christian descipleship. Rev. Hemphill, pastor of The First Baptist Church of Norfolk, has a large vision and passion to minister to the entire Tidewater community.

There is an infectious sense of excitement among the First Baptist family resulting from an unusual 80% growth rate since Feb. 1981. A prime location in the heart of Tidewater provides an unparalleled opportunity to reach people for Christ. Even more exciting than the location is the strength of the ministries through excellent lay-leadership.

Pastor Hemphill's plan to reach people for Christ will be accomplished through a specially designed program structured around Descipleship Ministry. This plan will be conducted in four phases.

(1) Study The Bible— In Studying the bible, Rev. Hemphill has designed a program of Bible Study which enables each individual to grow in the knowledge of Christ. The Sunday School Bible studies have an average attendance of 784 members, reaching all the needs of the congregation, including a Mentally Retarded class and monthly class for Vietnamese. The entire training program is aimed to practical instructions in Christian living and in personal ministry. The Sunday School ministries attempt to build a strong church by spreading God's word through, reading, teaching, winning and developing disciples.

(2) Prayer and Worship—The Prayer and Worship program, meets the basic needs of every age group through effective prayer to increase an inner personal relationship with Christ and a period of Worship which will encourage and uplift every member.

(3) Share Your Faith— Sharing your faith, is the reason First Baptist has experienced a substantial growth by telling others about Jesus Christ. The First Baptist family is committed to an emphasis on evangelism and outreach. In explaining the basic doctrine of the church Rev. Hemphil says, "public profession of faith and believers baptism are prerequisites of membership. Each Christian has direct access to God through Christ. The ultimate source of authority in Jesus Christ the Lord, and every area of life is subject to his Lordship. The Bible is the inspired revelation of God's will and way. It is our authoritative rule of faith and practice.

(4) Discover Your Gift and Use It— Discovering your gift and using it is an area that all Christians should seek "What can I do best and how can I do it to please God."

Another ministry of First Baptist is in church training which encompasses courses in Bible Study, "ACTS" Adult Christian Training Sessions, and two Youth classes.

The music ministry provides a complete graded choir program consisting of 9 (nine) choirs (104 enrolled in the adult choir, 66 enrolled in the Youth choir and 142 enrolled in childrens choir). Special groups include Youth and Adult ensembles, various duets, trios and quartets; and organized Handbell choirs for children, youth and adults. First Baptist started its own orchestra this year with 12 regular members performing at the present time.

In February 1981, Dr. Kenneth S. Hemphill became pastor of this 874-member church which was organized in 1805. Today's membership totals 2018.

CHURCH BULLETINS

Indian River Baptist Church

If I Should Die brings together some very respected Christian doctors, theologians and psychologists to investigate this subject and how it relates to history's most consistent textbook on death and dying -- THE BIBLE.

The film will be shown March 27 at 7:30 p.m.

Church Of The Ascension

On March 26 from 9 am. to 3:15 pm., a program, to help Girl Scout leaders and other interested adults understand critical problems impacting on today's child.

The church is located on 4853 Princess Anne Road in Virginia Beach.

LOOKING FOR GOD

Some say you find God just as well in a garden, in the woods, or on a golf course as in a church — that God is everywhere. But be honest about it.

Are you not more apt to think of weeds, or mosquitoes, or a poor shot than you are of God? And after all, you have made this outing to seek pleasure.

But when you go to church, it is with the specific intention of worshipping. Here you engage in prayer, praise and thanksgiving. Here you mingle with people who are seeking God and have come to feel His presence. In the quiet beauty of a sanctuary you find few outside distractions, and you know that this place is dedicated to the service of God.

For peace and happiness which comes from really feeling God's presence, worship in the house of the Lord this week — make it a regular practice.

Consumer Digest Alert

Interest rates and the cost of money may well be the hot potato of the eighties, but an alarming number of Americans are simply not paying attention to the finer points of shopping for the best interest. In an article entitled "Ins and Outs of Interest Rates," in the March/April issue of Consumers Digest, writer Don German hammers home the point: "as a consumer, you are now able to--and should--shop for loan rates as carefully as you would shop for the best price on a washing machine or refrigerator. It is patently foolish to save $100 on the purchase of an item, and then pay $200 in additional finance charges by failing to shop for lower rates."

According to German, many consumers are pressured by the "heat of the moment": A home is available, so buy now! The roof has to be fixed for the next rain! So most borrowers will ask only two questions: Can I get the loan? What is the monthly payment? Consumers Digest emphasizes the need to ask a third question: How much will the loan cost--in the long run?

For mortgages, Consumers Digest advises to both shop for the best rates and the shortest term mortgage that is possible. Also, never sign a mortgage with a prepayment penalty, or one that doesn't allow prepayment, which is another way of saving long term money. When you can afford to, Consumers Digest advises to make your current mortgage payment, plus the amount of principal on the last payment on the amortization schedule, which the lender will give you, usually for a $10 service fee.

Consumers can save finance charges on installment loans by following the Consumers Digest mortgage rule--shop low rates and go for the short term. The loan-shopper should check several banks, particularly where he/she already has an account, for rates--and ask for the lowest rates. Credit Unions may offer comparable loan opportunities. It is also possible to borrow against a life insurance policy for low rates.

Borrowers should also investigate a one-payment loan, with the entire balance due on maturity. Though it costs a higher interest rate, you'll have the money longer, and can invest it in a highyield money bearing account, offsetting the cost of the loan.

Credit cards enable Americans to live high on the hog conveniently--but they too are loans, and should be treated as such. To avoid the "credit card trap", Consumers Digest suggests:

•Find the lowest annual fee. Some banks charge $15, some $20, and a few still charge nothing at all to regular customers.

•Shop for rates. All credit cards are not equal, contrary to popular belief. Though most banks charge the maximum set by state law, some banks have moved their headquarters to South Dakota where there is no limit, and customers of such a bank pay 23% instead of the usual 18% on unpaid balance.

•Look for a bank that offers a grace period, usually 25 days, and try to pay as much of the charges accrued within that period, as you can.

•Pay as much as possible on your bill every month.

Financial Planning... The Key To Success

By Madeline Fortunato

Financial Planning has become a very important and necessary tool for successful money management. Families, individuals, and corporations as well as small enterprises benefit from a confidential plan and personal interview with a qualified planner.

A good financial planner will help you to achieve tomorrow's goals today. These goals vary. For some it's reducing taxable income, for others, it's providing additional income at retirement with continued growth on the original principal. For most people it's whether your dollars are working as hard and as smart for you as they should be. What ever your goals may be, it is important to accumulate those dollars in the best vehicle suitable to your objectives.

How you choose your financial planner is important. Some charge a fee for their personal time and services on the plan. Some, through their companies can offer it at no cost. In either case, usually commissions are earned by the planner if you can see the advantages of following through on the recommendations made.

The key to success, most importantly, is to not procrastinate!

A Winner At 21!

Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corporation was present at the International Convention of Nationwide Relocation Service, Inc. held from February 27 - March 3 in Las Vegas. Nearly 300 real estate brokers and their guests from the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom convened to address the subject of the progress of the relocation industry and how it pertains to their individual businesses.

"A Winner at Twenty-One!" was the theme for the convention, which recognized the organization's twenty first birthday. From its inception in 1962, Nationwide has grown to over 600 broker members with more than 20,000 sales associates in four countries. The organization is dedicated to giving service to families who transfer and to companies that regularly relocate personnel.

Among the prominent speakers at the convention were Harley Snyder, President of the National Association of Realtors; Washington Post syndicated real estate columnist Kenneth R. Harney; Dr. Stephen Covey, Associate Professor of Organizational Behavior and Business Management at Brigham Young University; the relocation consulting firm team of Richard J. Seals and Bill Heald, Dallas, TX; and Joe E. Hanauer, Coldwell Banker Residential Group Senior Vice-President.

The four day convention also featured workshops and brainstorming sessions during which participants shared successful methodology employed in their respective real estate businesses.

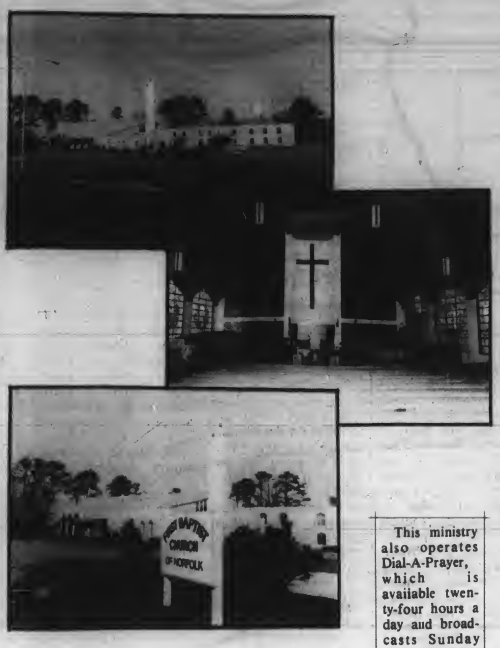
The People Are The Church



History Of First Baptist Church of Norfolk

First Baptist Church of Norfolk, Virginia was organized as Cumberland Street Baptist Church in 1805, the first srvices being held in a rented hall on Cumberland Street. On October 1, 1886 the name was officially changed to First Baptist Church, Cumberland Street.

In April 1895 the church building of the Epworth Methodist Church on Granby Street was purchased at a cost of $27,000.

Due to its proximity to business locations, this building was sold in 1906 and property purchased at the corner of Westover and Moran Avenues. Council In The Middle

VOG Officers Explain Firing

"There would be no justification for city council to cut us off," Barr continued. "We plan on serving the citizens of Virginia Beach as much as ever--we'd just be doing it without Noona. But, the show must go on."

"We think we deserve that money and we are going to do everything we can to make sure we keep it," said Jerry Haynie, executive director of the VOG. "The Virginia Pops and the City of Virginia Beach have the VOG's full commitment. A loss of that kind of money would have severe effects on the VOG, and I think that would be very unfair."

Added Louis Ryan, the VOG's executive vice president: "Our commitment to Virginia Beach is unwavering. We're not going to abandon the community. The VOG is here to serve the entire region. There is no reason for this to be turned into a Norfolk versus Virginia Beach thing. We serve Virginia Beach, and that fact should not be lost upon city council, which seems commited to furthering Noona's career."

"Walter's intemperate comments in the press, coupled with his efforts to take away money from the VOG are the only reasons why he was dismissed. If Walter hadn't gone to the press, and if he hadn't gone to the Arts and Humanities Commission, we might have had a different scenario. Instead, we feel as though we have been betrayed" - Louis Ryan, VOG executive vice president.

Noona's supporters claim, however, that the VOG is unconcerned with Virginia Beach, and it was demonstrated by Noona's firing.

One such supporter is Thomas A. Lindsey, a 40-year Virginia Beach resident, and the only member of the VOG to abstain in the 26-13 vote ousting Noona. "A lot of people at the Beach are disappointed by the VOG's firing of Noona, and they will show it by supporting a new orchestra under his direction at the Beach," he said.

"Virginia Beach has been thrown out of the VOG," said Roebuck. "How can the VOG have pops concerts without Noona? Noona is 'Mr. Pops.' The VOG's attempt to reduce Mr. Noona's status within the organization was both a slap in his face and in the face of every Virginia Beach citizen. The VOG made a gross error, because a pops without Noona would be sadly lacking."

The Conflict

The conflict came to blows two weeks ago when the VOG terminated Noona's services, replacing him with Virginia Philharmonic Director Richard Williams. The pops and the philharmonic are actually one and the same, created in 1979 when the old Virginia Beach Pops under Noona merged with the old Norfolk and Peninsula smyphonies, forming the VOG. The same musicians from the pops also perform in the philharmonic. Williams was previously the music director of the philharmonic, while Noona was music director of the pops. The Virginia Beach Community Orchestra, a group of amateur musicians under the direction of conductor David Kunkel, also serves the region.

VOG members had in recent months become dissatisfied with several aspects of Noona's job performance, notably questions raised by nine first-chair pops musicians who criticized the maestro's conducting techniques. Also, critical reviews by staff writer Judith Greene in The Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star were used by the VOG to ascertain Noona's conducting competence, according to a prepared statement issued by Barr.

"We were aware of certain problems with Mr. Noona, so we came up with a new contract offer for him that would alleviate those problems. We had been eyeing changes in our structure for quite a while, and we came to the realization that changes had to be made. Mr. Noona rejected our offer" - Clay H. Barr, VOG president

Noona was then offered a new contract, the terms of which included elimination of his title of music director of the pops; reduction from eight to five the number of subscription concerts for which Noona would be conducting next season; and an $11,000 cut in salary. Noona, quoted in The Virginian-Pilot, called the offer "degrading, demeaning and entirely unacceptable." He said he would resign.

But, on Feb. 26, Noona appeared before members of the Arts and Humanities Commission to propose the reformation of his own orchestra in Virginia Beach. Roebuck went before City Council two days later and requested the withdrawal of city funding to the VOG, and suggested instead the money be used for a new Noona-led pops.

Three days thereafter, Noona's $32,000 contract was discontinued.

Why Noona Was Fired

According to Barr, Noona's firing was based strictly upon musical considerations. "We were aware of certain problems with Mr. Noona, so we came up with a new contract offer for him that would alleviate those problems," she said. "We had been eyeing changes in our structure for quite a while, and we came to the realization that changes had to be made. Mr. Noona rejected our offer."

Barr, who has been involved with the VOG (formerly the Norfolk Symphony) for 10 years, said the organization, "cannot topple just because one man has left. Arthur Fiedler left the Boston Pops and they are still flourishing."

Barr added that her decision was based neither on Greene's reviews nor on newspaper accounts of Noona's arrest last November for alleged shoplifting in a Farm Fresh store. Haynie and Ryan also dismissed any prejudices because of newspaper stories about Noona.

Haynie said the VOG has had difficulties with Noona for quite some time. "We've had continual problems ever since the merger," he said. "Our problem has been figuring out what part of his talent best fit in the organization. Once we figured it out, Walter flat refused to accept structure changes.

"When it gets down to it, though, there are really two reasons why Walter Noona was fired," Haynie continued. "His going to the newspapers complaining about the structure changes, and his efforts to divert public funds from the VOG while he was still employed here were viewed by the VOG as the major breakoff."

Ryan echoed Haynie. "Walter's intemperate comments in the press, coupled with his efforts to take away money from the VOG are the only reasons why he was dismissed," he said. "If Walter hadn't gone to the press, and if he hadn't gone to the Arts and Humanities Commission, we might have had a different scenario. Instead, we feel as though we have been betrayed.

"People seem to think there has been some sort of sinister plot to sack Noona and undermine Virginia Beach," Ryan continued. "That's crazy. I'm from Richmond. Why would I want to promote Norfolk any more than I would Virginia Beach?"

Lindsey contends, however, that Ryan, who is the corporate secretary for Landmark Communications, parent corporation of The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star, and the VOG would both benefit with the demise of Noona.

"Landmark is responsible for Noona's firing," said Lindsey. "Why did Landmark want to get rid of him? Because Frank Batten (Landmark's Chairman of the Board) has a great deal invested in Norfolk, and anything that goes into Norfolk is better for Landmark and better for Batten." Lyndsey added that he felt Greene was ordered to write unfavorable reviews of Noona's pops performances.

"Landmark is responsible for Noona's firing. Why did Landmark want to get rid of him? Because Frank Batten has a great deal invested in Norfolk, and anything that goes into Norfolk is better for Landmark and better for Batten...I can't say concolusively there was a conspiracy, but I will say things were organized very well against Noona" - Thomas Lindsey, VOG member

"I can't say conclusively there was a conspiracy, but I will say things were organized very well against Noona," Lindsey said. "Then again, Norfolk is always organized well."

Neither Batten nor Greene could be reached for comment.

Noona, dubbed by Roebuck, "a recognized tourist attraction, along with the Boardwalk Art Show and the Neptune Festival," likewise could not be reached for comment.

When the VOG was formed, Noona had been conducting both the Virginia Beach Pops and the Virginia Beach Sunday Pops since 1971. The two pops groups alternated Sunday performances at the Virginia Beach Civic Center. Noona dissolved the amateur Sunday Pops in 1981, citing his desire to work full-time with professional musicians. The Sunday Pops have been reformed as the Virginia Beach Community Orchestra under Kunkel.

Center Is Named After Slain Hero

The City of Virginia Beach recently paid tribute to a slain police officer by naming the police department's training facility in his honor.

Approximately 100 police officers and city dignitaries were on hand at the Virginia Beach Police Training Center on Leroy Drive, as Mayor Louis R. Jones unveiled a sign proclalming the facility as the "Daniel T. Maloney Police Training Center."

Maloney, who died December 27, 1981, was the first-ever Virginia Beach police officer killed in the line of duty. He was feloniously assaulted and killed by a man who had escaped from a Maryland correctional facility and who was being sought locally for questioning in another criminal investigation.

The brief ceremony, punctuated by constant drizzle, was also attended by Maloney's widow, Kathleen, and his parents, James and Dolores Maloney.

Jones told the crowd that in his 25 years as a local funeral director he had come to know many Virginia Beach police officers. In that time, the mayor said, he learned much about the dangers of being a police officer. Maloney's death, which Jones called "tragic," serves to remind the community of the risks inherent in the police profession, he said.

Police Chief Charles R. Wall said the training facility, through which every police officer passes at least once a year, is ideal for a memorial. "Every policeman who comes through here will remember Maloney and will be that much more careful," he said.

The center, first opened in 1967, is used primarily as a training grounds for firearms, according to Capt. E. F. Buzzy, an administrative aide to Wall. Through the years, Buzzy said, the center has doubled its firing capacity and has added moving targets, streetlight simulation, night training and a canine training range.

All Virginia Beach police officers are required to annually undergo firearms testing at the center. Federal agencies such as the FBI also use the facility, Buzzy said.

Various groups and individuals have attempted for some time to persuade city officials to name buildings after Maloney. In January, uniformed officers and members of a local fraternal order of policeman asked the city's school board to name a new elementary school in Maloney's honor. The board voted instead to name the school, "Centerville Elementary."

"The first 40 years of life give us the text; the next 30 supply the commentary on it."

intolerable as I do and let the members of the Compensation Board and their state delegates and senators know how they feel."

The board, which funds two-thirds of Sciortino's budget, may allocate additional funds at any time.

The City of Virginia Beach pays the remaining third of the commonwealth's attorney's budget. Sciortino said the city has not dismissed the possibility of increasing its funding to the office. But, Sciortino is also depending on increased funding from the state board.

In a Feb. 23 letter to John M. Rasnick, Jr., executive secretary, Commonwealth of Virginia Compensation Board, Scirotino concludes the 12-page letter by stating, "The situation in Virginia Beach is critical. Whether it remains in a critical condition now depends in large measure on the Compensation Board.

The Virginia Beach commonwealth's attorney's office has 12 attornies, including Sciortino. The number of active cases in all Virginia Beach courts, as of March 7, 1983, is 1070.

Sciortino would like to have 43 attornies by 1985 and 59 by 1995.

innovations were already being done by the present services with the exception of the patrol boat. "I'm not sure I'd put that much weight on the innovative part." He said Council would have to be very careful or the franchise may be given to someone who may not be working for the company and may be just another employee who may leave for one reason or another.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech said she had the same concerns. She said she did not want to take chances. She then suggeted holding interviews with the bidders. She said that Council might understand things better face to face. City Attorney Dale Bimson said that the interviews would have to be held publicly.

Creech said she did not object to that. She said Council could ask questions directly instead of making interpretations.

Councilman Harold Heischober said he agreed and hated to put the safety of the tourists and the local people who use the beach in jeopardy.

He said there is no substitute for experience and is concerned tht the bid did not lock in the cost of rental. "Absentee ownership troubles me a whole lot," he added. The present operators are right there on the job, he said. Kuehn, the person delegated to be on thejob for the Beach Patrol, could be dismissed at any time, he said.

Kuehn has ten years experience with the Virginia Beach Patrol, for the past five years as head supervisor for the North Beach Services operated by Kitchin. He has a B.S. degree in recreational management from VPI-SU.

Other officers of Beach Patrol, who also are stockholders, are James W. Hall, secreatary, R.R. McChesney, treasurer and E.S. Garcia, assistant secretary, all of Virginia Beach.

Heischober said he could make a decision Monday but that it would not be in agreement with the staff's.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. commended the staff's analysis but "that doesn't mean I'll go along with it."

Councilwoman Reba McClanan said she was surprised at the bid documents themselves. She said she understood how the staff arrived at its decision, but said, "No one awards a contract on the basis of brochure." She said that further discussion was essential. "Sometimes people who have been providing services take them for granted," she said, and suggested that was what the present operators may have done.d

Councilman Jack Jennings said that Virginia Beach Patrol made an excellent proposal. He said he hated to give the impression that the "new guys on the block" are not being given consideration. "I want them to persevere, give everygody a fair shake."

"All we want it to talk to everyone," Creech said.

Vice Mayor Barbara Henley said that everyone fills out a form in a different way. She asked for a report on services which have been offered by the present operators.

R. Jones said he had misgivings about the whole thing and questioned Council's legal position.

Bimson said he would talk to Council about that in the executive session.

Heischober also wanted to know whether the franchises could be asked to restrict increased in rental fees over the five-year period, while Mayor Jaones was interested in knowing who the stockholders are.

Officers of Ocean Rescue are R.L. Kent Hinnant, president; Lorraine L. Hinhant, secretary/treasurer, who also serve on the board of directors with Graham K. Hinnant. Holding 100 percent of the stock are Graham and R.L. Hinnant.

Kitchin who has 50 years experience renting beach equipment and providing lifeguard service, is the sole owner and stockholder of his company.

Among the innovations offered by Beach patrol are a boat patrol, telephones at the lifeguard stands connected to a central communications center, portable radios for the patrol captain, franchise manager and all supervisors. Completion by all lifeguards of a 1,000 yard run-swim run-swim-run test, training in the surf rescue school operated by the patrol, preparation of an operations and training manual, daily drill of lifeguards, a full-time beach patrol captain, a four-wheel drive jeep and first-aid-equipped bicycles, and other offerings.

Councilman W.H. Kitchin III, son of one of the bidders did not participate in the discussion.

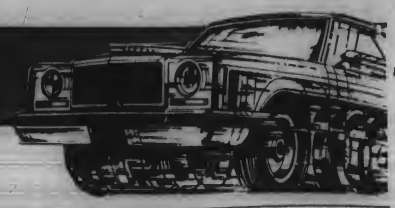
The Pit Stop



Wynne Motor Corp. - Quality Late-Model Automobiles.

Since early 1958, Wynne has been a name associated with excellent automotive dealerships in Tidewater. The name, the new location and new spaces, and the selection of Mr. Jeff Wynne as owner operator present a formidable combination that should prove to be Wynne Motor Corporation's formula for success! Presently located at 6414 Virginia Beach Boulevard, the new firm handles quality late-model automobiles. The original Wynne Motor Corp. was started by Jeff's father Dubby Wynne back in 1958 at 21st and Colonial Avenue in Norfolk. In 1977 the operation moved to 1414 South Military Highway, the present location of Greenbrier Chrysler Plymouth Imperial Vanworld.

Wynne Motor Corp., located at 6414 Va. Beach Blvd.

"Our intent is to handle the cleanest late model used automobiles and trucks in the area and offer a two year or 24,000 mile wurranty with every purchase to provide the customer with a 'secure" feeling with every purchase," said Jeff recently.

"There is, and always will be, a tremendous demand for quality automobiles, reasonably priced and we look forward to the expanding market of the 80's with optimism.

What we intend to remain ever aware of is our reputation, which we will uphold come what may, because the customer is first with us, and they always have been, and always will be," said Wynne.

Mr. Jeff Wynne, Owner-Operator, Wynne Motor Corp.

SPECIAL OF THE WEEK

1981 Datsun 280 ZX

Grand Luxury Package which includes power windows, dual reclining seats, AM-FM cassette, power remote mirrors, cruise control, delay wipers, lighted passenger vanity mirror. New Bridgestone Potenza Radial tires. 15,000 miles. One owner, like Brand New.

Turbo ZX. It's An Awesome Feeling

Listen closely! There it is. Hear it? That barely audible, high-pitched tone. That's a turbo charger spinning at 100,000 revolutions per minute. That's awesome. That's power. And that's just one of the things that puts the Datsun Turbo 280-ZX ahead of everything else.

The Turbo ZX builds on the Z-Car legend and redefines high performance. The power of its turbocharged, 2.8 liter, overhead-cam, fuel-injected engine...the handling of its power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering.. the sure stopping power of its four-wheel, power-assisted disc brakes—can only be described by one word:awesome.

The moment you take control of the Turbo ZX, the loop closes. Man and machine become as one. The controls and instruments are right there; the seats hold you just so; the car responds like an extension of your mind and body.

The Balance Of Power

What is it about the 280-ZX that stirs people's juices? Perhaps it satisfies the moods and impulses that make us tick. We pick and choose the mood to fit the moment, and the rest of the time we stay in balance.

Balance, That's it. The 280-ZX has performance that's awesome, but at the same time it's as luxurious as a first-class compartment on the Orient Express. Its seats hug us. Its air conditioning keeps us comfy. Its AM/FM multiplex stereo soothes us with music. One day, we drive to the market and pack the ample storage area under the hatch with groceries for the week; the next day we're slicing through the switch-backs of a mountain road, heel-and-toeing throttle and brake, flicking through the gears.

For State Senate

Canada Wants Opponent; Jones Not 'Committed'

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

The State Senate veteran A. Joseph Canada, Jr. expects opposition in the November election. But from whom? The Republican has been opposed for his seat three times before, but a challenger has yet to take the 8th District Virginia Beach seat away from him.

At-large Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert G. "Bob" Jones is the only man, thus far, publicly considering opposing Canada. But, he has not made up his mind.

"The fact is that I haven't finally committed," he said from his office on South Lynnhaven Road. "I've been in the ball game long enough to know it's going to take a good organization, a lot of committee people, and more money than I've ever spent on a campaign."

Jones ran unsuccessfully for the House of Delegates in 1982, losing by 314 votes. Last spring he was elected to council, thus indirectly adding another reason to his skepticism about running.

"The fact is that I haven't finally committed. I've been in the ball game long enough to know it's going to take a good organization, a lot of committee people, and more money than I've ever spent on a campaign" - Bob Jones, possible Senate candidate

"I'm obviously reluctant to go back to the people who elected me to city council," he said. He said some of his supporters might reason, "and now you want me to contribute to get you off that (council) and on something else?"

Jones said his reason for considering running for the senate seat is much the same as he had in running for the House.

"I would very much like to be in the Virginia General Assembly," he said. He also said he could be more effective than Canada.

"I like Joe. I think he's a very nice person," Jones, an attorney, said. "I think the realities of the political structure of the senate of Virginia, as Dr. Holland said, is that the Republicans don't do much for their constituents.' I really think I can do a lot more in the

"No Preference"

Holland Doesn't Care Who Challenges Him

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

His father, Shirley T. Holland, served in the Virginia House of Delegates from 1946 to 1966. His brother, Richard, has served four years in the state senate. And now Dr. Clarence A. Holland, after 12 years on city council, including two as mayor, is running for the senate, 7th District.

Holland has been resting from council for a year now. He has had a chance to look back over his years in office, and also to reflect over his political future. From his medical office on Pleasure House Road, Holland said that the General Assembly's recent redistricting actions, giving Virginia Beach two full senate seats instead of one, really prompted his intention to run.

Why is Holland running?

"I think as much as anything else, a brand new seat being created with no incumbent in the seat; and it's an opportunity for Virginia Beach to have at least half of its population served; and hopefully, if I'm elected, I will be a member of the senate of the dominant party," Holland said. "We have not had a member to represent

"I think you're talking about two different candidates. You have one candidate who has fairly high name identification. You have another candidate who has shown some ability in his short time to work with people at maybe a little better level than the other one." - Dr. Clarence Holland, State Senate candidate

All Virginia Beach Delegates To Run Again

In addition to two senate races on the Nov. 8 ballot, all five House of Delegate seats will be open. However, all the incumbents intend to retain them.

Delegate Glenn B. McClanan, (D), 84th District, 12 years in the House.

Running? "I expect to."

Challengers: "I hope not."

Goal? "I want to give as much constructive service to the people of the 84th District that I possibly can."

Delegate J.W. "Billy" O'Brien, (D), 83rd District, 10 years.

Running? "Yes."

Challengers: "No. Not Yet. I'm sure I will."

Goal? "It was my bill that came very close to succeeding in 1981 in changing the road allocation. That's one of the greatest issues in Virginia Beach. I also came very close in the lottery."

W.R. "Buster" O'Brien, (R), 82nd District, four years.

Running? "As far as I know; I'm sure I'm going to."

Challengers: "I don't know yet."

Delegate Julie L. Smith, (D), 85th District, one year.

Running? "Yes."

Challengers: "I don't have the vaguest idea. I don't perceive any challenge in the Democratic party."

Goal? "I just got elected one year ago. It takes some time to get anything done in any legislative body. If reelected, however, I have a good shot at being appointed to the roads committee."

Delegate Owen B. Pickett, (D), 81st District, 12 years.

Running? "Yes."

Challengers: "I would hope not."

Goal? "There are some projects I've been working on...that I feel like I have an insight, the time and knowledge that has been acquired and I would like to see their continuation.

'Partners In Aftercare'

Program Helps Troubled Teenage Girls

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

They are called "incorrigible," the 11 Virginia Beach girls between 13 and 21 years-old sentenced last year by the city's Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court to serve from seven to 10 months in the state-run Bon Air Learning Center near Richmond.

"They have no respect for authority, and they have proven again and again that they are unable to abide by any limits set by authority figures," said Susan L. Woolf, a probation counselor for the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court. Their crimes, she said, include car theft, truancy, running away, hitchhiking, and breaking of curfews and probations.

But, Woolf emphasized, society can ill-afford to lock up these girls and throw the keys away. "These are not criminals," she said. "These are all very nice young ladies who are just a little mixed up."

The most crucial period during the rehabilitation comes after the girls have been released from the facility, Woolf said. "Most people have a real horrible vision of what places like Bon Air are really all about," she said. Consequently, the girls have difficulties blending in at their old schools, within their families and in the job market.

"They need a friend; someone to tell them, 'Hey, you're okay,'" said Woolf.

Six months ago, Woolf helped design and implement a new volunteer program which provides camaraderie for troubled girls called "Partners in Aftercare." There are currently nine Virginia Beach girls who have been commited to the state department of corrections, and because of the program, each has been paired up with a "partner" back in Virginia Beach.

"Partners" are women from the community who have volunteered to be friends for the girls. They write letters to the girls once a week while they are incarcerated. They visit the girls once a month at the institution. They help the girls adjust to the outside world upon release by providing friendship, support and transportation for job-hunting. They continue to see the girls for at least four hours per week for six months following release.

Partners undergo four weeks of intensive training, which includes instruction in preparation for setbacks and failures, curfew and rules of probation, peer information, jobs and apprenticeship information, and games kids play. Also, partners observe the juvenile court and they tour the Bon Air facility.

Qualifications to be a partner include having time to invest in the training and with the girls, a stable home life and personality, a proven ability to establish rapport with teenagers, and a willingness to accept

Council Chooses Thalia

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

Virginia Beach will go ahead with plans to construct its central library at Thalia.

City Council Monday afternoon voted 9-2 against a proposal to change the location of the 90,000 square-foot, $11 million project to a site at Tidewater Community College on Princess Anne Road.

Councilman Jack Jennings Jr. supported the TCC plan as the more economical because the city owns the property and because of the assistance which migh be forthcoming from the State as a joint project with the community college. He also thought the location of the library there would be beneficial because of its proximity to the high tech industrial park.

On Feb. 14 he submitted his proposal and asked the Library Board and city staff to assess the cost and benefits of locating the new central library on city-owned property adjacent to Tidewater Community College's Virginia Beach Campus and the proposed new high teach industrial park.

Jennings said Monday afternoon he was "surprised and disappointed" with the response submitted by the Library Board and library staff in a report dated March 2. He said the report was merely a justification for the Thalia site, on Vir-

Political Fever

It's springtime, and political fever is here.

Catching it early was Meyera Oberndorf and Harold Heischober, both republicans, one of whom will oppose Dr. Clarence Holland for the newly created 7th senatorial district seat.

The Republicans will hold a nominating convention in June to determine which of the two current at-large council members will contest Holland. Holland says he doesn't care who wins; he'll campaign the same against either, he says.

In the 8th district, Joe Canada is sitting back, waiting to see if he'll be opposed for his fourth term in the senate. He is aware that at-large council member Bob Jones is eyeing the seat, but is not overreacting to the prospect. In fact, he is reacting very little. Canada expects to be opposed. Jones, however, does not want begin a rigorous campaign, without plenty of support. In the House, no challengers so far.

It's still early, but in the upcoming months local residents can expect to see plenty of politics between now and November. Hopefully, the issues will be defined, and the campaigning pure. —G.D.G.

Partners

If not for the community-minded spirits of many Virginia Beach citizens, one may suspect that some wheels of the city's governmental machine might quickly come to a screeching halt.

One city department which is vitally reliant upon volunteerism is the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court. According to Judge John K. Moore the court could not function without such individuals.

Specifically, Moore is addressing a new program called "Partners in Aftercare," designed to aid female juveniles work their way back into the mainstream of society after release from the state correctional facility. The program is conducted entirely by volunteers, 10 of them to be exact, who are coordinated by one city employee.

"We don't have the funding to perform this service," said Moore. "Without the volunteers, we couldn't even function."

Moore says the fortitude displayed by the volunteers in the Partners in Aftercare program is exemplary of the spirit of Virginia Beach residents. Indeed, volunteerism abounds all over this city.

Witness such organizations as the volunteer rescue squad, hospital auxiliaries, Meals on Wheels, scouting and youth sports programs. There are the many fine projects undertaken by civic groups such as the Jaycees, the Rotary clubs, the Chamber of Commerce and the many women's and senior citizens organizations. All such groups provide much-needed services to Virginia Beach. All are extremely reliant upon their members donating their time and efforts free of charge.

These facts are not lost upon the city's leaders. Every year, a special dinner is held to honor Virginia Beach's volunteers. This year, the Seventh Annual Volunteer's Recognition dinner is slated for Wednesday, March 23 at 7 p.m. in the Pavilion, hosted by the city council and the mayor's office. More than 1,900 volunteers are expected to be honored.

At The Virginia Beach Sun, there is a profound respect and sense of admiration for these volunteers. That is why several months ago, this newspaper launched a new regular feature called "Citizen-of-the-Week," designed to highlight the otherwise unheralded acts of these unsung individuals.

If you would like to nominate someone for citizen-of-the-week, simply send a letter to The Sun, 138 Rosemont Road, Virginia Beach, 23452, or call the newspaper at 486-3430.

Each of these individuals has an important story to be told. Help us to tell those stories.—M.M.G.

Education

The recently created Education Committee of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce has announced that Mrs. Barbara Bush, the Vice President's wife, will visit Virginia Beach on Tuesday, April 19. That's not bad news coming from a committee which was just put together at the beginning of 1983.

The committee has only had two formal meetings. At the first, some ideas were discussed. At the second, some ideas were implemented. Mrs. Bush will come to the city for two hours, just long enough to discuss the importance of the relationship between business and industry and the public school system. For example, what qualities do businesses desire most from students? Are they being adequately trained to compete and contribute in the business world? Questions, and others like these, will be the topic of a one day program, sponsored by the education committee and the Chamber. Mrs. Bush's presence on that day certainly speaks well for the Chamber, the school system, and the entire city.—G.D.G.

On The Line

Editor:

Commonwealth's Attorney Paul Sciortino has laid it on the line. Without more funding, his office is going to be unable to prosecute some crimes.

Criminals should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Otherwise, we are wasting our policeman's time and making a mockery of justice.

Somehow, the money has to be made available for Sciortino to do his job.

Noona Affair

Editor:

Your story on the Walter Noona affair was a succinct capsule of the situation, and it gave a clear, well-rounded overview.

My personal opinion is that the Virginia Orchestra Group may have made a big mistake in firing Noona. He was very pupular in Virginia Beach, and people from Virginia Beach might resent his firing and opt not to attend any further VOG events.

Letters To The Editor

Reader Writes Robb After Article On Police Assaults

Editor:

After reading your March 9 article on police assaults, I wrote the following letter to Governor Robb and present it here for your publication.

Regarding House Bill 220...A negative opion.

I am a respectable businessman who pays taxes in Virginia Beach. I am both a Commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve and the ex-president of PTA of a local elementary school. Since my business involves selling services and a product, it is to my distinct advantage to be able to "get along" with people.

About a month ago I was stopped by two experienced Virginia Beach policemen for "driving 10 miles per hour under the posted speed limit..." For openers, the policemen were abusive, antagonistic and self-admittedly looking for trouble. (I was driving my 15 year old daughter home from a dance lesson, and middle-aged men in such a situation can be armed and extremely dangerous!)

The bottom line was: These experienced men systematically pushed and (literally) dragged me down the street with a manner and attitude which I last saw exhibited in South East Asia.

Having had a very, very stressful day, week, and month, I was pushed to the point of having to seriously consider the necessity of defending myself physically... It was a real possibility at one point, and therein lies the problem with House Bill Number 220!

If the mandatory prison sentence provisions had been in effect, and had I, in fear for my personal safety, presumed to defend against the completely unwarranted physical restraints of one of these men, I would be in jail at this moment.

Granted, I had the sense not to do something stupid, but with all due modesty, I am a very intelligent person (MENSA #1008587) and a trained operational thinker (Naval Academy, '61). What of those who use less forethought and who are provoked into a rash act? What of the police officer who is, by nature, a bully? Both of these catagories of individual exist in numbers far greater than we wish to admit, so what happens when they inevitably meet? Bingo! A jail sentence for a dullard who might better be out earning a living and paying taxes.

Additional points: Our local Commonwealth's Attorney has stated that his case load was such that he may have to curtail prosecution of some felonies which are presently on the books.

We don't have the space in our jails and prisons for those who are there now. Police officers in Virginia Beach have resorted to civil suits against their attackers, and according to The Virginia Beach Sun they "all" win their cases. What better way is there?

A complaint to Virginia Beach authorities illicited, gratuitiously, comments from two sources that "some of our officers are overly cautious."

House Bill 220 is a blanket of immunity which certain officers and local ties will use to cloak their general inability to deal with difficult situations in a peaceful, non-belligerent manner. Its passage would be a giant step backwards.. Bull Corner justice.

As a Marine Captain, how many times did an enlisted man attack you? Was it because of some article in the UCMJ or was it because of the way that you carried yourself? From your own experience would you say that any officer, be he USMC or Virginia State Police, can totally avoid physical attack problems provided he exercises his authority firmly, but with respect for the individuals with whom he deals?

David Timm,
Virginia Beach

Thank You For MS Coverage

Editor:

Thank you for the recent coverage of the Arrest MS fund-raiser held on behalf of the Multiple Schlerosis Society at the Lynnhave Mall. The article which appeared in the March 16 issue promotes public awareness of the problem of multiple sclerosis and related neurological diseases which affect more than 500,000 americans.

One minor correction to an otherwise perfect story is the fact that Richard Pippin, Jr. of the Life Federal Savings and Loan Association at Hilltop had sponsorship support of $150.75, not $50.75.

Many of our Virginia Beach participants are personal friends of Bill Copes, former employee of the Virginia Beach Data Processing Department, who was diagnosed with MS approximately three years ago. Bill now uses a wheelchair and enjoyed the festivities at the Lynnhaven Mall that day, and joins me in a grateful expression of gratitude to The Virginia Beach Sun and to the many arrestees who helped to make this event such a resounding success.

For Running Books

Run To The Library

Library SUNlines

By Virginia Beach Librarian David Palmer

Recently, the Virginia Beach Oceanfront was the site of the annual Shamrock Marathon. This event marks the beginning of Tidewater's spring running season. During the next few months, it will be almost impossible not to encounter runners as they dash for the finish line of various local marathons.

Although these running events attract literally thousands of participants, the number of local non-competitive runners is even more astounding. This all goes to prove that running can no longer be called a fad. It is, in fact, a way of life for many Hampton Roads residents.

For the last few years, the five area libraries of the Virginia Beach Public Library have been developing a book collection designed to aid runner. Besides the standard works by running gurus James Fixx and George Sheehan, the library owns titles such as "The Running Experience," "The Complete Runner," "Forty Common Errors in Running," and "The Holistic Runner." There are running books written specifically for women, books which list running trails in major U.S. cities, books which extol the psychic power of running, and even biographies of runners. The list goes on and on.

If by some chance you injure yourself when running, the library can also come to the rescue. "The Runner's Repair Manual" and "How to Heal Running and Other Sports Injuries" are just two titles which are devoted to either preventing or curing running injuries.

Most books on the subject of running can be found in the 796.426 section of the library, while books about running injuries are located in the 614.1027 area. Of course, any library staff member will be glad to help point the way. Finally, before leaving the library, be sure to stop and read the current issue of "Runner's World" magazine. The Bayside, Great Neck, Oceanfront and Windsor Woods Area Libraries all subscribe. Oh, yes, the library also owns a book called "The Last Word on Running"...but don't count on it!

New Design Additions

The Design Collaborative, a Virginia Beach architectural firm, has announced two new additions to its professional staff in recent weeks.

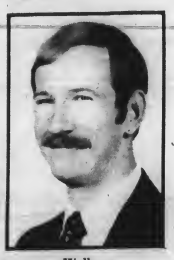
Margaret G. Covington, CSI, specifications writer, is a native of Richmond, living in Tidewater for the last nine years. Educated at J.S. Reynolds Community College where she majored in construction management, and Old Dominion University where she obtained a cost estimating certificate, Mrs. Covington is experienced in construction contract administration as well.

She is vice president of the Construction Specifications Institute, Tidewater Chapter, and a member of the American Business Women's Association.

Sam Cravotta, an architect with 15 years experience, has been active in the solar movement, as current vice president of the Virginia Solar Energy Association, past president of the Virginia Renewable Energy Lobby and a key speaker at all three solar summits and numerous other conferences.

He has taught passive solar architecture at the college level, had his own firm in Winchester, Virginia, received five solar design awards and published three conference papers.

Wallace Receives Degree



Wallace

Nianza Emory Wallace, II, recently received his Juris Doctorate degree from the Detroit College of Law, Detroit, Michigan. He graduated cum laude, and will return to his home in Virginia Beach.

During the summer of 1981, Wallace served a clinical internship in London, England, under the sponsorship of the Syracuse University College of Law. He received his B.A. in history and political science from Virginia Wesleyan College in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1974.

Wallace is married to the former Christine Anne Gaudreau; he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nianza E. Wallace of Virginia Beach.

Sun On Interview Show

Staff writer Mike Gooding of The Virginia Beach Sun recently appeared on "Tidewater Lifestyles," a variety/talk show on Cox Cable television's channel 11.

Gooding discussed the role of the community newspaper, his career, and some of the more interesting stories he has covered for the newspaper. The show was videotaped live at Pembroke Mall.

Appearing with Gooding on the program was Lewis McGehee, a singer and songwriter who performs regularly in Virginia Beach nightclubs.

A spokesperson for the station said the show will air Monday, April 4 at 8 p.m.

Corrections/Clarification

In last week's issue, the lead story accidently omitted the fact that, as everybody knows, Meyera Oberndorf dropped her law suit against Harold Heischober. Also, the cutline under the "Maloney Honored" picture was misleading. A memorial was not being dedicated in the late Daniel Maloney's name. Actually, the Virginia Beach Police Training Center was renamed the Daniel T. Maloney Police Training Center, in the slain Virginia Beach police officer's honor.

At the most recent professional boxing and kick-boxing matches in Virginia Beach, Beach kick-boxer David James won a first-round TKO over Jim Herley.

Some Beachers Feel Fertilizing Urge

Sun Flower

By Virginia Beach Extension Agent Randy Jackson

Most Virginia Beach homeowners feel an urgent need to fertilize their lawns every spring. Spring and summer feeding of Bermudagrass, zoysia and centipede is required, but not recommended for fescue 31.

Fertilizer is considered by many turf professionals as the most important management factor. Color, root development, food reserves, vigor, cold and heat tolerance, and insect and disease problems are influenced by fertilizer use.

Nitrogen is the most important single nutrient in fertilizer. It is vital to the manufacture of proteins, cell acids, enzymes and vitamins. Responses to nitrogen application occur quickly and are easily observed. Rate of growth, shoot elongation, root growth, density, color, disease tolerance, and the ability to recover following injurious exposure to heat, cold, or drought are all influenced by the manner in which nitrogen is used in the management program.

The most important point to keep in mind is that little or no nitrogen should be applied to fescue during the spring or summer.

The effect of nitrogen applications on cool season turfgrasses is of special significance in the transition zone (zone 8). The climatic conditions are highly variable and subject to repid and extreme changes in temperature. Moisture varies from excessive to drought conditions.

Under such conditions, the rate and schedule of nitrogen application assumes major importance. By controlling the amount of nitrogen applied and selecting the time of year it is applied, you can greatly enhance the performance of fescue 31 in Virginia Beach. On the other hand, nitrogen applications made at the wrong time, as in spring, weaken fescue and may lead to severe injury and sometimes loss during the stress periods of summer.

The key to maintaining a decent fescue lawn in this area is timing of fertilizer applications. About 90 percent of the nitrogen required should be applied between September and December. During this time of year, shorter days and lower temperatures result in excessive top growth and a drastic reduction in food reserves. The greatest cause of poor success with fescue is the large amounts of fertilizer we continue to needlessly dump on the lawn each spring and summer.

Voice Of The People

Should City Council Fund A New Virginia Beach Pops Orchestra Under The Direction Of Conductor Walter Noona?

"No. I think city council is already wasting too much money on foolishness like art and orchestras. Those sorts of things ought to be self-supporting. The city instead should spend its money on things that really matter; like improvement of roads, increased pay for cops and teachers, and erosion control at the beach. Virginia Beach Pops... who needs them?"

Mabelle McRory
Seven-Eleven clerk
three-year resident

McRory

"No. It would be unfair for council to go through all that trouble for the benefit of one man. Why should they? The city was already committed to funding that other group, so it should do so with or without the conductor. I don't agree with the idea, and I think it could set a precedent.

Mike O'Brien aircraft mechanic
1½-year resident

O'Brien

"I think Walter Noona has been done a great disservice by the people who fired him. He has done much for this region, it's a shame for him to now be without an orchestra to conduct. I think Virginia Beach would be foolish not to help him launch a new group."

Lynn Mergatroid
Cab driver
Four-year resident

Mergatroid

"No. Our city council is charged with the responsibility of making judgements and decisions based on those judgements for the good of all Virginia Beach citizens. If they were to go through with this, they'd be opening a Pandora's box.

This city is too large to allow personalities to conflict with decision-making."

'Partners' Assist Girls' Return To 'Outside World'

potential for setbacks and failure.

"A lot is required of the volunteers, and they get nothing in terms of financial compensation in return," said Woolf. "Those ladies are really the key to the whole thing."

Although it is to early to fully evaluate the effectiveness of Partners in Aftercare, Woolf said there are indications the program is working. Evidence can be found, she said, by evaluating girls who have been released since the advent of the program, and who are adapting to life on the outside.

A 17 year-old from the Hilltop area, whose name nas been withheld at the court's request, said her life has turned around because of the 11 months she spent at Bon Air. Much of the change, she said, can be attributed to the support she received through the Partners in Aftercare program.

"Before I went to Bon Air, I had a terrible attitude," she said. "I wanted to do what I wanted to do. I had no respect for anybody, not even for myself."

The girl explained that she was lashing out because of feelings she harbored over the death of her father when she was 10 years-old. "I felt deserted and rejected, and I didn't want to deal with him dying," she said. "I felt cheated and deprived, and so I rebelled against everything."

She said she got into the wrong crowd, skipped school, and drank alcohol to excess. After three years of this sort of behavior, she was committed to Bon Air.

"When I first got there, I got into lots of trouble," she said. "I got into a fight with another girl and was charged with assault. Then, I got caught with a lighter and got charged with possessing contraband. I kept getting in trouble and there was no end in sight."

During her last two months at the facility, the girl was paired up with a partner. That is when her fortunes changed.

"I finally realized that I have to make something of myself," she said. "I realized that there is more to life than running in the streets. I wanted to go home and be with my family.

"Part of my problem, I found, was that I had never been able to express my feelings," she said. "I learned that the best thing to do is to let your feelings out instead of holding them back."

The girl was "reluctant," she said, when the Partners in Aftercare program first began. "I thought to myself, 'here I am, just a teenager, and they are sticking me with this adult; I can't talk to her,'" she remembered. "But I gave it a chance, and my partner was really nice. She is a true friend."

Since her release in January, the girl and her partner have gone to movies and gone shopping together, and they regularly talk on the telephone. "She has made my life a whole lot easier," the girl noted. Today, the girl is finishing her high school equivilancey tests. "My life is really turning around," she said.

Woolf said that the success of the girls program may lead to a similar program for boys.

Such success stories are pleasing to the court's judges. "One of our main goals is to see that once we commit someone to the state correctional facility, that we don't ever see them in the courtroom again," said Judge Frederick P. Aucamp of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court. "This program will help immensely toward that end..

"The role of the court is to serve the community," continued Aucamp. "We can best serve the community by turning these children into productive citizens. The Partners in Aftercare progrm helps get these girls back into the mainstream. Also, if the program is successful it will reduce our caseload, which is also good for the community."

"The role of the court is to serve the community. We can best serve the community by turning these children into productive citizens. The Partners in Aftercare program helps get these girls back into the mainstream. Also, if the program is successful it will reduce our case load, which is also good for the community." - The Honorable Frederick P. Aucamp, judge, Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court.

Judge John K. Moore. also from the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court, said the program "has the potential to be one of the very best we have ever come up with in the courts.

"The partners program provides a strong connective link to the community for the girls with somebody else besides their family," he said. "This gives that child a friend, somebody she can confide in and trust."

Moore praised the efforts of the volunteers involved in the program.

"We don't have the staff for this," he said. "In fact, without volunteers, we couldn't even function. The job the volunteers do is very symptomatic of the spirit of this community. We are indeed very lucky to be blessed with these kind of people."

"It's a fantastic program; one of the most worthwhile I've ever seen in my 25 years in this line of work," said Kathleen Liles, superintendent of the Bon Air Learning Center. "It is one of the most innovative ideas I have ever seen.

"I wish every court in the state had a marvelous program like this," Liles continued. "One of our big problems here at Bon Air is that our girls have a real low self concept. When the volunteers from Virginia Beach come all the way up here to Richmond just to see the girls, it makes them feel important. Everybody needs to know somebody cares about them. Plus, this gives them a friend when they get back."

Re-entry into the outside world is often a difficult process, according to Liles. "The girls leave here, with all the structure and regimentation and dependence, and when they get out it is sometimes a shock," she said. "They need a weaning process because their first few weeks and months out of the learning center are a very important time in their lives. A normal adjustment is essential, and this program really helps that process along."

Woolf

Liles hailed the Virginia Beach courts as being "very progressive and caring" for instituting the Partners in Aftercare program. the program's volunteers, said Liles, "are going straight to Heaven. I can't say enough about them. They are truly wonderful individuals," she added.

Rogers Wins History Essay Contest

By Jackie Matthews,
Sun Correspondent

Kim Rogers, daughter of Cdr. and Mrs. Michael W. Rogers of Kings Forest Virginia Beach, has won the District 1 Championship Award in the annual American History Month essay contest.

The contest was sponsored by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Its purpose is to spark more interest among the young in American History. Mrs. Jo Anne French, Kim's sixth grade English teacher at Malibu Elementary, required each of her students to write an essay and then selected the most outstanding and entered them in the contest. Mrs. French said, "the students had to list at least six research books where they obtained their information." Some of the topics of the essays included, education, clothing, housing, furniture, occupation, weapons, tools, and recreation. Kim's essay was School Books in Colonial Times.

"I was very surprised and excited, this was the first contest that I have ever won," Kim said. Her essay has been entered in the state competition. She received a medal and certificate from the three Virginia Beach chapters of the DAR.

The DAR also presented metals to outstanding students of American History in the city's high schools: Kenny Tennyson, Princess Anne; Eric Norfleet, Bayside; Chris O'Neill, Cox; Julie Bright, Kellam; Michael Davis, First Colonial; Craig Hudson, Kempsville; and Janet Pascua, Green Run.

Referendum Proceedure Discussed

There's "no formal procedure" on the method by which a citizen may circulate petitions calling for a referendum to be placed in the Nov. 8 general election ballot, said Virginia Beach Delegate Glenn B. McClanan.

McClanan said that most likely, a citizen would go to "the attorney of your choice" to make sure the language on the petitions is worded properly to appear as a referendum.

Before a referendum is placed on a ballot, petitions reflecting the exact wording of the question must carry enough names, in number only, to represent 25% of the residents voting in the city's last election.

Vivian Hitchcock, a civic activist, is circulating petitions asking the question, "...shall members of the Virginia Beach School Board be selected by the popular election of the qualified voters?"

She needs 15,220 names on the petitions beforee the question is eligible as a referendum.

1983 Shamrock Draws 1,900 Runners

After more than 26 miles, some runners had just enough steam to make it across the finish line.

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

The seventh annual Virginia Beach Shamrock Marathon, a 26-mile, 385-yard race, has been won by Nick Manchu, a 24 year-old Romanian immigrant participating in his first American marathon.

Manchu defeated a field of more than 1,900 runners, completing the course in two hours, 19 minutes and 32 seconds, nearly eight minutes and one and one-half miles ahead of runner-up Tom Stevens of Middletown, Md. The winning time is the third fastest in the Shamrock's history. The record of 2:16:57 was set by Terry Baker in 1981.

The first woman to finish was Juanita Etheridge, a 31 year-old Norfolk schoolteacher. Etheridge, who placed 36th overall, recorded a time of two hours, 51 minutes and 51 seconds; 12 minutes and 10 seconds ahead of women's runner-up Deborah Beckner of Norfolk. For Etheridge, the 1983 Shamrock was her second victory in the event. In 1981 she won the race in two hours, 44 minutes and eight seconds.

Of the 1,900 runners who started the race, nearly 1,200 finished. An estimated crowd of between 2,000 and 4,000 was on hand near the finish line on Atlantic Avenue near 8th Street.

Virginia Beach runners fared "very well," according to David McDonald's president of the event's co-sponsor, The Tidewater Striders. McDonald, an investigator with the City of Virginia Beach Consumer Protection Division, won the Shamrock five-mile run with a time of 24 minutes and two seconds. He did not participate in the marathon because he is in training for next month's Boston Marathon, he said.

Rich Thompson of Virginia Beach finished third overall in the marathon, with a time of 2:28:19. In fifth place was Virginia Beach's William Bernard, who crossed the finish line in two hours, 32 minutes and 31 seconds. Rod Harvey of Virginia Beach was in ninth place, with a time of 2:35:17. Coming in 11th place was Alax Pincu of Virginia Beach in two hours, 38 minutes and 18 seconds. Richard Short of Virginia Beach, with a time of 2:39:51, finished in 15th place.

Griffin Rogers of Virginia Beach won the men's 23-29 division, with a time of 2:48:32.

Wayne Wilson of Virginia Beach finished fifth in the men's 35-39 category, with a time of 2:58:46.

In the men's 40-44 division, Virginia Beach's Tom Siggins came in second place, with a time of 2:45:23.

Winning the men's 45-49 division was Mel Williams of Virginia Beach, who recorded a time of 2:47:10.

Freda Tenant of Virginia Beach won the women's 30-34 division with a time of 3:21:27.

Fran Adams of Virginia Beach won the women's 50-and-over division with a time of 3:33:54.

The Shamrock two-miler was dominated by Virginia Beach runners, who captured three of the top-five slots. In second was Rodney Rogers, with a time of 11:49; in third was Al Cartwell, with a time of 12:03; and in fourth was Brian Wakefield with a time of 12:13. Shirley Cardwell of Virginia Beach was the women's runner-up in the event, finishing in 15 minutes and 29 seconds.

The race began at 10 a.m. at 8th Street and Atlantic Avenue. Runners headed up Atlantic Avenue, into Seashore State Park. They came back down Shore Drive, through Fort Story and proceeded on the Boardwalk. At 7th Street, the course veered through Rudee Inlet, down General Booth Boulevard, past Camp Pendleton and into Red Wing Park. The course then swung back toward the finish line at 8th Street.

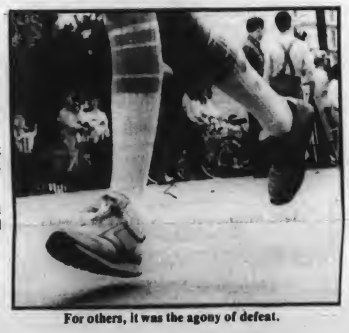
"It was a great field and great day," said McDonald. "It was a little hot, which may have caused some of the slow times, but it was good weather as far as drawing spectators."

Winner Manchu of Romania completed the Shamrock in the third fastest time ever in the seven-year history of the race.

Virginia Beach's Freda Tennant won the women's 30-34 division with a time of 3:21:27

A supportive crowd from 2,000 to 4,000 was on hand...

...To cheer on the victorious Manchu.



For others, it was the agony of defeat.

*Current annualized yield for the 30-day period ended February 18, 1983. Yield is computed by annualizing the most recent monthly dividend from net investment income (14.6¢) divided by the average daily offering price of $15.07 (including maximum sales charge) for the period for which yield is presented. The value of the Fund's assets and its current yield will vary. For this period, the maximum public offering price per share ranged from $14.85 to $15.22. Yield should be considered relative to changes in the value of the Fund's shares and risks associated with the Fund's investment objectives and policies. The Fund may invest in securities in lower rating categories, unrated securities and foreign securities. Because the value of such securities may tend to be more volatile and they may be subject to higher rates of loss of income and principal, an investment in the Fund's shares may be considered more speculative than an investment in shares of a fund which invests primarily in high grade corporate bonds. This yield should not be considered as representative of the Fund's return for any specific period in the future.

Thalia Library Site Chosen

ginia Beach Boulevard, as opposed to the TCC site. He said the report could be construed as "self-serving" and Jennings criticized the use of "unnamed sources."

He interpreted the report as concluding that $2 million could be saved by using the TCC site, while the report went on to defend the Thalia site. He moved that work be stopped on the Thalia site and that a "first class, blue chip" citizens committee be appointed by Council to determine the best and most cost effective location for the central library.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan seconded his motion which subsequently lost by the 9-2 vote with only Jennings and McClanan voting in favor.

McClanan said that a study should be made of the entire capital development plan of the libraries in view of other pressing financial priorities in the city.

Council apparently was concerned with the possibility of having to ask for an increase in the real estate tax in the upcoming operating budget which will be presented by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck next Monday.

Councilman John A. Baum said he was not against blue chips, but questioned the timing. He said Council had "been through this" and that it was a little late to come up with another site. The site has been purchased by the city for $420,000 and Muehlenbeck said he was ready to employ an architect the design the building.

Baum added that the TCC site was not central enough for the central library and that once the city has started proceedings, it would be wasteful of tax dollars to change course. He said he knew Jennings was sincere, but he agreed "with what we've done."

Councilman Harold Heischober said he had no problem with a committee, but wanted to know what a delay might mean to the effort. Jennings had suggested the committee be made up of retired military leaders, retired business leaders, active business and industrial leaders, users of the library and other taxpayers.

Board Chairman Jack Robertson said that a delay would place the city in a position of having to pay more for the construction.

Muehlenbeck said that was a worthy point. He added that he was about to sign a contract with an architect and if there were to be further delays he did not want to string an architect along.

Robertson said that the staff has been studying libraries to best meet the needs and interests of the people. He said that three or four years ago, the concept changed to working toward two area libraries (as opposed to neighborhood libraries) and the central library. He said that most branch libraries in the city are in 5,500 square-foot buildings, but that it is more economical to build 20,000 square-foot area libraries.

He said the Board has been studying the city's needs for 2.5 years. He said the sites considered on Virginia Beach Boulevard were controversial. He said that the TCC site is not centrally located and "we did not justify our point in spite of everything. We haven't taken it lightly. Members the 50% portion of the population in the Democratic party since 1970. We have had Democrats who have represented little pieces of it."

"No Preference" - Holland

Holland does not expect any opposition from within his party. He will compete in the Nov. 8 general election against either Harold Heischober or Meyera Oberndorf, both at-large Republican members of the Virginia Beach City Council. They will compete for the Republican nomination at a June 11 convention.

Holland said whatever Republican candidate is selected, it will have no bearing on his campaign.

"I have no preference," Holland said. "I think you're talking about two different candidates. You have one candidate who has a fairly high name identification. You have another candidate who has shown some ability in his short time to work with people at maybe a little better level than the other one. Well, I've got hopefully some name identification and a whole lot of ability shown to work with people.

"I don't think there's a candidate that's easy to beat. I've never taken any candidate that I've run against in city council races lightly in any manner. I don't intend to now. I intend to run a true, hard campaign."

Holland said his 12 years on council would help him in Richmond toward the realization of his legislative goals.

"I would promote and work towards as much enomony and efficiency in state government as possible," he said, "and to do my best to get state government more responsive to local government needs. And that's where my 12 years on city council would be very valuable."

Senate of Virginia as a Democrat."

Canada is more experienced in legislative matters than Canada, an observation of which Jones is keenly aware.

"I have to give them (the voters) some good reasons why I think they should vote for me," Jones said. "I'm sure at the point that I'd declare I'd have some statements to initiate the reasons why the public should start thinking about my perspective on the issues as opposed to Joe's perspective."

Canada would not discuss Jones' possible opposition to him specifically, because Jones has not formally declared himself a candidate for the seat. But Canada welcomes any and all challenges.

"I think it's good for the system," Canada, an attorney, said. "We need ideas; different approaches. I'd be disappointed if I didn't have opposition."

Over the years, among other things, Canada has had passed a drunk driving bill; a drug paraphenalia bill and secured $5.4 million for Virginia Beach's Tidewater Community College. This past session he had passed Senate Bill 345, allowing for victim impact statements in the courts. The statement says what significant physical, psychological or economic injury was caused to the victim.

If Canada is reelected to another four-year term, he would like to focus more attention on illicit drugs.

"I want to work in the drug field," Canada said. "I think we've made some big progress legislatively. How much that's translated into actual changes I'm not really sure."

Canada said Virginia Beach is experiencing as much drug traffic, of not more, than ever.

"I think we are," he said. "I think perhaps there's been a shift of emphasis from marijuana to cocaine. There's more cocaine now than in the past. However, I think that some of those involved with it are getting a little apprehensive. We've had a few convictions of significance. Hopefully this will have an affect.

"I still believe very strongly that a person who is involved with a large amount of drugs should go to jail for a long time; so we can tell those drug dealers, 'stay out of our state because if you're going to be involved with drugs you're going to jail.'"

Canada also said there's people in Virginia Beach who are aware of drug trafficking, but not reporting it.

"I feel very strongly that there are many, many, many people out there that know a lot about the drug trade and don't say anything," Canada said. "The police can't do it all. They need the help of every man, woman and child."

Canada also said he is "very encouraged" over what progress has been made in the state in regard to drunk driving.

Canada, who has before called for the direct election of the city mayor, said he may call for it again.

"This is not aimed at any person," he said, "and I want to make this clear. It was not aimed at the present mayor. It was started long before he was even on the council. Evidently it has broken down, or people have perceived it to be a slap in his face; but it's not. Anyway, there are a lot of people who agree that it may be on the ballot as an advisory referendum."

Candidates have until mid-April to declare. Jones says he'll wait until near then to announce whether he'll oppose Canada.

"If I'm going to run I don't need to be out too much before that," he said.

Council Picks Thalia Site

of the Board asked me to say we feel we have given it very careful attention." He urged council to re-affirm its plan to build at Thalia and to proceed with the project.

Councilman Dr. J. McCoy Jr. said that while he supported the need to shop around, he saw no point in looking around for a committee to say what we want them to say."

He said the board is made up of 11 members and with the 11 members of Council are sufficient to make a decision. "Too many cooks spoil the broth," he said.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said that the Board which is constituted like Council (seven members represent boroughs), and four are at-large members is a reflection of City Council. She questioned that the Board said there would be $2 million in savings.

The report states that locating the central library adjacent to TCC will not result in a $2.5 million savings in the 1985-86 Charter Bond Debt, but would require a reconfiguration for the library's capital development program and which may result in the construction of a smaller and perhaps less expensive building to meet the needs of south Kempsville. Any savings "will be significantly less than $2.5 million," the report states.

Jennings said the 25,000 square foot library contemplated for the South Lynnhaven Area library near the intersection of Lynnhaven Parkway and Princess Anne Road represents a $2.5 million expenditure. According to the report this library would be "inappropriate if the central library were located next to TCC. He also said that the TCC site was only 12 minutes from Providence and Kempsville Roads.

He said the city may become "library poor" and that Council has to look at other priorities first.

Oberndorf said she considered the libraries as extension of the education system. She said it was extremely difficult for children to go to Kirn Memorial Library in Norfolk or the Old Dominion University Library in Norfolk for research. She said that she did not vote for the site on Virginia Beach Boulevard, but that now it's a fact. She said it would be easier for citizens to get there than to get to the TCC site on Princess Anne Road.

Oberndorf pointed out that the report also said that if the library were relocated, that would argue for the reconsideration of an appropriate library facility on the Little Neck Peninsula. The Capital Improvement Program for 1980-85 estimated that a 7,000 square-foot single-story library of 42,000 volumes in that area would cost approximately $1.3 million.

Jennings, who represents the Little Neck area as a Councilman from the Lynnhaven Borough, retorted that his interests were not parochial, that he had just seen a statement on the operating budget and saw a possible real estate tax increase. "I will not back off," he said.

Councilman Harold Heischober recalled that when the Thalia site was selected a library at Little Neck was put on the back burner. The people from Little Neck were assured they will have the central library in their area.

He said what bothered him was that contractors were getting busy and the city was talking about a 90,000 square foot building at a cost of $11 million. Even a small increase in building costs would add up a big increase in expenditure for the city. He said he did not want to be a political referee and that the fact that Jannings put the Library board to work studying alternatives was good.

Jennings then said he was not reacting out of anger, but noted that the library had grown from a $1.3 million facility to an $11 million facility three years later. He said Princess Anne Road is scheduled for improvement this year or next. He said it will be four-laned from Edwin Drive to Lynnhaven Parkway.

Oberndorf said the 11 members of the library board do not get any remuneration. The recommendations they give Council, she said, are not given because they will gain or lose and are not out of "malevolent or selfish interests," but as the result of a lot of dedicated services.

Jennings said it appeared the staff prepared most of the report.

McClanan then pointed out confusion between the Library's capital budget and the city's capital budget. Some of the library projects referred to are not in the city's capital budget.

After the vote, McClanan asked that Council be given the opportunity to see the specifications which the staff will give to the architect. She also wondered about the one-third office space reserved in the new building.

Councilman Robert G. Jones remarked about the high cost.

Robertson pointed out the $11 million was only an estimate and that Public Works always has high figures.

He said that the CBN library under construction is costing $65 a square (versus the $122 square foot for the city estimate) and that building is "much more grandiose than we're going to be in our building."

Mutual Funds

Timing Is Vital Factor

By Madeline Fortunato

Our economic times are most complex today. While inflation seems to be down some of us are still in a dilemma not knowing whether we are in a false recovery or truly out of the recession. Well for those of us that can put aside this question, there is an opportunity to take advantage of good buying in the stock market. The trend is upward and the dow is at an all time high. Professionally managed mutual funds are an excellent vehicle for those of us who lack a lot of money, time, and knowledge of the market.

Mutual funds had their best year ever in 1982. $14.9 billion sales of all types other than short term funds were 50% higher than the previous record of 1980, with total assets of around $300 billion. The mutual fund industry is 6 times as large as it was 5 years ago. It has 21 million shareholder accounts, and more than 3 million new shareholder accounts were added in money market funds during 1982, and the average investor in these accounts earned approximately 12%. Investors in mutual funds have exchange priveleges which allow them to reposition their investments from one fund to another in the same management group with minimal or no cost.

Most people make the mistake of thinking that a market should behave in a rational manner. timing and emotions play a vital role when investing, and this is why mutual funds have proven to be an excellent investment.

Take The Deductions

By John Hewitt

There are literally dozens of deductions that you can take even if you do not use the "long form" (i.e. itemizing your deductions).

Some of the most overlooked of these are (1) moving expenses; (2) job seeking automobile and travel expenses; (3) child care expenses; (4) energy saving items such as insulation, storm doors, etc.;(5) a portion of charitable contributions; and (6) using your car for educational expenses and second job mileage.

Linda Hewitt, President of Mel Jackson's Income Tax says "most people miss these and many other deductions because their tax preparer doesn't take time to thoroughly interview them".

"Fortunately, you can amend your tax return to take advantage of this," says Ms. Hewitt.

Withholding 10% Of Interest and Dividends

"Not The American Way"

Congress and Administration are feeling the heat from taxpayers upset about the withholding of 10 per cent of interest and dividend income that will begin on July 1.

Momentum is building for repeal of this law. In fact, so many savers and investors are complaining that more than 340 Congressmen are co-sponsoring legislation to repeal withholding.

But the Administration has not given up, and in fact has thrown a new and dangerous weapon into the fray: Intimidation.

Financial institutions that have rightly explained how withholding will impact taxpayers and have encouraged their depositors to write Congress about the plan are now bearing the full weight of the U.S. Treasury's ire.

Donald Regan, Secretary of the Treasury and one of withholding's main proponents, has responded to this activity by our financial institutions with the threat of legislative reprisal. Mr. Regan warned that financial institutions "...run a grave risk of infuriating the tax-writing committees" of Congress if they win their bid to repeal the new withholding rule.

That's intimidation -- and that's not the American way.

Mr. Regan and his allies must be worried about the ground swell of grassroots opposition to this unnecessary and costly withholding plan, and he apparently is willing to use any means, even threats, to squelch opposition to this unpopular, poorly conceived and unnecessary law.

But the fight to repeal is far from over. Arkansas Senator David Pryor strongly rebuked the treasury Secretary's outburst, telling Mr. Regan that "...it is absolutely appropriate for (S&Ls and banks) to inform their depositors and the general public of the action taken last summer by Congress, action which will have a serious effect on many middle-income and low-income taxpayers."

And those 340 Senators and Representatives who are backing withholding-repeal legislation are an indication that at least some people in the federal government listen to their constituents.

The United States League of Savings Institutions points out that the Treasury's own research indicates the taxpayer compliance rate on interest and dividend income already is 97 per cent when 1099 reporting is involved. You can't get much better than that.

And of the $4.3 billion the Treasury expects to raise from withholding, only $1.3 billion will be new revenue. The remainder is taxes that are paid when due but which interest and dividend withholding will allow the Internal Revenue Service to collect early, -- an interest-free loan to the government from savers and investors.

Estimates place the cost to collect this tax at 30 to 40 percent of the revenue "gain." By any standard, that's a terribly inefficient way to raise money.

Even so, the pressures are enormous and the battle is difficult. But the people can win. If enough of us complain about withholding, Congress will have to listen.

"I Had A Dream"

By Rip Coard

David Colvin "had a dream." David is owner of the Cedar Cove Inn, an elegant new restaurant located in the Fernwood Section, off Great Bridge Boulevard and on the Albemarle Canal in Chesapeake. He and his wife Robin, brought a wealth of experience to the new venture. The husband-wife team also have successful restaurant/lounges in Norfolk and Virginia Beach, but this one, said Dave is "exciting" and "my every waking hour is spent in finding ways to make it even better." The property Cedar Cove is situated on is practically surrounded by inland waterways that provide a beautiful setting for dining. From practically every vantage point, one can enjoy the view through large picture windows. The interior is served by a tremendous bar situated center-room, a seafood bar, banquet room for fifty, fireplace for elegant and romantic fireside dining and the warmth of natural wood and beautiful greenery throughout.

The patio will seat over 200 in the summer, and there are plans for an enormous playground for the kids adjacent to the arch-style patio.

Situated as it is, the Marina, docking facilities and gas stations serve the boating community well. Add the interior seating capacity of 170 to the 50 in the banquet room and potential 200 on the patio and it doesn't take long to realize this is an enormous restaurant.

"I had a dream," said Dave last week, "and it's coming to fruition." Colvin is so right! Having eaten at the Cedar Cove Inn on two occasions already, I and many of my staff can attest to the fact that Dave Colvin "has arrived," and Chesapeake is to be well served by his arrivall The food, prepared by Chef Spike Markatos, formerly of Athens, Greece and a highly professional, totally creative "old-country-chef" with over 27 years experience, is superb.

The service is the friendliest down-home style I've witnessed for such an elegant restaurant. It is a pleasure to be served so quickly and courteously.

A class act, unlike any other in Chesapeake to our knowledge.

Luxury Condos Rise On The Bay

The Builders Block is a regular feature highlighting new construction in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake.

By Doug Hickman

Casa del Playa is a two phase condominium community under construction three quarters of a mile east of the Lynnhaven Inlet Bridge at Shore Drive and Starfish Road (on the east side of Westminster Canterbury).

Casa del Playa employs a unique California Spanish design which blends quite well with its' beach environment. There will be two phases (buildings) of construction. The first will contain twelve units to be completed by July, and the second phase is scheduled for occupancy by January 1984. Each phase will be three stories and incorporate an elevator, covered walkways, a seven foot hot tub, recreational decks and ground level storage areas for your convenience. Total security and privacy is insured by a gate house with guard 24 hours a day.

All units are roughly 1400 square feet with 2 bedrooms and 2 full baths. The floor plan leaves nothing to be desired with its efficient use of space, but designed for luxurous living, witnessed by the sunken 22 foot living room with fireplace. The formal living room affords access to a spacious balcony where by day you can observe the boating activities on the bay, at days end an unobstructed technicolor sunset, and at night, the lights of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel offer as beautiful a sight as may be seen anywhere in Tidewater.

A generous list of standard features includes: range and oven, disposal, dishwasher, compactor, no wax vinyl flooring, designer wallpaper in the kitchen and baths, ice maker connections, wall to wall carpeting and double stainless steel sinks. The energy saving standard features include: double pane insulated Anderson windows and patio doors, insulated steel exterior doors, R19 ceilings, R11 sidewalls, energy mizer water heaters and heat pump with central air.

These units will stand as the latest tribute to the foresight and planning of the Hudgins Organization, whose other contempory developments include: Seagull Bluff, Pelican Dunes, Cape Henry Villas, Roudee Villas, Croatan and Salt Marsh Points. The project is being built by Hudgins and Associates and is marketed by Hudgins Real Estate. "By controlling a project from start to finish, we can assure our customers of the quality they expect and deserve," said Littleton "Lit" Hudgins. It's this type of thinking that has made Hudgins the leader in the development of resort properties. Casa del Playa can only further this image. With construction still in the early stages, and 9 of the 12 Phase 1 units sold, others obviously agree. Prices range from $115,000 to $140,000 in Phase 1 and $140,000 to $160,000 in Phase II.

Real Estate Management Tips

The Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM) Foundation has published a 36-page research study, which investigates real estate investment returns and their implications for property managers. The study, entitled Determinants of Return in Real Estate Investment and the Role of Real Estate Management, was conducted and authored by George W. Gau, Ph.D., who is associate professor in the Urban Land Economics Division of the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada.

The data set utilized in this study represents the most detailed and accurate sample of information on real estate assets ever collected in a given market. The data, gathered in 1980, are based on 156 apartment properties and 116 commercial properties sold during 1979 in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Among Gau's findings are:

•Tax-loss shelters play a relatively minor role in real estate investment;

•Equity gains possible from debt financing play a significant role in real estate investment;

•The higher return earned on leveraged properties is not a "free lunch" for the equity investors because the level of risk also is quite high;

•"Economies of scale" exist in the operation of apartment buildings but are absent in the case of commercial properties. "Economies of scale" occur when average operating costs are lower for larger structures.

•Little relationship is apparent between the price of a real estate investment and the rate of return received by the investor.

These findings obviously have significant bearing on property management. For instance, according to Gau, "The finding that economies of scale exist in the operation of apartment buildings, but not commercial buildings, has direct and significant implications for property managers. Because larger apartment properties have lower average operating expenses per dollars of gross income, property managers can attain noteworthy savings through the development of apartment projects on a large scale."

Gau also points out that more expensive properties do not consistently earn a higher rate of return. This implies that, "with proper management, small investors can do as well as large investors in real estate markets."

Determinants of Return in Real Estate Investment and the Role of Real Estate Management is the first in a series of real estate research studies commissioned by the IREM Foundation president, "The IREM Foundation will continue to provide funding for those worthy endeavors which will contribute significantly to the overall growth, professionalism and general quality of the real estate industry."

Claudia Mason of Chesapeake (l.) and Ruth Roughton of Chesapeake, Avon Products District Manager, was a guest of the company at their New York City world headquarters recently in recognition for her outstanding leadership skills. She was among the 16 other District Managers who generated outstanding sales for 1982. The all-expenses paid three-day trip included a stay at the glamorous Plaza Hotel, sumptious dinners at famous restaurants and a Broadway show.

Avon is the world's leading manufacturer and distributor of cosmetics, fragrances and fashion jewelry. Its products are sold by approximately 1.34 million independent sales Representatives to customers in 32 countries. Avon's other businesses include Mallinckrodt, Inc., a leading manufacturer of health care products, specialty chemicals and food ingredients, flavors and fragrances; Tiffany & Co., and Avon Fashions, Inc.

Selling Your Home

Would You Perform Surgery On Yourself?

"Trying to sell a home without the aid of a realtor is like performing surgery on yourself: you may get the job done, but the results often are not worth the effort."

Fran Rohdenburg of Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corp. offered to share the following observations with persons considering trying to sell homes themselves:

•Setting the proper price for the home is not as simple as it may seem. "It involves a thorough understanding of the market, an assessment of the competition and an awareness of recent selling prices of comparable homes", Rohdenburg said.

•She explained that local buyers who know their way around often shop "For Sale by Owners" in hopes of discounting the asking price by the amount of a normal real estate commission, which takes the savings out of the seller's pocket and into the buyer's. A motivated out-of-town buyer doesn't have time to wander around looking for bargains in an unfamiliar city, so the owner who is successful at selling his own house often nets very close to the same amount as he would have if he had sold through a Realtor.

•The seller does not have the time nor the ability to screen "lookers" from potential buyers. "A conscientious salesperson will prequalify all buyers and only show the home to prospects with the financial ability to purchase. Showings and open houses are arranged to minimize the inconvenience to the seller as much as possible," she explained.

•Answering the questions and criticisms of potential buyers take a good deal of know-how. "It's especially difficult for the buyer to honestly critique the home in front of the owner, and if he does, it's difficult for the owner to answer criticisms objectively--without becoming defensive," Rohdenburg said.

•The seller does not know--and can't learn overnight--all the intricacies of financing a purchase, nor the techniques of closing the transaction. "If he's not able to provide the buyer with all possible financing alternatives and is unfamiliar with the closing process, he easily could lose a sale that could have been put together by a good agent," she noted.

•Because of his limited access to motivated, qualified buyers, it often takes a good deal longer for an owner to sell his home than it would a realtor who belongs to a multiple listing service. "A seller must realize that time lost in selling can actually mean money lost: additional cost for interest, taxes, payment of principal and maintenance of the home," Rohdenburg added. "If the family must move on and leave the house vacant, the costs really begin to climb."

"The possible benefit from selling a home is often outweighed by the potential problems and risks encountered by the seller along the way," Rohdenburg noted. "And," she added, "how do you measure the value of the seller's time, or how much a worry-free transaction is worth?"

Professionalism

By Roger Pyle

For this weeks article lets talk about what you should expect from your residential Realtor if you are a homebuyer.

First of all, I need to emphasize that most Realtors work on a commission basis. They are to be admired for that. Their pay is unequivocally tied to productivity which is one thing that the entire U.S. economy needs more of. Also, it takes lots of coverage and self confidence to work on 100% commission. If your Realtor is providing good service, they deserve your loyalty.

Good service to a homebuyer should include:

1. If you are coming in from out of town, advance information packets should be sent to give you an overview of the area, outlining good residential locations, routes to your work and schools. Motel reservations and precise directions on how to get there should be given.
2. You should expect to be picked up at your motel, provided with an area briefing that includes where the best home values are in your price range, routes and distances to your work, schools and recreation.
3. Your Realtor should then show you all the suitable property in your price range. They should be able to explain differences in construction, location and financing. Here's where the loyalty comes in. If your Realtor is doing a good job for you, for heavens sake stay with them. If you go out with another Realtor, it is the same as dropping your original Realtor cold. If that's what you want to do, it's perfectly permissable, but if your Realtor is doing a good job, stay with them.
4. Your Realtor can help you make your final selection of the right home, advise you on what to offer, negociate with the seller, finalize the sale and help you get the loan.
5. Finally they should go to settlement with you to help make sure that everything is completed to your satisfaction.

10% Tax Withholding

Surge Of "Unreal Money"

Savers and investors will lose some $1.5 billion a year beginning July 1, 1983 under a new law requiring banks and other financial institutions to withhold 10 percent of interest and dividend payments, says David C. Hastings, Senior Vice President and Director of Corporate Taxes for First & Merchants National Bank.

Hastings has become a national spokesman on the controversial withholding provision of Reagan's 1982 tax bill ever since he was selected by the American Bankers Association to serve as Chairman of a special Task Force on Withholding and Taxpayer Compliance.

In mid-July of 1982, Hastings met with President Reagan and Treasury Secretary Regan in an attempt to squelch the withholding portion of the bill which eventually was passed in August, 1982. He and other Task Force members who represent the banking industry are actively involved in lobbying efforts to repeal the withholding provision.

"People are just beginning to realize that the widely-publicized 10 percent tax cut in July will be accompanied by the government's withholding 10 percent of their interest earnings on their savings and investments," Hastings said.

Hastings added that Congress, after repeatedly defeating similar proposals over the past 40 years, passed the legislation this summer ostensibly to increase the level of taxpayer compliance in the area of dividends.

However, he said, a 1981 Treasury Department report concluded that at least 95 percent of taxpayers already pay taxes on interest and dividend income that is subject to reporting. And 75 percent of individual tax returns submitted for 1981 ended up with refunds totaling $53 billion.

"Therefore," said Hastings, "It is pretty obvious that instead of real income to the Treasury, there will be a surge of unreal new money to the government in 1983, most of which will have to be returned to taxpayers the following year."

Because the loss of income in interest and dividend compounding will exceed $1.5 billion, "most people who save and invest will be punished for saving," Hastings charged. "What we have here is a disincentive for saving and investment."

The new law allows some exemptions from the withholding provision. People who are under 65 and have a tax liability of $600 (1,100 on a joint return), and people over 65 with a tax liability of $1500 ($2500 on a joint return), may apply for an exemption from withholding.

However, Hastings said, "The way those exemptions will be handled is just another example of unnecessary government intrusion into our lives." Filing for exemption will be the sole responsibility of the consumer and not that of the financial institution.

To qualify for an exemption, people have to go to their banks and give a bank employee a form on which they have sworn that their tax liability for the previous year was less than the ceiling amounts. This raises a serious privacy issue, Hastings charged.

"How would you like your bank teller, who may be your neighbor or a member of your church, to see how much tax you pay? In addition, you will have to file an exemption form for each account. And there is a $500 penalty for a customer giving us a false exemption certificate. Furthermore, the customer must notify us within 10 days of becoming non-exempt and cancel each exemption certificate outstanding."

Besides the enormous expense to taxpayers in the loss of interest compounded and the privacy issue for those who qualify for exemptions, Hastings added that another flaw in the withholding provision is that it shows no promise for improving compliance--the reason that Congress gave for passing the law in the first place.

Hastings explained that the tax law also includes new provisions to broaden "information reporting"--the process by which banks and other financial institutions report interest payments to the IRS.

Hastings said that First & Merchants National Bank supported and even recommended the provisions to broaden information reporting. It would be far more useful in improving compliance than withholding 10 percent of interest payments, "which penalizes millions of honest taxpayers," he said.

"The whole principle behind withholding on interest and dividends is an insult," Hastings said. "The implication is that you and I cannot be trusted to pay the taxes we owe."

Hastings urged that people write their Congressional representatives about the 10 percent withholding on interest and dividends. "If there is a strong national protest from the people back home, our Congressmen and Senators will have no choice but to repeal this bad law," he said.

"Tell them in clear, unequivocal language that we would rather have Uncle Sam trust us and not be raiding our savings accounts.

"The government wants a piece of our savings. Instead, let's give Congress a piece of our mind."

Contractors Paving Co., Inc.

Firm "Quality Certified"

The manufacturing facility of Contractors Paving Co., Inc., Virginia Beach, has been designated a Quality Certified Plant in the 1983-84 Quality Plant Certification Program of the National Asphalt Pavement Association (NAPA), the national trade association for Hot Mix Asphalt producers and paving contractors.

"NAPA's Plant Quality Certification Program provides a method of recognition for Hot Mix Asphalt manufacturing facilities that meet established criteria, assuring public works officials, architects, pavement design engineers, and the general public of the plant's ability to produce a product to meet specifications," Richard W. Sprinkel, 1983 Chairman of the Board, said.

"Individuals and organizations involved in specifying the design or purchase of Hot Mix Asphalt pavements for driveways, streets, parking areas, airports, and recreational usages such as tennis courts, bikeways, and playgrounds, now have an additional basis to aid them in selecting a firm for hot mix production and placement of the pavement," he said.

In addition to establishing consumer confidence in the firm's ability to produce a quality product, participation in NAPA's Plant Quality Certification Program reflects the additional efforts and dedication made by Contractors Paving Co., Inc., toward awareness of its obligations to its customers and the public.

Fannie Mae Needs Broader Discretion

The Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) should continue making home mortgage financing its main focus and not expand into other types of loans, the National Association of Realtors said in a statement to the Senate Banking Committee's subcommittee on housing and urban affairs.

Fannie Mae should be allowed broader discretion in its business operation and less federal regulation, but should not dilute its housing role by making or buying commercial and consumer loans and other non-housing investments as it has proposed, the National Association said. The statement noted that there is "not a real need for a secondary market for these types of loans."

The Realtors' statement also pointed out that Fannie Mae does not need new powers to fund non-housing loans to make money.

"Under new management, Fannie Mae is making tremendous progrss in returning to black ink," said the statement, which was submitted as testimony on Thursday.

The National Association said it supports Fannie Mae's "authority to guarantee mortgage-backed securities issued by other agencies, to expand the authority of its board of directors and to allow voting rights for holders of Fannie Mae preferred stock. It also supports removal of the $250,000 statutory mortgage ceiling imposed on the loans purchase programs of Fannie Mae and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac).

"This will not impair the ability of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to meet credit needs of those seeking more moderately and lower-priced homes," the statement said. "On the contrary, by strengthening the market position of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, it will make them better able to serve buyers of lower - and moderate-priced homes."

The Association also supported a proposal allowing Freddie Mac to purchase loans secured by mobile homes, second mortgages and state agency-insured loans, adding that it hopes Freddie Mac will purchase more new mortgages this year than it did in 1982.

The Association asked the subcommittee to clarify language in last year's Depository Institutions Deregulation Act preemptying state restrictions on alternative mortgage instruments (AMIs) so that non-federally chartered lenders could originate these loans and sell them in the secondary market.

"The statutory language is drafted in such a way as to allow any mortgage, even a standard fixed-rate loan, to be made by a state-chartered lender under federal rules," which was not the intent of the legislation, the statement said.

Noting that the mortgage-backed securities program of the Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae) has allowed the origination of FHA and VA mortgages at attractive rates to homebuyers, the National Association urged Congress to raise the level of Ginnie Mae securities commitments from the $58.0 billion level proposed by the administration for fiscal year 1984 to the fiscal 1983 level of $69.25 billion.

Fastest Growing Business

Self Storage Industry

The self-service storage industry is one of the fastest growing real estate developments in history. A self-service storage facility is a rental property consisting of individual units of space. For each unit, which has its own door, the tenant normally provides the lock, keeps the key, and handles the goods to be stored. Some self-storage projects include units of outdoor rental space, within an area bounded by fences or by storage buildings. Designed to meet small-scale needs for secure, readily accessible storage facilities, units are rented on a monthly basis to accommodate short-term or long-term use.

Individuals interested in developing or managing these relatively new, innovative projects will find the Institute of Real Estate Management's (IREM) new publication, Self-Service Storage: The Handbook for Investors and Managers, an invaluable aid. Authored by Richard Cornwell, CPM, president of R.E. Cornwell & Co., Phoenix, Arizona, with the assistance of Buzz Victor, founder of the Self-Storage Association and president of the Mini-Storage Management/Consulting Company, based in Denver, Colorado, this handbook provides thorough, detailed guidelines on all aspects of self-storage.

Subjects covered include evaluating the investment initially, location and site selection, design and construction, financing the project, and management and operations. Self-Service Storage also features a complete resident manager's handbook, which provides the resident manager with specific, practical information on understanding his/her role and day-to-day as well as long-range management procedures. Forms in the handbook may be adapted for direct use in the reader's self-service storage business.

Self-Service Storage is the only hands-on reference book for those active in any stage of self-service storage development and operations. It is the first in a series of monographs on specific property types to be published by IREM.

Self-Service Storage is 208 pages, softbound and sells for $19.95. Add $2.75 for shipping and handling. To order a copy, send payment to the Institute of Real Estate Management, 430 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Program Yourself For Success

Lee Milteer Associates of Norfolk will present "How To Program Yourself For Success," at Tidewater Community College, Frederick Campus, on March 30 at 12:00 noon in the theatre. The workshop is being sponsored by the Frederick Campus Student Government Association. The public is invited to attend; there is no admission charge.

Lee Milteer was named outstanding young woman for 1982-83 by the Norfolk Jaycees. She is the hostess of "Tidewater Lifestyle Magazine" on Cox Cable Channel 11, and is featured in a weekly series called, "The Milteer Strategy" on WAVY-TV. Ms. Milteer is a member of the National Speakers Association, a certified consultant for Performax Systems, International Inc., and member of the American Society for Training and Development. She is also a director of the Southeastern Virginia Real Estate Educations Association.

"How To Program Yourself For Success" emphasizes positive approaches for achieving success. Specific concepts include: mastering techniques for landing your first job, developing your professional image, formulating a personal success formula that works, learning to use your mind to control your destiny, and selling yourself in the job market. This workshop was filmed before a live audience by the Bell Telephone System to be shown to their employees in over 77 phone center locations throughout the country.

For further information, call 484-2121, ext. 356.

New Energy Cost-Control Guide Published

"One area of property management that will become increasingly important in the coming decade is the control of energy consumption and expenses," writes Eugene Burger, CPM, in his introduction of the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM) publication Energy Cost Control Guide For Multifamily Properties. Burger was the 1981 president of the Institute of Real Estate Management.

IREM co-produced the Guide with the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) in order to demonstrate the substantial potential savings of both energy and operating expenses in the management of multifamily properties.

The Guide was formerly only available to participants in a joint IREM/DOE seminar series, "Slashing Energy Costs in Multifamily Properties." The Guide is divided in to three sections.

Energy Cost Control Guide is 100 pages, softbound and sells for $19.95. Add $2.75 for shipping and handling. To order a copy send payment to the Institute of Real Estate Management, 430 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60611.

The Woman's View

The Chopping Block

By PAT BEASLEY

Well, it seems the weather is giving us a run-a-round.

I no sooner went outside, picked my jonquils, fed the birds, went back into the house and cold weather returned again!

Boy was I ever fooled! So, I'm going to give you a good old recipe of mine that will warm your 'in-'innards" straight down to your toes. A real 'stick to your ribs' meal.

This is an old favorite of mine (turned yellow with age).

If you are counting calories, skip a day - because the calories are here, but so is the goodness.

Ok, since I've already destroyed your diet, after dinner - try the dessert I have in store. It is so smooth, it actually slides down your throat, after it kisses your taste buds.

Chicken Pot Pie

1 baking or stewing hen (try Perdue, they're very tender). Boil until tender with about ¼ cup finely diced onions and ½ cup diced celery. Add salt and pepper to your taste.

Pot Pie Dough

4 Cups Flour* 2 teas. salt
1¼ teas. baking powder ½ cup Crisco (or other)
1 Cup milk

Mix all ingredients together. Work up like biscuit dough. After reaching the right consistency, roll out with rolling pin very thin, and cut into squares. After taking hen out of pot (large pot), turn burner on medium high and put in a handful of Pie Slices at a time, trying to keep them from sticking together and thus forming a huge lump. After these have gotten firm, put in another group, etc. until completed. Simmer them until they are tender. I always try one or two until they are tender and have enough salt and pepper to suit my taste. (this is half the fun!)

 Do not use Self-Rising Flour - It'll swell these little things up too much!

This recipe will feed a family of four and I have found that green peas are a good compliment to this meal. They go well with the Chicken Pot Pie and also add great color.

Peanut Butter Pie

2 Graham Cracker Crust (Ready To Use) pies.
4 oz. Cream Cheese 1 Cup. Confectioner's sugar
½ cup. creamy peanut butter ½ cup milk
9 oz. (Lg.) Cool Whip, ¼ C. finely chopped nuts.

Whip cream cheese till fluffy. Beat in sugar and peanut butter. Slowly add milk - Blend well and fold in Cool Whip. Pour in pie shells and sprinkle with peanuts. Freeze.

This recipe is great for making ahead, sticking in the freezer, and having on hand at a moment's notice. Remember, you must cut it while it is still alittle frozen.

I hope you do try these. The Chicken Pot Pie really is good on these chilly, rainy nights — but the Peanut Butter Pie is good anytime (have your seen a dessert that wasn't?)

I try to control myself when the pot pie is before me, because I know it is very rich and fattening.

I wish you more luck with control!

Give 'em a try - and Enjoy!

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

November 6, 1979

It's mostly over now, and those who will represent us in Richmond have been chosen.

If your candidate won, our congratulations.

If your candidate lost, our sympathy.

The nice thing about our system is that, win or lose, we have the right to complain long and loud about almost anything they do while in office.

And we will.

And that's one of the more charming things about democracy that infuriates politicians and keeps journalists working steady.

April 10, 1980

I have a faithful viewer in Newport News. I don't know if it's a man or a woman, but I do know this viewer pays attention.

The letters are always unsigned but friendly, literate, and helpful.

In the past I've been put straight on the pronunciation of Tidewater names, corrected on the use of certain words and phrases, such as Daylight Savings Time when it should be Daylight Saving Time.

However, the information on Daylight Saving Time was incomplete; it's nice to be able to pronounce it properly, but I still don't know for sure which direction to set the clock when it comes around.

But I digress.

In the most recent letter from my correspondent in Newport News I found an error and my joy was complete.

Virginia does not now, nor has it ever had a governor named Miles Goodwin.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Downing Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

Beauty, Utility Go Together

The "country look" (or "American Country", as it's sometimes called) is one of the hottest home decorating styles around.

The U-shape is the most functional kitchen arrangement.

Put them together and you have an ideal combination, from a home decorating point of view. That's what the editors of Good Housekeeping magazine and the interior designers at Armstrong have done in a joint decorating project featured in the magazine's April issue.

But they've given the project a twist because they've updated the "country look." It's not "pure" country but a hybrid decorating style that takes the best elements of country decorating and streamlines them.

And they've given it another twist by doing not just a U-shaped kitchen but a kitchen-dining area-family room, one big space that flows together for maximum efficiency.

The nice thing about a U-shaped kitchen is that it puts everything within easy reach. You're never more than a few steps away from a countertop, the sink, the refrigerator, the stove and so on.

And this kitchen has cabinets on all three sides, so there's plenty of storage space. The woodmode cabinets are stained a bright cherry red and have white porcelain knobs.

The countertops are white marble (not real marble but DuPont's Corian, a manmade material that looks astonishingly like the real thing). All of the appliances are--surprise!--not almond or another natural color, as you might expect in a "country kitchen," but black.

Most surprising of all, it works. The red cabinets, white counters and black appliances produce a very sophisticated-country effect.

Flowing out of the kitchen and into the dining area-family room is an Armstrong Solarian no-wax floor in a white quarry tile pattern. The flooring plays a vital role in the decorating plan. Besides furthering the country theme (quarry tiles are very country), the flooring is the space's unifying element, tying the separate areas together into one coordinated whole.

Since there's red and white in the kitchen, it's patriotically appropriate that there should be blue in the dining area, and there is: blue duckbill chairs grouped around a scrubbed-pine "keeping room" table.

(A "keeping room" was a spot off the dining room where, in colonial times, dishes were parked before being served. A keeping-room table--naturally--is what they were parked on.)

The family room has a custom-made bay window, also of scrubbed pine, and à bench built into the bay. The bench cushions are covered in a quilt-print fabric in cherry red, denim blue, sunshine yellow and tangerine. Cherry red throw pillows and denim blue ones grace the bench.

The kitchen-dining area-family room is accessorized with folk art. Some of the items are wicker baskets, wooden cows and red wooden heart.

Overhead is a coffered ceiling composed of false beams made of one by sixes stained to match the scrubbed pine. Skylights at each end of the room admit loads of sunshine.

The final result of the designers' efforts: a room that's got a lot of country, a touch of the city and is functional enough for anybody. U shapes and downhome decorating definitely do go together.

Corner Cottage
A Bride's Delight

Just Around The Corner

Spring is upon us and it's just about time for the June bride to prepare for that big day. Kathy Offield, owner of Corner Cottage in Virginia Beach prepares for a bustling spring full of bride-to-be to come calling, asking every conceivable question relating to the "what-to," "how-to" or "when-to" of wedding preparation. Kathy loves it, and looks forward to helping the young brides in every aspect of their arrangements.

From Bridal Registry to altar flower arrangements, from providing a photographer to helping at the church personally, from advice on cards and thank-yous to the selection of gifts...Kathy and Patsy Kidd, (her niece) enjoy this busy time of year running the store and helping all over town. "I always end up very close to the bride and we share in their joy and excitement, and remain friends long after the big day," she said. In times like these, the personal and loving, caring touch is all important. Corner Cottage delivers.

Nursery Games - The Green Kind

It's that time of year when you'll be receiving nursery and plant offers through the mail. Most offers are legitimate, reports the Better Business Bureau, but there are some show-but-not-grow scams that bloom into nothing but money for the sellers.

Be especially cautious of offers of fruit-bearing trees that are touted to grow from five to six feet in one year and are "guaranteed" to survive in any area in the United States.

Also on the BBB's "beware list" are offers with claims that you can grow produce in indoor containers and common plants and trees that are advertised by exotic names. A rose is a rose is a rose.

The BBB recommends that you know exactly what the names and guarantees mean; what is and isn't covered, and who will honor the agreement. Sometimes, warns the BBB, getting in touch with the mail-order nursery firm or getting a refund is difficult to downright impossible.

Another common rip-off this time of year promises quick profits with minimum work cultivating plants for sale in your own backyard. This "opportunity" is promoted as "indoor decorative plant growing."

The investor is asked to buy a small backyard greenhouse, equipment, plants, pots, soil, and fertilizer. The seller will provide free "horticultural" advice.

Ads for this scam guarantee that you can make from $400 to $700 per month. The promoters also claim that they will buy back the investor's plants.

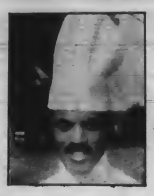
The sellers generally are relying on their sales to the unsuspecting "grower" for the money necessary to buy back the plants they sell to others. The seller's agreement to buy back the plants usually is subject to the seller's approval of the plants.

Be sure to investigate any mail-order nursery or backyard plant-growing opportunity before investing. If you are in doubt, check your local Better Business Bureau for a reliability report on the company you want to deal with.

For most investments of this kind, you would best do business with a reliable local firm—one that can be easily located if there are any questions later.

Editor's Note: I do hope this is informative to you, It sure was to me! The Better Business Bureau sends me material from time to time. I find it most interesting. See you next week. P.A.B.

The Uprooted Gourmet



By J. ROBERT PERSON

Remember those softcakes with the delicious fruit filling? Well here's a helpful recipe submitted by one of our readers that I'm sure you will find that it takes very little time & effort.

Surprise Cherry Squares
(Laura Batten-Ports., Va.)

Margarine, softened	1 cup (8 oz.)
Sugar	1 and ½ cup
Eggs, beaten	4 each
Flour, all purpose	2 cups
Vanilla extract	1 txp.
Lemon extract	1 tsp.
Cherry pie filling	1 (21 oz.) can

Cream margarine; gradually add sugar, beating until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Gradually add flour, beating well. Then stir in flavorings (extracts). Pour batter into a lightly greased 15 by 10 by 1 inch jelly roll pan, spreading evenly. Lightly cut through batter with a knife to mark off 24 squares or size of choice. Spoon about one tablespoon pie filling in center of each square. Bake at 350°. for 45 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Cut in squares. They're delicioso.

Veal Zingara

Veal cutlets, pounded	4 each

Garlic salt	1 tbsp.
Pepper	¼ tsp.

Mix together flour, garlic salt, pepper, and accent. Dredge both sides of veal in seasoned flour. Saute cutlets of floured veal in vegetable oil over medium heat about 1 minute on each side, until nicely brown. Place them on a platter. Save crinkles and pan for later.

To make Zingara, you will need:

Add mirepoix (mushrooms, ham, & tomato) to sauce.

Dog and Cat Stains on Carpet or Rugs - If the stains are fresh, soak up as much as possible with paper towels. Next, sponge the area with equal parts of white vinegar and cold water. Repeat two or three times, blotting well after each application.

Note: After the final application, the carpet or rug can be dreid with an electric hair dryer.

Dog Food For A Picky Dog - At mealtime, mix one can of meaty dog food (your choice) with two teaspoons of apple sauce and one teaspoon of cottage cheese. This recipe never fails.

Doggie Cookies, Making Your Own - Mix together six tablespoons of wheat germ, three tablespoons of dry powdered milk, and one small jar of creamed chicken baby food. After mixing thoroughly, shape into small balls, then flatten on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in a 350°F oven for fifteen minutes. Your dog will love them.

Drain, Clogged - Pour one cup of salt, followed by one cup of baking soda, down the drain. Now, boil one gallon of water or one-half gallon of white vinegar and pour it down the drain. If possible, seal the top of the drain and wait thirty minutes. Use the drains normally after this; it should be cleared.

Drawer, Sticky, Hard To Slide - Remove the drawer, then rub either candle wax or soap on the bottom and side runners of the drawer, as well as inside the piece of furniture.

Drawer Knobs, Loose - Remove the loose knob from the drawer, then paint the screw section with nail polish. Reinsert the knob and it's as good as new.

The People Are The Church

Glad Tidings Proclaims The Glad Tidings...

Rev. Ralph L. Kay
Pastor of Glad Tidings Church

1933 To 1983

50 Years Serving The Lord

In August of 1933 approximately 25 people who attended the old Norfolk Gospel Tabernacle felt led of the Lord to establish a new Full Gospel work in Norfolk. A tent was erected in a field on the east side of Monticello Avenue between 26th and 27th streets.

When cold weather came the small congregation was forced to move to a new location. A storeroom which had been a fish market, at the corner of 33rd and DeBree Avenue was obtained.

Rev. Arthur Graves of Dallas, Texas was chosen as the first pastor in the summer of 1935. Also, in October 1935 the congregation moved into a church building which had been occupied by the Episcopalians. It was known as St. Luke's Church and was located at Colonial and Spotswood Avenues, the site of our former sanctuary until October 1978.

On Sunday afternoon, March 4, 1979 the first spade of earth was turned over and the long awaited construction of the first phase of our new place of worship became a reality to the glory and honor of God.

During the month of July 1979, the church extended a call to Rev. Ralph L. Kay, who accepted and in August assumed the responsibility of seeing phase one of the building program at its satisfactory completion.

Pastor Kay, the board and entire membership look to the future with keen anticipation of God's richest blessings to be upon the new work.

Phase one of the new building is quite adequate for the church's needs at this time. The building encompasses 20,000 sq. ft. which includes 21 classrooms for all ages and departments. There also are five office rooms, including the pastor's study.

In addition there is an audio-video room that will be put to good use in the near future.

Currently, the present sanctuary comfortably seats 457; however, the sanctuary yet to be built will accommodate from 1500 to 2000 people.

Church grounds provide ample parking and plenty room for outdoor activities.

ALERT!

Every muscle tense . . . every sense attuned to their surroundings . . . they're ready! A scent, a sound, a glimpse of the unexpected and they will streak silently into the forest. They're alert, but their alertness indicates a readiness to run away.

Rightly man scorns that kind of alertness. For human achievement is born of a different alertness. When men are awake to their opportunities, alive to their responsibilities, brave to their challenges . . . then progress is realized, goals are reached.

Our religion helped to establish this human standard of alertness and our churches constantly inspire men to achieve it. For when the mind is attuned to life's environment, and the soul is attuned to God, then a man has the wherewithal to go forward to greater goals.

True alertness begins when we discover the riches and fulfillment regular worship can add to our lives.

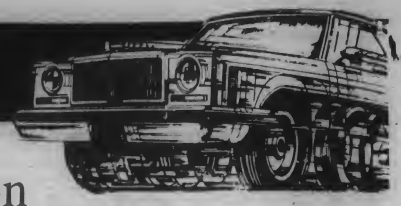
The Pit Stop



R K, Inc., Your French/Italian Car Connection

The Peugeot 505 Turbodiesel represents more than 50 years of Peugeot production and development of diesel powered automobiles.

From the oldest diesel builder in the world comes the Peugeot 505 Turbodiesel, the car that may well turn out to be the most significant car of the decade. This prestigious European sedan is America's first four-cylinder turbocharged diesel and the only car in the United States to ally four cylinder diesel economy and durability with turbocharged performance.

The Peugeot 505 Turbodiesel is stylish, responsive, economical, safety-conscious, comfortable and built to last. In fact, the most striking appeal of the 505 turbo is its remarkable all-around balance. Peugeot 505 Turbodiesel has been designed to meet the needs of today's fuel-conscious driver. Diesels are the most efficient engines available today, an average 30 percent to 50 percent more efficient than comparable gasoline models. Turbocharging boosts their efficiency even further by capturing the energy normally lost through the exhaust.

The Peugeot 505 Turbodiesel has a 36 mpg highway and 28 mpg in the city in the EPA ratings.

If European styles are your fancy and the Peugeot is not Sporty enough for you, check on the Alfa Romeo, the car you can test drive for the rest of your life. Alfa Romeo has been building cars for serious drivers for more than 70 years. Cars with such superior levels of power and control, and such a remarkable balance of both, that their name is legend on the race courses and roads of the world.

True to its heritage, the Alfa Romeo GTV-6 is one car you master in a matter of months. It is, instead, a car you'll want to keep on driving, because no matter how much you do, it will keep on challenging you more. This single-minded dedication to the driver has always been the mark of Alfa. Our proud history of technological innovation notwithstanding, we have always believed that driving is an art, not a technological exercise. As a result, the GTV-6 is ready now to take you to higher levels of driving than you have ever known. And do it dependably, day in and day out. For years to come.

Alfa Romeo GTV-6 (Below) and Spider Veloce (right)

To those fortunate few of you, who know exactly where you stand on style, welcome to a real vehicle for self-expression. This jewel of a personal car is the Alfa Romeo Spider Veloce. And you're about to learn that the pleasures of owning it do not stop at the classic line of its Pininfarina body. More than anything, the Spider Veloce is a sensual car. Its seats cradle you richly in fine Italian leathers. Its hand-finished steering wheel is a pleasure to the touch. But when you put the top down and take the Spider on the road, you will experience the freedom and exhilaration this truly personal car can so dependably give you. Day after day for years and years to come. All in all, the Spider Veloce is tailored to fit you so well, you don't just drive it. You practically wear it.

Mayor Suggests Analysis

Does Beach Safety Stop At 40th St.?

By Greg Goldfarb
Sun Editor

Does public beach safety extend just from 1st to 40th Streets along the resort strip? Are the lives of people swimming at 60th or 70th Street any less precious than those swimming at 20th Street?

Of course, these are rhetorical questions. But it is uncertain when, if ever, the residential, less crowded north-end beaches will have lifeguards as does the south-end.

"I think it would depend on the number of people who use the beach at that point," said Virginia Beach Mayor Louis R. Jones. "I don't think it's a question of revenues.

"I would be in favor of pursuing some types of analysis of the situation to determine if, in fact, lifeguards are necessary there," Jones added.

Recently, Virginia Beach City Council passed a resolution awarding the lifeguard and beach rental concession franchises along the lucrative resort strip beach. A new lifeguard company, Virginia Beach Patrol, Inc., run by E. Christopher Worrell, will pay the city $15,000 a year to provide lifeguard service between 1st and 20th Street. Ocean Rescue Inc., which has served the south-end section of the beach for 53 years will pay the city $20,000 a year to provide lifeguard services from 21st to 40th Street. Ocean Rescue is owned by Graham Hinnant and his son Kent. Both operators will rent beach umbrellas, chairs, rafts and maybe boogie boards to the public.

Such is not the case from 41st Street to Fort Story, where the beach abutts residential homes and also where homeowners don't want commercial rentals in their back yards.

At the north-end beaches, however, many houses and apartments are rented over the summer. The beaches are oftentimes just as crowded at the south beaches. But no lifeguards are present. Neither are

Tourists flock to Virginia Beach every summer. This is the south-end, serviced by Virginia Beach Patrol.

Drownings Occur Up And Down The Beach

According to the Virginia Beach Police Department, from 1970 to 1980 a total of 124 drownings have taken place in Virginia Beach. Of this number, more than 30 of them occured between Fort Story and 1st Street. However, it is not accurately known whether the drownings occured while or where lifeguards were on duty. In general, according to a 10 year, year-by-year city-wide listing of drownings, the accidents occured over all areas of the beach.

1970 drownings: Croatan Beach; 12th and 37th Streets; boundry of Fort Story.

1971: 69th and 6th Streets oceanfront; Sandbridge: Steel pier.

1972: 37th, 51st and 5th Streets and oceanfront.

1973: 26th, 31st, 34th Streets and oceanfront.

1974: 49th and 12th Streets and oceanfront.

1975: 18th and 19th Streets and oceanfront.

1976: 42nd, 57th, 27th, 11th, and 25th Streets and oceanfront.

1977: 44th, 39th, 11th, and 26th Streets and oceanfront.

1978: 40th, 15th, 31st, and 57th Streets and oceanfront.

1979: 18th, 15th, and 74th Streets and oceanfront.

Reasonable? Or Cut To The Bone?

Beach Observers Differ On School System Budget

By Mike Gooding
Sun Staff Writer

"Reasonable, practical and status quo" are the words ascribed to the Virginia Beach school system's proposed 1983-84 operating budget by one of the budget's architects, Dr. Fred G. Benham, the system's assistant superintendent for financial services.

The budget, amounting to nearly $125 million, was unanimously endorsed by the 11-member Virginia Beach School Board at its recent monthly meeting. The budget has since been forwarded to City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck, who Monday recommended that the school system receive all requested funding. City council is expected to vote on the budget Thursday, May 12 at a special noon meeting in council chambers.

The proposed 1983-84 budget includes an $11 million increase over the current budget. The city is being asked to appropriate $67,449,499 of the $124,968,425 budget, a 4.5 percent increase over the city's present funding which totals $64,606,838. "For the first time in some years, we will be able to go to city council with a proposal that probably will impact minimally on anticipated city revenues and tax rates," noted Dr. E.E. Brickell, the school system's superintendent.

Funds to operate the school system are derived from three sources. The city's $67 million share represents 53.97 percent of the budget. The state is being asked to fund $52.6 million or 42.14 percent of the budget. The federal government is being asked to pick up $4.8 million or 3.89 percent of the tab.

The majority of the recommended budget, 87 percent of it, is slated for salaries and fringe benefits of school board employees. More than $9 million of the budget is earmarked for improved salaries for teachers, other employees, fringe benefits for school board employees, and to add necessary personnel at two new schools. Teacher salaries, on the average, would increase by 9.7 percent if the budget is okayed by council.

Also included in the budget is:

- $1.6 million for supplies used by the schools.
- $766,627 for special education tuition assistance.
- $974,800 for replacement of 36 school buses with 30 diesel-powered buses.
- $1.8 million for maintenance and repair of buildings, equipment, driveways and physical education areas.

In order for the budget increase to remain modest, Brickell said it is necessary that city council reappropriate $2.5 million from the present budget, "an amount we estimate we will be able to conserve due to a combination of good management and fortuitous happenstance," he said.

Following the board's approval, the budget was sent to Muehlenbeck, who is now considering the overall city budget for 1983-84. The present city budget is $264,355,295; the school system's allotment of that being slightly less than 50 percent of the total.

City council members will be briefed on the school budget by Brickell and the board on

Royalty Fee Question

Cox, City At A Standstill

By Lee Cahill
Sun Council Reporter

Cox Cable of Tidewater and the Virginia Beach City Council seem to be at a stand-still over how to resolve the royalty fee increase.

Council wants the cable company to apply for a rate increase to cover the additional fees through established franchise procedures. City Attorney Dale Bimson has advised that to do otherwise would be a violation of the franchise agreement Cox has with the city.

Cox wants the Council to make the decision on whether to have the company continue the present programming, adding approximately 81 cents a month to the basic cost to the subscriber, or to drop two programs, making the additional charge to pay for increased royalty fees unnecessary. The additional fee would not be treated as part of the basic fee but as a tacked-on expense which would be handed over directly to the Tribunal.

Basically, Council looks at the additional charge as part of the service fee while Cox looks at it as a tax for which the company acts as a collection agent.

If the additional money were considered as part of the fee, and therefore the income, of Cox, the city would receive its three percent franchise fee from the income. Otherwise, the money would not be considered as part of the income and none of it would go to the city.

Roger Pierce, vice president for Cox Cable of Tidewater, told Council Monday afternoon that the company was going to comply with the federal law. "We're going to attach 81 cents to the basic bill on April 1...If you tell us we can't...we'll tell our customers to reject it and eliminate the liability by dropping the signals."

He said the company did not intend to go to court. It would just drop the channels. "We feel we're on good legal ground. W're not going to court to win a battle and lose a war.

Council apparently did not want to be placed in the position of deciding whether to increase the rate or to drop the channels. In either case, citizens would object.

Councilman Harold Heischober said that on advice from the city attorney's office, the city is prepared to go to court. He said that if the option is not to increase the fee and to drop the two channels, the city will not allow Cox to drop the channels.

Diener Suggests Local Cities Stop Fighting

Betty J. Diener, Virginia's secretary of commerce and natural resources, recently addressed about 80 members of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce as part of the organizations' ongoing "Beach Briefs" series. The lecture took place at the Cavalier Hotel's Orion's Roof restaurant.

Around 110 people were on hand for Diener's speech, including Mayor Louis R. Jones, delegates Owen B. Pickett and Julie L. Smith, Vice Mayor Barbara M. Henley, and Councilwomen Meyera E. Oberndorf and Nancy A. Creech.

Diener painted a gloomy portrait of the state's industrial development campaign. Virginia, she said, has been "sliding" in attracting new industries and tourists to the state. "It's hard to compete with other states in the southeast," she said.

State expenditures on industrial development have thus far produced "low visibility," Diener said. For example, she said, in a recent survey of 750 corporate leaders who decide where to locate businesses, Virginia ranked last in their perception of the quality of the labor force. Diener added, however, that Virginia has the second highest concentration among the 50 states of people with scientific or "high tech" related doctorates.

Virginia, Diener concluded, needs a new industrial development advertising campaing.

Locally, problems with industrial development can be traced to Tidewater's cities airing one another's dirty laundary" in front of prospective business clients.

"One of our concerns at the state level is that we bring a prospect down

Fake Cameras

Apparently, money means more than honesty and integrity to the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation.

The state highway department, last November, installed dummy video cameras at two Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway exit ramps. The skelton cameras, with no mechanics in them, were focused on the 10¢ toll booth baskets at the Rosemont Road, west, and Independence Boulevard, Holland Road, exit ramps. The intent? More dimes in the basket. Signs were even erected informing motorists that a 24-hour surveillance camera was operating.

The Virginia Beach Sun broke the story on Dec. 1. Only recently it was learned the cameras were phonies. They have been taken down.

According to Rawley Yeatts, assistant district engineer for the state highway department, the cameras were taken down once a local television station "chose to blow it for us," after reporting the fake cameras.

How did he justify his department deceiving the press and the public?

"By the amount of money we saved," he said.

Yeatts, (the spelling of his name is the way he spelled it over the telephone), said the state was losing over $100,000 a year in toll revenue by motorists who run the Virginia Beach dime tolls.

"Obviously we have to do something," he said. Yeatts said he had an "obligation" to recoup the lost funds. He said the department is now entertaining other options to curtail the number of people who run the tolls without paying, including working more Virginia State Troopers overtime.

As a result of installing phoney cameras, and lying to the media and the public, the state highway department has damaged, if not ruined its image, credibility and reputation. But in talking to Yeatts, he shows no remorse. His only regret seems to be that the department got caught. He doesn't know who tipped off the media that the cameras were not real, but said "I'm sure none of our people did it." He's correct. But who tipped off the people who tipped off the press?

The highway department would have been much better served by telling the truth from the beginning. No one would have believed that the state highway department would put up fake cameras, and the truth would have been told. Motorists wouldn't have known what to think, and the number of toll violators would have still dropped. Yeatts said he didn't think telling the truth was the best idea at the time.

The department has not solved the toll problem, and will now have to survive in the shadows of deception, and to operate without the trust of the public and the media.—G.D.G.

No Cry From North

City Council has decided who will protect the beach between 1st and 40th Streets. But who will decide the degree of protection which should be offered to Virginia Beach residents and tourists from 40th Street to Fort Story? City council will. But when?

Until this week the question of providing lifeguard services for the northern half of the resort beach had not been publicly discussed. Most parties agree that it should be protected by lifeguards, but who will do it, at what cost, and how soon?

Statistics indicate that swimmers can drown anywhere there is water. Certainly the city can't protect every swimming pool and borrow pit in the city. But the beach between 1st Street and Fort Story attracts millions of visitors. By comparison, very few lives have been lost to the arcane waters off the sandy shore. But any lives lost is a tragedy.

Certainly, lifeguards have saved many lives and will save many more. But they can't save lives in areas which don't utilize their services. So far, there has been no cry for protection from the north end. Maybe there is a need for it, maybe not. It's up to the people who live there, and city officials to decide.—G.D.G.

Understanding, Please

Public school teachers, most would agree, provide a vital and absolutely essential community service. They are responsible for shaping America's future by shaping the minds of its youth.

Virginia Beach's school superintendent, Dr. E. E. Brickell, is aware of this, and is committed, he says, to compensating the city's teachers as well as possible. "For the past several years, improvement in teachers' salaries has been the number-one priority" of the Virginia Beach School Board, he has said.

Indeed. In 1982, teachers were granted and average salary increase of 12 percent by the board. This year, the board has asked city council to grant teachers an average pay hike of nearly 10 percent.

Still, some teachers are dissatisfied.

They are unhappy because this year's raise was not granted across the board. Only the school system's newest teachers will actually receive full 10 percent raises. Other teachers, those with more tenure and education, will receive less. Some high-level administrators will receive an average of 6.3 percent in salary increases.

Quite naturally, the teachers wanted 10 percent increase for every teacher. The school administration knew, however, that such an increase would be impossible. The budget had already been stretched to the limit.

The time for understanding has arrived.

The administration understands that Virginia Beach's teachers deserve as much money as is possible. The teachers must understand that these are hard times, and the administration is doing its best. —M.M.G.

Letters To The Editor

Put A TV Guide In The Sun

Editor

Congratulations are certainly in order to you and your staff for the excellent coverage and service you folks provide to the citizens of Virginia Beach. Your 20 pages are jammed packed with all of the latest events that have happened in our city during the past week. The indepth coverage is very informative and certainly most appreciated.

There is however a service that the citizens of Virginia Beach need from The Virginia Beach Sun which is currently not being offered to us. We need and want a weekly T.V. Listing. We are not asking for an expensive or complicated listing. If possible it would be nice to have the entire listing of the evening T.V. programs and the movie descriptions all on the same page, in descent size print.

A colored paper would be helpful for easy identification and of course this extra expense could be subsidized with advertisements. Just do not go to the extremes that the other paper went to. They stretched their days and evenings listings out to three pages so they could sell more advertising. I am of the opinion that they are more interested in a good "Advertising Scheme" than in good service to their customers.

Mr. Goldfarb, the citizens of Virginia Beach do not have a choice of the T.V. listing, they would rather use. We are asking you to provide us with that choice.

Sincerely
R.L. Buddy Riggs,
Virginia Beach

Completion

Editor:

The staff of Schools Superintendent E.E. Brickell is to be congratulated for the successful completion of its curriculum assessment report.

All of our children will be the better for the wisdom and foresight demonstrated by Brickell's staff for undertaking this most important study.

Political Coverage

Editor:

Your coverage in the past few weeks of the coming political battles has been very good. The Sun was the first paper to report that Harold Heischober and Bob Jones were considering making a run for the state senate. Also, you told me a lot of things I did not previously know about each of the potential candidates.

Good job.

Race Story

Editor:

I enjoyed your coverage of the Shamrock Marathon. The pictures you chose to ran really told the story. Also, your highlighting of Virginia Beach's competitors in the race was excellent.

Mixed Emotions Over Assault Bill

Editor:

In reference to the letter to Gov. Robb from Beach resident David Timm carried recently in The Sun, I must profess to being totally ambiguous about the proposed law.

On the one hand, I think it is terrible that police officers are being assaulted, and something should definitely be done about that situation.

On the other hand, Mr. Timm has brought to light several valid arguments against imposing the law. Policemen can indeed be overly aggressive in the carrying out of their duties, and some citizens may feel justified in defending themselves.

What is the state to do? Good question. Obviously current statutes are insufficient, but mandatory jail sentences for all assailants of police officers seems extreme. Maybe there is no answer.

Promote Recycling

Editor

If I was in charge, I would promote recycling. As a community, we are compromising the quality of life we enjoy and the legacy we leave for future generations.

We can divert materials from our precious landfills through recycling. This in turn reduces water, land and air pollution and permits limited land resources to be used for people and/or wildlife. Trees remain standing to benefit us all, not as a blight on the countryside.

Recycling changes people's attitudes toward litter - some groups clean the roadways for profit and improvement; we all think twice before defacing property.

Maybe the most important effect of a community recycling effort is the additional money it produces - for an individual, a business, a fund raising organization and our cities. Trash disposal costs are reduced as well, resulting in a better tax structure. Additional revenue is put to a more positive use than to haul recyclable materials to the landfill.

Sincerely,
Sue Benedetto

In-Service Held For 93 Beach Kindergarten Aides

By Jackie Matthews
Sun Correspondent

There are 93 kindergarten aides in the Virginia Beach public school system. Every kindergarten class in Virginia Beach has a full-time aide.

The system's Department of Instructional Services, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Walter N. Carroll, holds workshops or in-services five times during the school year for aides to give them the opportunity to share ideas with aides from other schools, as well as to receive information and materials to assist teachers in strengthening children's educations.

The first in-service was held in September by Judy Fisher, elementary math curriculum assistant. Fisher demonstrated the use of selected math manipulatives advising aides of their valuable use in the kindergarten classroom.

In October James Spencer, supervisor, elementary health, safety, and physical education, used kindergarten children to demonstrate appropriate activities for development of motor skills and body coordination. At the third in-service, aides were given activities by Sheila Magula, elementary math, science and social studies curriculum assistant, that would help the children learn more about good nutritional snacks.

Inez Wilson, art curriculum assistant, followed with the fourth in-service in February using various art visuals that would reinforce the letter people beginning sounds.

The March in-service was telling stories with visual aids. Charlotte Barnes and Connie Cole, elementary language arts curriculum assistants, gave numerous tips on story telling, displaying flannelgraphs, hand and finger puppets and brightly colored prints. Aides were given materials to prepare for use during story time with their children.

Lois Whaley, supervisor of early childhood education, organizes and supervises each in-service held at Trantwood and Holland Elementary School. The purpose is to broaden the scope of teaching assistance for the aides of Virginia Beach. Whaley said, "working with these special people is a large plus to my job for they are professional, eager to have new ways to assist teachers and help children and are very conscientious about doing the best job possible."

Among Nation's Best

Kempsville High Honored

Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell recently announced a program to identify and recognize successful secondary schools throughout the nation. Kempsville High School in Virginia Beach has been named one of those examplary schools.

The 1,950-student senior high has been chosen as one of five high schools to represent Virginia in the national search. Each state nominated top schools in both the high school category and the intermediate, middle, and junior high category.

Independence Junior High in Virginia Beach was named first alternate to the top five junior high schools representing Virginia.

Kempsville High was nominated for the honor by Virginia Beach Public Schools; the Virginia State Department of Education coordinated the recognition program. The other four high schools chosen are Cave Spring of Roanoke County, E.C. Glass of Lynchburg, George Mason of Falls Church, and T.C. Williams of Alexandria. About 60-80 schools have been nominated from across the country.

Once the Virginia schools were cbosen, a team from the state department of education visited each one to corroborate the nominating information, view the school first-hand, and add their personal viewpoints to the final report, which will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Education on March 21.

Recently, Mr. N.P. Bradner, representing the state education department, and Mr. Robert Hicks, representing the Virginia School Boards Association, visited Kempsville High.

In looking over Kempsville's credentials, Bradner said, "We are not judging schools to be the best--just good, solid front-runners that are setting examples for the rest of the nation."

Schools Seek Health Insurance Bids

Virginia Beach Public Schools is asking local, regional, and state insurance organizations to bid on the school division's group health insurance program for its employees and their dependents.

The school division provides the voluntary insurance program for its employees on an annual basis, from October 1 to September 30.

Specifications on the program are available now to April 22, 1983, from Dr. Donald A. Peccia, Wage and Salary Specialist, Virginia Beach Public Schools, at the School Administration Building in the Municipal Center. Dr. Peccia may be reached by calling (804) 427-4781.

All bids will be received and recorded in the school division's Office of Personnel Services through 4:30 p.m., Friday, April 22. The bids will then be reviewed by consultants and members of the division's Employee Insurance Advisory Committee, who will make a recommendation to the School Board. The committee is composed of representatives of each employee group: instructional personnel, bus drivers, classified, cafeteria personnel, administrators, etc.

The school division reserves the right to reject any and all bids, to waive certain informalities in the bids, and to accept other than the lowest bid should it be deemed in the best interest of the school division and its employees.

Buses To Be Auctioned

Virginia Beach Public Schools will hold an auction of school buses, cars and trucks, and miscellaneous items at the School Bus Garage in Oceana on Saturday, April 9, 1983, at 9 a.m.

Most of the vehicles, including seven 66-passenger and nine 36-passenger school buses, had been driven more than 100,000 miles by March 1. School transportation officials have determined that it is no longer economically feasible for the school division to operate them.

The school buses are 1966 through 1971 manufactured by International, Ford, and Chevrolet. Normally, Virginia Beach school buses last about 10-12 years before the school division gets rid of them, thanks to an effective preventative maintenance program and a highly specialized school bus garage that can accommodate any type of repair need.

Of the 16 school buses to be auctioned, the one with the highest mileage is a 1971 International with 140,129 miles.

In addition to the school buses, the auction will also sell two 1966 Chevrolet 4-door sedans, five vans, a pick-up truck, and a step-van, plus an air compressor and tank, a Lincoln Welder D.C. 250, and miscellaneous bus parts and pieces of furniture and equipment.

All items will be sold for cash on an "as is" basis. Prospective buyers must certify that all vehicles purchased will be used for non-discriminatory purposes.

The vehicles may be inspected at 8 a.m. on the day of the sale or by appointment with Mr. Chester Sorey, phone (804) 428-4381.

What I Would Like To Be

I would like to be a buttercup
And children would come to pick me.
I would like to give company to other pretty flowers.

I am aware that someday I will wilt.
But my relatives will replace me.

By Holly Butts, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Butts

Menu Poem

I went to a restaurant,
And popped out my eyes,
I saw on a plate,
A big surprise!

A big juciy hamburger,
Just sizzling away
I couldn't resist it,
I had to stay.

By Kerri Krueger, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Krueger

I'd Like To Be

I would like to be a mountain
So beautiful and high
Covered with some snow
Touching the sky.
Looking like a dark cloud
On the Smokey Mountain Range
Going on forever.

I will never never change.
And when rainbows come
After the rain
I'll have had my bath
I'll never be plain.
I'll have a stream below
And in the winter

Covered with snow
I'd like to be a mountain
So beautiful and high.
Oh, I'd like to be a mountain
Touching the sky.

By Betsy Newman, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Newman

Hope

When I am big, I hope to be
A Doctor of Optometry.
I don't blame you if you think that's funny.
I'll give my parents a water-bed.
I'll name my children Lauren and Ted.
All these things are years to come.
Hope is what they all came from.

By Betsy Newman

Birds and Bees

The birds and the bees always flying with ease
Why can't I do so?

Flying up highway up in the sky
using their delicate wings.

Hear their lively tunes of song, humming and chirping all day long.

By Tina LeSiege, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald LeSiege.

There Is A Place

There is a place where the sun is always shining.
With peace and love dwelling within.

Joy and harmony
all live together in this place. And humanity shall finally know love.

Love is something to be shared with others throughout your life. Life is love and love is life, that's how life should be in this place.

By Dinane Sanders, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Sanders.

On A Cool Summer's Eve

On a cool summer's eve
I stood on the beach.
As I looked out,
the sun, so red,
started sinking into the sea.

The white foamy waves crashed on the beach, cool sands sifted through my toes.
I smelled the salty aroma of the ocean,
as a soothing summers breeze blew my hair.

Staring at the sea,
I noticed the dark sky.
It looks so lonely,
Yet so full of life.
Oh! What beauty! A cool summer's eve.

By Donald Smith, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Smith

Darkness

You can't feel it
Or touch it
But it is there
All the time

It creeps upon us
Coming closer every second
Waiting to pull us
Into its errie chamber

Even the sun is afraid
For it runs away
Every night
From the deathening darkness

Its tremendous hands
Grab us, surround us
Until the sun is Brave enough to come back

Terrible things happen
When darkness comes
People disappear
People die

Evil stalks the night
Coming to take us
Roaming the streets
Waiting for you

The next time darkness comes
Think twice about Going outside
Or it will get you next

By Eileen Quinn, 13, daughter of Cdr. and Mrs. Neal Quinn.

PA Junior Teachers Win Kodak Camera Competition

Virginia Beach teachers Laura Ostrander and Terry Carden (Princess Anne Junior High School) have been selected as winners in the first level of the National Education Association/Kodak competition to find ways to use cameras in the curriculum.

Winning $200 and the chance to compete for the top prize of $1,500, Ostrander and Carden will be submitting final reports on the success of their programs being implemented this year to a national review panel, which will select six top winners June 2-4.

In addition, three other Virginia Beach proposals were chosen as semi-finalists in the preliminary judging. These winning proposals were submitted by Louise Lowenthal and Peggy Paganini (Old Donation School for the Gifted), Susan March and Karen Jacobs (Indian Lakes Elementary School), and Gary E. Miller (Green Run High School).

The competition, which had 730 entries nationwide, was sponsored locally by the Virginia Beach Education Association. The ideas will be compiled in a curriculum guide for teachers.

Poster Contest Nets Provost $500 Prize

Kenneth Provost, a sixth grader at King's Grant Elementary School, has been named grand award winner (elementary in the Virginia Automobile Association 1983 safety poster contest.

Kenneth will receive a savings bond of $500 as the grand prize winner and $100 as the first place winner in his division. E.W. Timmons, director of public affairs for the Tidewater Automobile Association, said Kenneth will receive his awards May 26 from Governor Charles Robb at the State Capitol in Richmond.

In addition, Kim Jarrett, a seventh grader at King's Grant, received an honorable mention in the safety poster contest.

Seven other Virginia Beach students received commendations for their poster entries: Kelly Dickson and Brian Salyers, both grade 6, King's Grant; Chris Angeles and Jeff Gilbert, grade 3, and Billy Peterson, grade 6, North Landing Elementary; and Chris Grymes, grade 6, and Tammy Heidler, grade 4, Fairfield Elementary.

Bayside Sr., Bayside Jr. Named Good Sportsmen

Students at Bayside High School and Bayside Junior High School have been recognized for their good sportsmanship during the 1982-83 winter sports season in Virginia Beach Public Schools.

Bayside High received the sportsmanship award from the Virginia Beach District, and Bayside Junior received the award from the Virginia Beach Junior High School League.

In addition to a flag to display at the schools during the spring sports season, both schools received a certificate of commendation. The presentations were made at the March meeting of the Virginia Beach City-Wide Student Cooperative Association.

The seasonal sportsmanship awards were initiated in the 1981-82 school year to encourage proper attitudes and conduct of players, coaches, cheerleaders, and spectators at athletic events.

Bayside High, whose principal is Jerry Deviney, received the award for the fourth consecutive season. Bayside Junior, under the principalship of Bernard Morgan, was honored with its first sportsmanship award.

Library Bequeathed 3,500 Books

The Library of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, Inc. has received 3,540 books from the estate of book collector Robert Cox.

Cox, whose personal library numbered more than 6,000 volumes, was described in a 1976 "Compass" article as "very likely the most well-read man that Norfolk has ever produced." He spent a lifetime collecting books old and new, exotic and ordinary. A true scholar, he read and learned from them all. It was his wish that the A.R.E. receive the sizeable portion of his collection that deals with such subjects as ancient Egypt, oriental philosophy, health, rejuvenation, and esoteric sciences.

The A.R.E. Library collection, already one of the world's most complete in the area of parapsychology and related fields, will grow to 46,000 volumes when Mr. Cox's books are catalogued and added to the shelves. In all, it may take a year or longer to catalog all 3,540 of the Cox collection, the largest private collection ever acquired by A.R.E.

Chalkley

'Astounded By Amount Of News'

"I was astounded by the amount of news in The Virginia Beach Sun," said Barbara Chalkley, president, Sea Sprite Circle of the King's Daughters. "It's not old news; it covers so many things."

Chalkley, a homemaker, is a 15 year Virginia Beach resident. She lives in the north end of the city and is a member of the Cavalier Garden Club.

Kully To Head Notre Dame Alumni

The University of Notre Dame Club of Southeastern Virginia will install new club officers during "Universal Notre Dame Night," the University's annual club dinner and dance to be held in Virginia Beach on Thursday night, April 7, at the Fort Story Officer's Club.

That evening Mrs. Cathleen Kully, a Virginia Beach resident and one of Notre Dame's first female full scholarship winners and graduates, will become the University's first female Alumni Association Club President.

"We're not a Chicago," conceded Mrs. Kully, herself a former Chicago native, in referring to the largest of Notre Dame's Alumni Clubs that boasts a membership of over 10,000, "but we're growing strong. There's a definite "fighting Irish Spirit" alive in Tidewater."

"Many of our almost 200 members are not alumni," she added. "It's an interest in Notre Dame, its activities and people that becomes the common factor."

Mrs. Kully helped found the Southeastern Virginia Notre Dame Club Chapter two years ago and has been active since that time as the Club's Social Committee Co-chairman. One of her first duties as President will be to fly to Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana, to represent Notre Dame of Southeastern Virginia at the University Senate meeting of 150 Alumni Club Presidents to be held April 27-30.

A Virginia Beach resident for eight year, Mrs. Kully is a former teacher and administrator of Cape Henry Collegiate Middle School. She has also taught college history to Navy personnel on board ships temporarily harbored in Tidewater in conjunction with the Pace program that was administered through Old Dominion University. In 1979 she served as a counselor on the staff of St. Leo's College.

The Club, which holds board meetings bimonthly, achieves both civic and social goals locally. Its main purpose is to raise money for a scholarship to be given a qualifying Tidewater high school student interested in attending Notre Dame. Recent Club activities included a Christmas dinner and dance at the Sheraton Inn in Norfolk at which the Club Social Committee entertained 50 residents of the Russell House Retirement Home. The Club Welfare Committee also collected and distributed Christmas toys to the children of prisoners in local jails.

Along with Mrs. Kully, other officers to be installed "Universal Notre Dame Night," April 7, include Dr. Paul Schellhammer, a Urologist and Associate Professor at Eastern Virginia Medical School, as Vice President (Virginia Beach); Barbara Westhaus, a former Navy Civil Engineer Corps Lieutenant, as Secretary (Newport News); and Harry McKnight, an insurance agent with the Durham life Insurance Company, as Treasurer (Norfolk). John Cackley, Executive Director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, will be the featured speaker.

The Notre Dame Alumni Association, one of the most active Alumni Associations in the United States, is a worldwide organization with 150 chapters and nearly 70,000 members.

For Club membership and "Universal Notre Dame Night" ticket information call 460-2377 or 425-3876.

Blevins Applauds Program

Navy Seeks Sailor-Of-The-Year

A Navy-wide search is on to find top sailors and recognize them through the Sailor of the Year Program. "This program is outstanding and recognizes individuals for their loyalty and hard work," said Aviation Storekeeper First Class (AKI) James W. Blevins, Naval Air Station Ocean's Sailor of the Year.

Assigned to the Aircraft Intermediate Maintenance Department (AIMD), AK1 Blevins was cited for his military and professional knowledge, performance and evaluations, training and advancement accomplishments, ability of self-expression, and off-duty achievements.

A supervisor of AIMD's material control branch, "AK1 Blevins consistently displays traits of sound leadership, dedication, intelligence, and enthusiasm," said Lieutenant Dayle Purington, branch officer. "He also displays the expertise and professional integrity that has contributed to the cohesive teamwork within the branch," she added.

Blevins' duties consist of supervising the material control office, screening messages, filling out budget projections, and counseling. "I don't know from day-to-day what's going to happen around here," said Blevins. "The aviation storekeeper rate can be a tedious rate and can become boring at times if you let it--I find it challenging. That's why I've been with it for over 16 years."

A native of Fredonia, Kansas, Blevins enlisted in the U.S. Navy in January, 1967. "I picked the Navy because I knew I was going to be drafted and have to serve in the Vietnam War. I wanted to enter the service of my choice and felt the Navy was the best for me. The Navy gave me the school of my choice and the career I wanted," said Blevins.

As a career Navyman, Blevins is awaiting results from the chief petty officer exam to become board eligible. He hopes to reach his goal of becoming a Limited Duty Officer (LDO) within the next few years.

To advance his goals, Blevins is presently taking College Level Examination Program (CLEP) tests through the Navy as part of an overall program to receive an associate's degree. "I was a little shy of credits to complete my freshman year in college and wanted to enhance my education through the use of my Naval benefits," explains Blevins. His ultimate goal is to earn a bachelor's degree in business. When time permits, he enjoys fishing, bowling, camping and yard work. Blevins, presently an active member of the Virginia Beach Navy Federal Credit Union credit committee, reviews loan applications.

As Sailor of the Year, Blevins receives a plaque, a complimentary dinner for two at the Seahorse Club and a luncheon with Captain C. L. Tinker, NAS Oceana Commanding Officer. He is now eligible to compete for the Commander Tactical Wings Atlantic (COMTACWINGSLANT) Sailor of the Year title.

Seven Years Of Progress

Growth Linked To Director

Sims

Over time an institution comes to reflect the priorities of the person in charge. When it is as young as the Virginia Beach Public Library System, the goals of the director may be seen unobstructed by traditional ways of doing things. An introduction to Marcy Sims, Library Director since 1976, can help show how the city's library system is developing.

Automation of internal library functions over the last six years has been her proudest achievement. The card catalog has been transformed to microfilm. Most book orders now go directly through a computer terminal to the wholesaleer. Cataloging information comes from another terminal hooked up to a network of libraries. Soon the process of borrowing library books will be controlled by the system's own computer. Each of these changes has provided cost containment in what were labor intensive manual procedures.

Admitting a strong interest in new technology, the director envisions that future library use of computers will involve direct services to the public. These services may range from access to large data banks to adding home computer programs to the library's collection. Responding to the potentials of technological advances is making library service a constantly changing field, but one that requires caution in scrutinizing risks, feels Sims.

'Automation Of Internal Library Functions Is Sims' Proudest Achievement'

In this and all aspects of running the library department, she has emphasized businesslike methods. Sims has guided an extensive restructuring of the department, paralleling the growth of Virginia Beach from town to city. The personnel structure has been refined to produce more equitable and efficient working relationships. A capital development program has been devised to balance centralized and area library services. When she was appointed director the department had no such plan and branches responded to present rather than anticipated needs. The building of a central library is an intergral part of this library' development plan. The resulting library system will reflect both the changing economic climate and the special character of the city.

Sims herself is familiar with a variety of East Coast cities. Born in Portsmouth, she spent her childhood in Washington and Richmond and graduated from high school in Connecticut. Fondness for Virginia brought her back to attend Mary Baldwin College in Staunton. After receiving a Masters in Library Science from the University of North Carolina she worked in the Art and Music Department of the Richmond Public Library. She returned to Tidewater when her husband, Hunter Sims, graduated from law school and took a position in Norfolk. This supposedly temporary move has become a permanent commitment to the area.

For the last twelve years Sims has been a part of the Virginia Beach Public Library System. First as head of the Bayside Library, then, in 1974, as Assistant Director, she learned what the city expects of its libraries. To better understand how city government can fulfill those expectations she enrolled in the public administration program at Old Dominion University and received a second Masters degree in 1979. City government is an exciting work environment, she says, especially in Virginia Beach where there is a healthy mood of cooperation that gets results.

As might be expected from her experience working in Richmond, Sims is a supporter of local arts and cultural groups. She is on the board of the Virginia Beach Art Center. Tennis, skiing, and jogging keep her in condition to manage not only the library department but her four-year-old son Hunter and three-year-old daughter Clara. Her two career family has many advantages, she says, especially in understanding the demands of business.

Discussion of Cox Cable Copywrite royalties.

Adjournment

Meeting adjourned at 9:30 p.m.

Royalty Fee Question

The increased royalties would cost Cox $900,000 a year, Pierce said.

Mayor Jones sharply critized the manner in which Cox handled the situation. He said, "Whatever you charge has to be approved by Council. You should apply for it that way rather than send a letter and let us know that way. I said the manner in which you marketed the programs (last fall) was poor and I think the manner you did this is poor, too. It should come through the franchise and if I have my way it's going to."

Pierce questioned Jones' charge of the company's "poor approach." He said that the company proposed dropping the signals the first time the matter came up as the best approach. He said Council suggested Cox take it back to the consumer. He said Cox did that and met with the staff. Subsequently two surveys were made, one through the newspapers and another by direct mail to a random sampling.

Combined responses showed that 58 percent of the people were willing to pay as much as one dollar for the additional signals. The questionnaire was sent to subscribers in Virginia Beach (2500), Norfolk (2,000), and Portsmouth (1500), where Cox also has Cable franchises, and somewhat less than 200 responded he said. This is considered a successful sampling.

Councilman Robert G. Jones said later that the 58 percent approval was not great enough to make the survey results valid.

The trouble started Pierce said, when the Federal Register published a new copywrite royalty law on Nov. 19, 1982. New fees, which amounted to a nine percent increase, were established to be effective on Jan. 1, 1983. The TV industry immediately launched a compaign to abolish the new law. The matter has yet to be settled and Pierce said that the additional fee would be dropped if the industry was successful in its case. He listed this as one reason why the increase should not be included in the regular basic fee.

Last December Cox propsed dropping two channels to avoid paying the fee.

Cox originally offered three of the "superstations" to which the royalties apply with its basic package. Last October, however, the company offered a "Family Foursome" package for an additional $6 which included two more "superstations." The law excludes the royalty from the first three superstations but would require the new royalty fee for the additional two.

Cox decided to remove one from the original three and one from the added two.

The final decision of which stations to remove has not been made, nor has the company replacements in mind, Pierce said.

If the company kept all five stations, it is required by law to apply the increase on the basis of all its subscribers not only those who are receiving the additional channels. Cox is fighting this provision as well.

Pierce told Council that Cox cooperated with the city staff in preparing the survey. He said the industry is still lobbying for relief and are hoping the new fees will be abolished.

The government did give the industry an extension until March 15. He said the company was planning to comply with the Federal government when it received a letter from City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck on March 25 charging that Cox was in violation of the franchise.

"We were complying with federal law and the wishes of subscribers," Pierce said. "The Federal Government said we must comply with federal law...our position is we got the squeeze from the Federal Government, the city, and the consumer." He said it was a "Catch 22" situation.

He said that the company is merely a collector of the fees. "My feeling is like Daniel led into the lion's den," he said. "It was not my intention to offend. I don't like the position the government places us in." He said the new fees will be in the April 1 bill.

As the company sees it, he said, the options are to charge the new fee or to drop the channels.

"We will acqueisce to your direction."

Of the questionnaire, Pierce said that with the 58 percent voting to retain the channels, the remaining 42 percent included those who oppose the fee or did not respond to the question.

He explained that the fees go directly to the Tribunal which distributes the money to the owners of the programs.

Mayor Jones insisted the royalties were not a tax, because they went to private interests and not to the Federal Government.

Pierce said that the money may not go to the Federal Government, but the Royalty Tribunal is an arm of the Federal Government. Mayor Jones pointed out that royalty fees already are included in the rate structure.

Pierce said that the fees were low enough so that the company could absorb them, but that now the increases have reached a point whre they are unacceptable to business. The original fees were 1.658 percent while the new fees would be 10.658 percent.

Mayor Jones concluded that the only reason Cox was treating the additional fee differently was because it was a lot more, that the new rate was not a tax, but a royalty rate like that which has been included. If the character of the rate is no different, it should be included in the rate structure like the other rate, Jones concluded. It should be in the franchise.

He then asked, "Does the 81 cents (represent) only the royalty or have you bumped anything in for the franchise?"

"That's not a fair question," Pierce retorted. "I live in Virginia Beach, too. I'm not an outsider."

"What you are charging has to be approved by Council," Mayor Jones said. "You should apply for it that way rather than send a letter and let us know that way!" I said the manner in which you marketed your program was poor and I think the manner you did this is poor, too."

Pierce said the company had said it would make a decision on the basis of the survey. Either way, he said, the company would experience a loss in subscribers.

"Did it ever occur to you that the decision should be the City Council's, not yours?" Mayor Jones asked.

"You tell us," Pierce said.

"You should be asking us whether we should give you the rate increase," Mayor Jones said.

Pierce replied that the fee may not be here in two months or six months and can be stricken off the bottom line.

In answer to questions from Councilman Robert Jones, Pierce said that the Tidewater market is the 12th largest and that since it is among the top 50 markets is entitled to bring in three dependent channels. Eighteen months ago,he said, the rules were relaxed and the company was told it could bring in any number of signals, "so we added new channels." Later the Tribunal imposed the new fee.

If the company had know that the fees would be increased, Pierce said, it would not have added the channels.

R. Jones then quoted from a Council tape of the Jan 3 meeting when Pierce attributed the misunderstanding to a lack of communication. He said at that time that he had been a councilman for 12 years and "if there was one thing that bothers me is seeing something in the paper (first)."

Councilman John A. Baum noted that the Council apparently agreed that Cox should go through the rate procedure. "I can't say I blame Cox for trying to cut through the red tape."

Pierce said smaller companies don't have the problem. "Our problem is trying to put together a super package for the company."

Councilman Jack Jennings Jr., supporting Mayor Jones' remarks, asked, "If the old royalty fees are in the rate, why not put in the rate increase?"

Pierce said the company sees the rate as a tax and that is has no choice.

Jennings said he received many calls from irate customers. Pierce said Cox received 23 in one week and most were against paying the increased fee.

Heishober pointed out, that if Council allowed the rate increase, "regardless of what we call it," it is still an increase and the people are still looking to this council to police the cable rate. If Council were to take any action, such as removing some of the programs, it will be faced by other subscribers, he said. "I don't see how we can give our blessings to an increase or to the removal of three or any of the five channels." He said the city attorney is ready to take action to preclude action by Cox in that direction. He said Council has nowhere to go. "If we have to travel the route of ultimate legality then the courts will decide."

"We're not going to court," Pierce said. "We'll just drop the channels."

Vice Mayor Barbara Henley asked whether the company was considering other channels to replace those which are dropped.

Pierce said the company hasn't looked at that.

Mayor Jones asked why Pierce was objecting to the rate change process.

Pierce said he was not objecting, but that on April 1, we have to be in compliance.

"It seems to me like you're trying to blackmail us," Councilwoman Reba McClanan said. She asked why, if the royalty rate should be considered separately why the original rate was not considered separately why the original rate was not considered separately, but as part of the rate.

"You're changing your course in the middle of the stream," she said.

The original fee was so small, Pierce said, that most companies could absorb it.

"You've got us in the middle," McClanan said.

"We're in the middle," Pierce disagreed.

Councilman R. Jones suggested Cox get together with city attorneys over the possibility of filing for an increase under the normal process, with a public hearing, and to report back in a week.

Beach Community Chapel Holds Ladies Bible Study

Miss Jere Cleveland, Minister of Christian Education at the Virginia Beach Community Chapel, will teach a ladies bible study on the Book of John, starting Wednesday, April 6.

There will also be four elective classes following the Bible Study: "The Basics of Christian Growth," "What is a Family?", "Music, The Heritage of Christian Worship," and "The Writings of C.S. Lewis."

The bible study starts at 9:30 a.m. each Wednesday, followed by the elective classes at 10:45 a.m.

The Community Chapel is located at 1261 Laskin Road in Virginia Beach, and a nursery will be provided. There are classes for children, ages two to five. For more information, call 428-1881.

Budget Holds No Tax Hikes

The proposed 1983-84 Operating Budget for Virginia Beach contains no tax increases, no decrease in services and no cuts in the school budget.

In short, the budget doesn't have any features likely to create a big turnout at the public hearing which for the first time is scheduled for the Pavilion to accommodate large crowds. The meeting also will be held on a special night when no other Council business will be scheduled, on Wednesday, April 27 at 7 p.m.

Still the $292,034,554 budget proposed by City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck is more than $24 million more than the adjusted budget for the 1982 fiscal year of $267,859,698 and more than $27 million more than the original budget of $264,355,295.

Among the positive factors listed by Muehlenbeck were:

The provision for the pro-ration of personal property taxes for six months of FY 1983. FY 1984 will be the first full year of this process and is expected to provide more funds than in FY 1983 ($600,000).

The elctricity rate increase in FY 1983 was lower than had been anticipated in the budget which will provide an increase to the fund balance on June 30, 1983 ($1,080,000).

Fuel oil and gasoline prices were not as high in FY 1983 as had been anticipated which will also provide an increase in the fund balance on June 30, of $1,268,000.

The negative factors were listed as:

The projected deficit of $2.5 million from previous health care contract which Blue Cross/Blue Shield officials say must be settled by Aug. 1, 1983. ($1,800,000 can be provided from FY 1983; remainder from FY 1984 for a minus $700,000.)

First full year of electricity rate increase ($7,270,000 budgeted in FY 83; $9,848,000 projected in FY 84 for an additional $2,578,000.

The budget will be considered for approval on first reading on May 9 at 2 p.m. and on second reading on May 12 at noon.

Diener Says Work Together

here, bring him into Virginia Beach, and the Virginia Beach people start bad-mouthing Chesapeake and bad-mouthing Portsmouth.

"The result," Diener continued, is that "southeastern Virginia doesn't get the prospect because of this sort of argumentative and competitive attitude. We need to start working together as an area; otherwise, we're going to continue to be losing prospects."

Virginia Beach Director of Economic Development A. James DeBellis was out of town, and unable to respond to Diener's comments.

On a more positive note, Diener said Gov. Robb and his cabinet are "committed" to removing "unworkable regulations." For example, Diener cited ane expensive paint can inspection process to determine whether the colors on the labels match the colors inside the cans. After inspecting tens of thousands of paint cans last year, inspectors found just one can which contained the wrong color. This regulation is one which is being removed from the books, she said.

Also, Diener noted, each dollar invested into the state's various promotional campaigns has netted Virginia $2.42 in return tax revenues.

Public Outdoor Burning Law's Many Regulations Are Outlined

Some Virginia Beach residents have experienced confusion with the State's "4 p.m. Burning Law" which went into effect on March 1, 1983. The Virginia Beach Fire Department provides the following clarification:

The March 1 to May 15 restriction on burning is intended for that property which is, by agreement between the City of Virginia Beach and the State Division of Forestry, under the direction of the State Forester for forest fire control. This is basically the rural area of the City and Sea Shore State Park. The dividing line is roughly extending from east to west along Old Dam Neck Road to Oceana Boulevard, south to London Bridge Road, west to Shipps Corner Road, south to Landstown Road then west on Princess Anne Road to Providence Road, continuing west until reaching Kempsville Road and following Kempsville Road south to the Chesapeake-Virginia Beach City line.

All persons north of the boundary are under the control of the City of Virginia Beach with regard to open burning and all those south are under the control of the State Forester and must conform to the 4 p.m. to 12 (midnight) burning regulation between March 1 and May 15 of each year.

For those citizens north of this boundary under the control of the City of Virginia Beach, the following guidelines shall govern open burning regulations:

- Burning shall be of leaves, twigs and small branches only.
- Burning must be on the person's property; not on streets.
- Winds must not be in excess of 15 m.p.h.
- Only one fire is allowed at any time and it shall be limited to 4' in diameter.
- Someone must attend the fire at all times until it is completely out.
- There must be a suitable means to extinguish the fire readily available (i.e. water hose connected to water supply and capable of reaching the location of the fire or proper and sufficient portable extinguishers).
- If the fire or smoke creates a nuisance or a hazard and a complaint is received, the fire will have to be extinguished.
- The person responsible for the fire shall be held liable for any damage it should cause if it gets out of control due to carelessness or neglect.

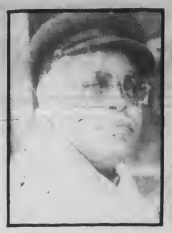
Voice Of The People

What Is Virginia Beach's Chief Asset?

"It's the people. After we retired from the military, we wanted to go somewhere where we had roots. Here, we had established friendships. Plus, there is a city-type atmosphere here without the presence of a big city. They do an excellent job of making this city look like it is prospering."

Barbara Simmons
Homemaker
Two-year resident



"I like the golf courses. I play three times a week, usually at Red Wing, Bow Creek and Stumpy Lake. The climate here is so nice it makes it so you can play golf during just about every month of the year."

Howard Nash
Retired
18-month resident

"It's the beach. I've grown up here and I've never lived anywhere else. I've always gone to the beach, usually at the north end around 80th Street. It's not very crowded there. Also, I like the change of seasons you get here in Virginia Beach."

Laurie Davis
Student
20-year resident

"I like to people-watch, and there are so many different types of people here. It's really interesting. I like Virginia Beach's night-spots. Also, I enjoy roller skating on the boardwalk during the off-season."

Almost 2,000 Attend Civic Dinner

The first Virginia Beach Civic Recognition Dinner was held in 1977 at the Dome with 600 attendees. This year's dinner, the seventh, was held recently at the Pavilion. Almost 2,000 people, 1,933 to be exact, attended. Ninety-nine percent of them were volunteers for the city.

In 1982 volunteers saved the City of Virginia Beach $3.4 million. They contribute about 463,571 hours of service to the city. In gratitude, the mayor and city council sponsor a dinner every year "to thank them for their assistance through the years," said Pam Lingle, Virginia Beach Public Information Office.

This year, the First Annual Department Volunteer Council Award was presented to Mary C. Russo, chairman of the city's Department Volunteer Council. The presentation was made by Herb Pettway, chairman, Department Volunteer Council, recognition committee.

Volunteers at the dinner included those working for various city departments, as well as department divisions, courts, boards and commissions and other public services.

Welcoming remarks that evening were delivered by Virginia Beach City Manager Thomas H Muehlenbeck. The blessing by Reverend Ellis R. Hamberry, volunteer, Friends of Public Works. Virginia Beach Mayor Louis R. Jones introduced guests, and formally addressed the volunteers, praising them for their service to the city.

Entertainment for the evening was supplied by the 55 to 60-member Virginia Beach Chorale, under the direction of Lou Sawyer. The Chorale is celebrating its 25th birthday.

The menu included roast beef and all the trimmings.

Cost of the dinners was $18,050.

"We're Not The New Boys On The Block"

these pleas from the residents for lifeguards.

"Has there been a lifeguard service from 40th Street to Fort Story? No. What's the record down there?" - Chris Worrell, Virginia Beach Patrol

Jones said he didn't know whether a special task force, set up to study and propose recommendations on the franchises, discussed having lifeguards at the north-end. He did say that council "did not, as far as I know, address the question."

Councilwoman Reba McClanan said she wasn't sure why the lifeguard service stopped at 40th Street. "That's just where it stopped," she said. McClanan added, "I assume it's that most of the commercial business is from Rudee Inlet to 40th Street. I assume that is part of the idea."

McClanan said it was "quite possible" that the city should consider someway of providing lifeguards at the north-end.

"Any proposals which come forward," she said, "we would have to look at seriously."

North End Proposal

Eddie Garcia, Sr., a developer, and Worrell, a restauranteur are two of the four owners of the Virginia Beach Patrol. They both agree that lifeguard services should be provided at the north beaches, but disagree over how soon.

"If Hinnant would provide lifeguards for the whole beach, we would give him the south-end; if he provided the services and innovations we plan" - Eddie Garcia, Virginia Beach Patrol

"I wish they had made that offer sooner" - Kent Hinnant, Ocean Rescue Inc.

"I wouldn't throw any figures up unless I can substantiate them," Worrell said, "but I will pose this question. They've provided a lifeguard service from 1st to 40th Street. Has there been a lifeguard service from 40th Street to Fort Story? No. What's the record down there?"

Would Virginia Beach Patrol want the responsibility of guarding the north beaches?

"No. Not at this time," he said. "What I'm pointing out is that people tend to take care of themselves sometimes in the water. The more people you have out there the safer it is because of the shear numbers."

"I assume it's that most of the commercial business is from Rudee Inlet to 40th Street. I assume that's part of the idea" - Councilman Reba McClanan

Garcia says public safety is so important, that if Ocean Rescue would agree to provide lifeguard services from 1st Street to Fort Story, he would try to convince Virginia Beach Patrol investors to withdraw their bid.

"If Hinnant would provide lifeguards for the whole beach, we would give him the south-end; if he provided the services and innovations we plan," Garcia said. "I think they (the investors) would agree too." Hinnant questioned why Beach Patrol didn't try to serve the entire beach.

Garcia said that if Ocean Rescue did not want the whole beach, Virginia Beach Patrol would take it, stretching to Fort Story year by year in 10-block increments.

"I think they need lifeguard services up the beach," Garcia said. "We're talking about public safety. Not the money and benefits you derive from it."

Hinnant, said, "I wish they had made me that offer sooner." He added that his company wasn't interested in the north-end because most of the homeowners there didn't want lifeguards.

Regarding Garcia's proposal, Jones said "they haven't made that statement to me either officially or unofficially."

Uniformity

Worrell said uniformity would be a missing element in this year's life guarding season.

"Uniformity will be missing from the training right through to the aesthics," Worrell said. Virginia Beach Patrol is requiring its lifeguards to complete a Surf Rescue School to help lifeguards who received their lifesaving certificates. Just because lifeguards get their lifesaving certificates from the YMCA or Red Cross, Worell says, it "doesn't mean you've ever been in an ocean," Worrell said. "There are unique problems to that ocean." Ocean Rescue lifeguards meet all city standards.

Worrell, whose brother Mike thought of the idea, said that installing communications phones at each of his lifeguard stands will save lives.

"This communication system, for example, that we are going to put out there;" Worrell said, "they scoff at it and laugh at it. But it equates to lives being saved."

Critics have charged that public safety its too important to let a new company be held responsible for it. But Worrell dismisses the observation.

"We're not the new boys on the block," Worrell said. "Between my brother and myself we've got 15 years out there. And between the five supervisors, they've got 35 years out there. That's 50 years of experience."

Before submitting bids to the city, Worrell and Garcia met to discuss the plan.

"We know damn well everybody in the city is going to be looking at us" - Chris Worrell

"I was very reluctant to do it," Worrell said. "I told Eddie it was an awesome responsibility protecting the beachfront. I just didn't think I would have the time or expertise, to be honest with you, to put it together. I told him to let me think it over for a couple of weeks and I'd get back with him. This was back in September.

"I called my brother Mike," Worrell continued, "and asked his opinion; and if he would have the time. He said 'yes,' he would have the time but he agreed with me that the first move would be to contact some of the supervisors that have worked out there and get their opinion. So he called Ned Kuehn. We sat down with Ned and that's what really made up my mind; after talking to Ned. He's so damned devoted to that beachfront it's amazing."

Chris Worrell will oversee the entire Virginia Beach Patrol with Mike in charge of the rentals and Kuehn in charge of the lifeguards.

Worrell said there hasn't been enough emphasis in the past placed on the relationship between lifeguards and tourists.

"I would hope that we can work hand-in-hand with the hotel people," Worrell said. "I don't think it's been stressed enough in the past. You get a tourist that's paying $80, $90 or $100 a night for a room. I think they should be treated damned good out there. Because it helps me as a businessman in here if the tourist is happy out there."

Worrell said it is "very unlikely" that either of the two operators will fold in years to come.

"You're not going to spend the time and effort and money we're going to spend and go out there and fall on our face," Worrell said. "And we know damn well everybody in the city is going to be looking at us."

The owners of Virginia Beach Patrol, Inc., in addition to Worrell and Garcia, are James W. Hall, a real estate agent; and former High Constable R. R. (Buddy) McChesney.

Background

Following World War II, the city handed the job of training and paying lifeguards to the private sector. In return, the lifesaving companies were given exclusive rights to rent beach accessories. W. H. (Hugh) Kitchin Jr., and Graham Hinnant, controlled the business until the 1970's when they formed separate organizations, and divided the beach, 1st through 40th Street, in half. Until now, competitive bids had not been solicited. City officials were prompted to ask for bids on the ocean-front concession last year by a Supreme Court ruling that opened municipalities to antitrust law suits.

Kitchin, who had operated as North Beach Patrol for decades, bid but did not win a franchise.

Council is expected to give final approval on the franchise resolution at its Monday, April 4 meeting.

Virginia Beach has 29 miles of beach adjacent to the Atlantic Ocean. Of this area, seven miles is open to the public. Included are city lifeguarded Sandbridge and Little Island City Park beaches.

Monday, April 4. On Wednesday, April 27 at 7 p.m. in the Pavilion, the public will be given an opportunity to voice its opinion on the school budget. On Monday, May 9, a first reading of the school budget will be made before council, and on May 12, there will be a second reading. Council is expected to vote on the budget at that time.

Historically, city council has approved the school budget without making any changes. In the last two years, however, economics has forced council to make cuts in the school system's recommendations.

"It just doesn't happen anymore that the city can summarily pass the school board budget," said Giles Dodd, the city's finance director. "In the last couple of years there has been a real financial crunch and a slowdown in growth. In spite of cutting the budget, we've still had to raise taxes."

Will the recommended school budget remain intact this year?

"I wish I could comment," said Dodd. "But, I just don't think I should. You'll just have to wait and see what the city manager recommends to city council. I will say the city's revenues in fiscal '83 have stood up well. We haven't really felt the fiscal crunch that badly this year."

Reactions To Budget Are Mixed

"It's okay," said Dolores Delaney, president of the Virginia Beach Council of PTAs, about the budget. "By and large, the parents I've talked to seem relatively comfortable with the budget. For a couple of years now, we've seen cuts and reductions of services. But, you can only go so far in cutting past the meat and through the bone. Pretty soon, you are down to the marrow."

One portion of the proposed budget with which Delaney said she is "pleased," is a $130,000 appropriation for the restoration of after-school student activity buses for secondary schools.

"There were other things the parents would have liked, but we knew deep down that we weren't going to get everything we wanted. We tried to respond to the things which affected the most people."

The job now, according to Delaney, is to lobby in city council in hope of keeping the recommended budget intact. "We've lobbied for two years without what I'd call spectacular success," she said. "Somewhere, though, a little bit of realism has to creep in. No longer is it expected that a school budget will be approved. Before we put anything in a budget, we have to say, 'does it have a chance for survival?"

Some teachers have been critical of the proposed budget, particularly as it pertains to employee salaries and benefits. Critics point to a breakdown which occured this year in the "meet-and-confer" process of determining salary levels for teachers and bus drivers. For the first time in the eight-year history of the process, employee and employer representatives were unable to agree on salary recommendations.

"We went to the school board proposing equalization of salaries," said Richard "Dick" Percefull, a chemistry teacher at Green Run High School and immediate past president of the Virginia Beach Education Association. "The board listened to us and then chose to go along with the administration, which leads me to question whether the board was truly seeking middle ground."

Percefull said the teachers' salary increase, as publicized, is misleading. "Not all teachers are getting a 10 percent increase," he said. "I've looked it over, and the best I can figure is I will receive a 7.9 percent increase. Salary increases are determined through 16 different steps and through a number of different columns. Long-term employees and those who are professionally improving themselves, for example, do not fall under any of the categories receiving 10 percent increases.

"Teachers took a noble stance," continued Percefull. "We said that everybody--teachers, nurses, bus drivers--everybody deserves a 10 percent increase across the boards. Administrators should also be included here. The increase granted them is deplorable."

Percefull suggested that monies for increased teacher salaries be funded through increased taxation. "Virginia Beach enjoys a very low tax rate," he said. "If city council were to take a look, perhaps it would find more money is available to go into education. I believe it is incumbent upon every member of the community to pay his fair share for education. I'm not certain that is happening now."

Bill Duffy, industrial arts department chairman at Lynnhaven Junior High School, called the proposed budget "distressing." Said Duffy: "They say we're getting a 10 percent increase, but I don't see it. I've gone through the mathematics and all I see is an eight-and-a-half percent increase for me.

"It is scary that the teachers and the administration could not reach an agreement this year," he continued. "It's really frightening to me that the procedure might not work. Who is to say what is going to happen next year?"

Art Esenberg, a physical education teacher at Pembroke Elementary School and president-elect of the VBEA, said he is "not very pleased" with the proposed teacher salaries. "There was a whole lot of talk and very little movement from the administration," he said. "I would have liked to see a 10 percent across-the-board increase. I believe that was the intent of the General Assembly. Our request was not unreasonable."

Benham countered, however, that teachers "came into the negotiations with expectations beyond the reasonable reaches of the school board." Brickell, in his report to the board, concluded that "improvement in teachers' salaries has been the number-one priority of this board" for several years, "and the proposed budget reflects that priority."

•Also at the March board meeting, Margit Maynard, president of the Virginia Beach Education Association, addressed board members. She said members of the business community would join forces with Virginia Beach teachers on Tuesday, April 19 in a special workshop that will "foster the mutual respect of educators and business persons toward the betterment of a free society."

•A parent, Deborah Mathias, asked the board to reconsider an earlier decision to begin the 1983-84 school year prior to Labor Day. "A lot of people I know have already planned vacations, and they are either going to have to change their plans or keep their children out of school," she said. Brickell said the decision to make the switch was based upon more than 1,600 responses from parents in answer to a newspaper advertisement about the opening date.

•Dr. Duncan S. Wallace, the board's Bayside representative, called for a public auction of no-longer-needed school buses. The board approved the motion unanimously.

Liver Transplant Trust Fund Donations Sought

A Virginia Beach resident is calling out to her Beach neighbors to contribute to a trust fund.

Pat Speller, an employee at Virginia Beach's Computer Dynamics, Inc. and a resident of the Bow Creek area, is seeking community contributions to help defray hospital costs incurred by a member of her family who recently had surgery.

Speller's cousin, Glen S. Jefferson of Norfolk, recently had a liver transplant in a Pittsburgh hospital. He has spent one month in the hospital, with an average daily cost of $300. Additionally, Jefferson's surgery will cost between $80,000 and $100,000. Jefferson is slated to remain in the hospital for six to eight additional weeks.

Contributions should be sent to Jefferson's sister, Donesses Jefferson Baker, bookkeeper, Home Federal Savings and Loan, P. O. Box 2740, Norfolk, 23501.

Beacher Seaber To Make Presentation

Earl R Seeber, Jr., will present "The Non-Technical Orientation to Active Solar Energy Systems" on Tuesday, April 5, at the Windsor Woods Area Library and on Wednesday, April 17, at the Oceanfront Area Library in Virginia Beach.

Both workshops will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will last approximately one hour. Seeber will describe principles of solar energy.

A solar flat plate collector panel and the associated control devices will be on exhibit following the lecture. Interested adults may register by contacting the Windsor Woods Area Library at 340-1043 and the Oceanfront Area Library at 428-4113.

Investor Alert!

The North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA) and the Council of Better Business Bureaus (CBBB) today released their "INVESTOR ALERT" for April warning the public about investing in oil and gas lease lotteries.

A recent survey showed that oil and gas lease lottery filing services are being offered by high pressure telephone sales techniques in at least 33 states by companies located primarily in California, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York and Vermont.

The "Investor Alert" program, launched in January 1983, is an attempt by business and government to warn citizens of the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada of questionable investments that are widespread. The Council of Better Business Bureaus represents Bureaus in over 175 cities in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada. NASAA represents Securities Administrators in 49 states, the District of Columbia, the provinces and territories of Canada, Puerto Rico and Mexico, whose members investigate securities and investment frauds.

William H. Tankersley, President of the CBBB stated: "While government-run lease lotteries have been in existence for some time, BBB's are noting a growing abuse of the program by unscrupulous promoters who charge exorbitant rates and make false promises of winning leases and striking it rich."

Richard Latham, President of NASAA and Securities Commissioner of Texas, said "possible losses to the public from investing in the oil and gas lease lottery services are staggering. The problem is nationwide. Securities Commissioners in 11 states have issued Cease and Desist Orders charging violations of state securities and anti-fraud laws. The Federal Trade Commission has also charged a filing service with making numerous false representations." Latham strongly urged the public to "use every caution before investing."

Roland Cote, Commissioner of the Quebec Securities Commission said the "problem has not reached Canada yet, perhaps because U.S. citizenship is required to invest." He urged Canadian citizens to use caution if asked to form an American corporation or limited partnership to invest.

Local Recyclers Cash In Big

Local recyclers have cashed in a total of 82,430 recyclable aluminum beverage cans during 1982 at the recycling center here opereated as a community service by Hoffman Beverage Company, area distributor of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., beer products.

The recycling center is located at 5464 Greenwish Road. Hours of operation are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 8:30 a.m. through 12:30 p.m.

Recycling aluminum cans reduces litter and refuse in the area. But as recycling center coordinator James P. Martin pointed out, aluminum recycling offers a community financial, as well as ecological benefits.

"A total of $686 has been paid out to individuals and groups that cashed in cans at our center last year," said Martin. The center opened August 1, 1982.

"We think the fact the center is able to put extra dollars back into the community through the cash payments to recyclers is in some ways as important to our area as the fact it helps reduce the amount of litter here," he said.

Currently, the center is paying 20 cents for each pound of recyclable aluminum cans. There are about 24 cans to a pound.

The recycling center operated by Hoffman Beverage Company is part of a national program voluntarily undertaken by Anheuser-Busch, Inc., beer distributors in cooperation with Container Recovery Corporation (CRC), the recycling subsidiary of the Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc.

Under the program community recycling centers are sponsored by the distributor, with CRC supplying the necessary recycling machinery.

Cans collected at the center here are shipped to a recycling by the distributor, with CRC supplying the necessary recycling machinery.

Cans collected at the center here are shipped to a recycling plant where they are shredded, then transported to an aluminum processor facility. There they are made into new aluminum can stock and forwarded to can manufacturing plants.

Recyclable aluminum cans have been called "stored energy," because it required only five percent as much energy to recycle aluminum as it does to smelt new aluminum from bauxite ore.

Throughout the State of Virginia, participating Anheuser-Busch distributors and CRC were responsible for a total of 28,258,728 cans being recycled during the year just ended.

Across the country, CRC recycling programs produced about 169,500 million pounds of recyclable aluminum or more than 4.068 billion cans during 1982.

Real Estate Absenteeism 17 Days/Year

According to recent U.S. Department of Labor statistics, average absenteeism for illness or personal reasons (a death in the family, for instance) is about 10 days per year for blue-collar workers and about 6½ days per year for white-collar workers.

Real estate salespeople top the list, averaging 17 days per year of personal absenteeism, while lawyers average only two days of personal leave a year.

"You Have To Take Risks!"

By Roger Pyle

As this year wears on, all the good intentions we had at the beginning began to lose their importance or priority.

What does all this have to do with real estate? There are those people who want to get ahead, buy a small apartment building or plaza. They want to take advantage of the many benefits of cash flow, tax shelter, equity build-up and appreciation.

They are mired in their day-to-day activities of a job, the family, and the numerous other diversions that today's society presents. The consequence is that the months and years pass by, and so, too, do the opportunities.

Ten or fifteen years later, in retrospect, that same person thinks, "Gee, I wish I had invested in property along the way if I had, today I could relax knowing I have some assets and accumulated wealth to live on."

You see that scenario is played all too often by too many people! To make money you have to take risks; and to take risks in this life or accomplish anything, you have to make an effort. Therein lies the problem: "To make an effort."

Someone once said that successful people do those things that unsuccessful people don't like to do. In our case, get out there; look at properties, make offers; spend some time - it won't happen by itself.

To be successful in real estate, "You don't wait to buy real estate, you buy real estate and then wait."

Resale Activity, Up, Up, Up

The strong performance of the existing single-family home sales market in February clearly illustrates public awareness that housing is becoming more affordable, Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, said today.

February existing-home sales were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.47 million units -- 24.1 percent higher than the 1.99 million rate a year earlier, according to the latest nationwide monthly survey by the association.

"After more than a year of activity near the 2 million rate a year earlier, according to the latest nationwide montly survey by the association.

"After more than a year of activity near the 2 million unit level, the annual existing-home sales rate now is firmly above that mark and is expected to remain so," said Carlson.

Existing-home sales, which had peaked at an annual rate of 4.02 million in November 1978, bottomed out at 1.86 million last August as housing suffered through its worst decline since the Great Depression. Last month's rate is 32.8 percent above the cyclical low recorded in August, Carlson added.

January's home resales annual rate had surged to 2.58 million units, according to the association's revised statistics -- a record increase from the previous month's 2.26 million units.

"The 4.3 percent slippage in February came as no surprise because of the severe winter weather last month," the economist said. "The encouraging news is that after the strong surge in January the February sales level remained healthy. In fact, when the seasonal adjustment factors used to calculate the annual rate are removed, the survey shows that there were more actual sales in February then in January -- 164,000 last month versus 155,000 the previous month.

"Resale activity is expected to continue on an upward trend this year and next," Carlson added. "Lower mortgage interest rates and the improved affordability accompanying those improved rates are allowing the housing industry to lead the nation out of recession as it has done historically."

Harley W. Snyder of Valparaiso, Ind., president of the National Association of Realtors, stressed that "many factors have combined to make this a good time to buy a home, and the resale figures for the last several months clearly support this."

"Mortgage interest rates have fallen from above 17 percent last spring to the 12-14 range; there is a wide variety of homes on the market from which to choose, and home prices have stabilized," Carlson pointed out.

The median price of an existing home sold in February was $68,300 -- just $200 more than the revised January level.

However, Carlson said, home prices are likely to accelerate faster than the rate of inflation this spring and for the next few years, even though they have increased only 2.1 percent during the last 12 months, because sales are now growing faster than the supply of available homes.

"A quickening in the rate of home price appreciation means that purchasers will be able to reap the benefits of a wise investment when they sell their homes," he said.

February existing home prices in the Northeast region were 1.3 lower than January. In the South prices rose 0.9 percent and in the North Central region they were up 2.7 percent. The West experienced a price decline of 1.4 percent.

Like prices, annual increases in resale volume differed across the various regions of the country.

The North Central region recorded a 37.3 percent increase in resale volume compared with February 1982. The Northeast experienced a 24.2 percent gain for the same period, while resale in the South and West increased 20.8 percent and 7.7 percent, respectively.

Good News For Retired Execs

The Tax Court has ruled that a retied executive need not pay self-employment tax on the money he earns as a director or consultant for the company he left.

The reason? Self-employment tax only applies when a person goes into business for himself. A retired employee who continues to work for his former company (even in a freelance capacity) is not considered to have started his own business.

Warning(The IRS may very well take the position that a new business has been started if the consulting extends to other companies besides the former employer. In this case, self-employment tax would probably be imposed. (Steffens, TC Memo 1981-637.)

Cost Reduction On Employee Moves

HomePool Cooperative Begins

HomePool Cooperative, a unique company that manages cooperative efforts of corporations and real estate firms to reduce the cost of employee relocations, has begun operations across the United States.

According to Edward J. Davidson, managing partner and former director of real estate for Diamond Shamrock Corp., HomePool has two primary functions:

Firstly, the company reduces costs to corporations by shortening the amount of time that transferees' houses remain on corporate inventories awaiting sale, by using creative marketing techniques. Secondly, HomePool provides objective orientation for transferees in their new cities, while enabling them to purchase the better-valued corporate homes in the marketplace and receive a substantial cash bonus on their purchase.

More than 100 Fortune 1000 corporations, real estate companies and portions of the military and the Federal Government participate in the Home Pool service, and the company currently has more than 7,000 homes in the system. Over the last four months. HomePool has successfully faciilitated the relocation of hundreds of families, and the company is currently assisting Naval vessels in Norfolk, VA, San Diego and San Francisco in the move of thousands of families.

"We match buyers with corporate properties through a nationwide multiple listing service exclusively for corporate and transferee properties," Davidson explains. "It's a creative way of achieving the long sought-after goal of permitting companies to trade housing inventory lists between each other.

"Corporations are not profit-motivated when it comes to transferee houses, but they want to move the homes to reduce holding costs," he continues. "This makes these homes some of the best values in the marketplace. Transferees are highly-motivated buyers because they have the funds to purchase homes, and usually must do so in a limited time period."

The growing list of cities in which HomePool Cooperative provides counseling includes the Tidewater Virginia area.

HomePool does, however, assist buyers and sellers of homes in many other cities through relations with participating brokers, according to Davidson.

He points out that corporate homes typically have not been advertised as being "good values" in the mistaken belief that this would be admitting desperation on the part of the corporate owners.

"Advertising 'value' provides buyer traffic, and with traffic come offers," Davidson observes. "With good salesmanship, the homes will sell quickly and at a fair price."

An important aspect of HomePool service is area counseling, recognizing the benefit to transferees of objective counseling before referral to real estate brokers. The HomePool Area Counselor in each city provides tours and other orientation services for incoming transferees, at no cost. These counselors have no home listings of their own, and focus entirely on counseling and homefinding.

Remodeling Likely To Remain Popular

As the nation's housing industry pulls slowly from its worst slump since World War II, remodeling will continue to be an important adjunct to the market for new and existing homes, said panelists at a recent National Association of Home Builders meeting.

Michael Sumichrast, the NAHB's chief economist, predicted that residential property owners would spend $47.4 billion this year on remodeling, maintenance and repair of their homes. When non-residential upkeep and improvements are added, Sumichrast said, remodeling expenses in 1983 could total $82 billion.

No Change In 1982 Mileage Rates

As you prepare your 1982 tax return, remember that the standard mileage deduction rate did not change for the 1982 tax year.

The rate is still 20 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles and 11 cents per mile thereafter for the business use of a car. The rate is also 11 cents per mile for a fully depreciated auto. For charitable, medical and moving mileage, you may deduct 9 cents per mile.

Use of the business standard mileage rate is optional. You may, alternatively, compute your actual costs. Many taxpayers, however, find the recordkeeping requirements throughout the year to be burdensome and, therefore, stick with the standard mileage allowance.

Persistence Pays Off!

Nearly half of all salespeople abandon a prospect after only one sales presentation; another 25 percent give up after the second call. But studies show that 80 percent of all new sales are made after the fifth call! Be persistent...it will pay off!

An Open Letter To Chesapeake Citizens

"Let's Clean Up For Birthday"

With the upcoming 20th Anniversary Jubilee of Chesapeake, May 12-15th just around the corner, your CEIC, (Chesapeake Environmental Improvement Council) has plans well under way for, "Lets Clean Up For Our Birthday." April 15-23rd will be all of Tidewater clean up week. We are planning a big finale push the week before our anniversary May 2-7.

The success of this program rests in the hands of all Chesapeake citizens.

Letters seeking the support of Chesapeake Clubs, organizations, schools, churches, and business plans have been mailed, and we are requesting a reply showing your support. Already the 7 Ruritan Clubs of Chesapeake (Deep Creek, Grassfield, Chesapeake, Great Bridge, Wallaceton, Hickory, and South Norfolk) have offered their support to fight litter. Bay Disposal, of Norfolk has offered to us at no cost, dumpsters to be placed at easy to reach sites, located throughout Chesapeake. Litter bags are being made available throughout the city, with our CEIC emblem at no cost. Support from the Navy, and our law enforcement has also been received.

I don't know about you, but I get pretty tired of picking up everybody elses frash, morning and night from my hard, or from the road in front of our house. There are so many beautiful yards in Chesapeake that our people spend a lot of time and money to keep attractive, only to have them scared with ugly cans, bottles or plain trash thrown from cars, or trucks. Lets join together a scaring neighbors, and help Chesapeake continue to grow as a "Family City," with our future growth of cleanliness.

Just take a look at the "Now" growing churches, schools, homes, and business plans, along with the growth of our recreational facility for our youth.

Be proud, Chesapeake, you don't need to take a back seat to any city, near or far. I personally believe you've got it all, so lets keep it all, but keeping it all clean.

The Builders Block

By Doug Hickman
Real Estate Editor

The Builders Block is a regular feature highlighting new construction in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake.

A Winning Combination

As you near Georgetown Square, you begin to sense the intention of the builder/developer. You get the welcome feeling of an established community, complete with sixty foot trees and tasteful landscaping. If this sounds like what you've been waiting for, you're in the company of seventy-four buyers who have decided that Georgetown Square is right for them.

Georgetown Square is an impressive townhome community of colonial styling with two to three bedrooms set in a peaceful wooded area off South Military Highway, south of Greenbrier Parkway.

"What surprises many people," said Fran Spence, a site agent for the development, "is the number of standard features we offer that are considered options at other developments." The standard features offered by Georgetown Square are: wall to wall carpet, fireplace, custom wood mantle over fireplace, chair rail, crown and dentil molding, panel wainscoting, custom cabinets, stained woodwork, wallpaper, dishwasher (Sears), garbage disposal (Sears), oven/range (Sears) insulated French doors (rear), dead bolt locks, china plumbing fixtures, stainless steel kitchen sinks, smoke detectors, brick veneer fronts, raised panel shutters, copper roof on bay windows, concerete patio (6 x 12), privacy fence between units, insulated entry doors, R-15 insulation in walls, R-26 insulation in ceilings.

There are three models with two variations of each. Prices range from a moderate $52,900 to $59,400.

A sister project is taking shape in nearby Greenbrier, at the end of North Eden Way off Greenbrier Parkway. Mill Quarter townhomes will have a total of 201 units with basically the same floor plan as Georgetown Square. Georgetown was so well accepted by the public that only minor improvements were made for Mill Quarter. One being a bay window for the kitchen on even the most basic unit, and the enlarging of the utility room to include a pantry. If you'd like to live on the water, but always thought it was out of your price range, you'll be pleasantly surprised by the very affordable waterfront lots being offered.

Thirty six of the 201 townhomes have been sold since January of this year, through the efforts of Rose and Krueth Realty Corp., a leader in Tidewater new home sales.

"I'm very proud to be working with a builder of the reputation of J. Paul Luck," said Sharon Harsanyi, a site agent for Mill Quarter. "J. Paul Luck is almost an institution in the area. A young couple recently came in to buy one of our townhomes, and told me that their parents had bought a home from Mr. Luck 10 years ago. What a compliment!"

J. Paul Luck, Inc. and Colonial Service Corporation joined to build and develop Georgetown Square. The name changed to Luck/Tidewater Development Association for the construction of Mill Quarter, but the quality remains the same as in Georgetown Square.

"We're quite pleased to have joined with J. Paul Luck on these developments. He's a builder of impeccable credentials, that's why we chose him for this association," said Jim Clark, Vice President and Secretary of Colonial Service Corp. Colonial Service Corp. includes Colonial Appraisal Company, Colonial Title Agency, Colonial Insurance Agency of Tidewater, and Atlantic Permanent Mortgage Company. Colonial Service Corp. is the backbone and the behind the scenes unifying factor in many of the more successful projects in Tidewater including Bay Colony and Olde Towne.

Georgetown Square and Mill Quarter are their two latest successes due to quality construction, proper marketing and a bullish confidence exhibited in the building industry by Colonial Service Corp.

Virginia hosts America's most prestigious bicycle road race in a half-century, April 8-10, in Virginia Beach, Williamsburg, Yorktown, Richmond and Fredericksburg. Gov. Charles S. Robb, left, and Robert J. Arrix, president of World Tour Cycling, discuss the coveted shirt of the 69-year-old Tour de France, which inspired this premier, 275-mile Tour of America.

Chesapeake Chosen "Test Site"

American Bell Corp. Products has chosen the Chesapeake area for a market test of its new Emergency Call System Smoke/Fire Alert product.

The Emergency Call System, triggered by a smoke detector, automatically dials a telephone number to report a fire. The telephone number dialed by the system in Chesapeake could be an answering bureau, an official emergency number, or a friend or neighbor. Customers having the Emergency Call System should check with their local fire department to see if there is an official emergency number they may use.

"The Chesapeake area was selected for the market test because there are many homes used for vacations, or by traveling military persons, that are not always occupied," said Jackie Cherry, American Bell Customer Products zone manager. It is also an ideal security measure for small businesses, she added.

Cherry said the new Emergency Call System advances smoke detector protection one more step.

"A smoke detector is designed to alert occupants of a home or business establishment when there is a fire. With the Emergency Call System, the alarm can summon help even if no one is in the home or office," Cherry said.

The Emergency Call System includes a console and a transmitter placed within four inches of each smoke detector in a building. The console has a suggested retail price of $199.95, and the transmitters have a suggested retail price of $29.95 each.

When a smoke detector sounds a warning, the Emergency Call System transmitter signals the console. The word "fire" is repeated for 30 seconds in a voice-synthesized message. If the customer does not push the "cancel" button, the console automatically dials an emergency number earlier programmed into the console by the customer. The system reports the address and telephone number where the alarm has occurred and requests that the emergency be investigated.

If the call is not acknowledged, the console automatically dials a second number that has also been programmed into the console. The system continues to alternate between the two programmed emergency numbers until it has gone through the process four times or until someone at the other end of the line signals it to shut down by pushing the "3" button on a Touch-Tone telephone.

The system's console is plugged into a modular telephone jack and a standard electrical outlet. A back-up battery keeps the system working for 24 hours in the case of a power failure.

The product is available at the Bell Phone Center in Greenbriar Mall.

Morrison Attends Forum

Kenneth W. Morrison, President, Insurance Management Corporation of Tidewater, local independent agent, recently attended the Producer/Company Council meeting of the U.S. Insurance Group, a Crum and Forster organization. The four-day session took place March 13-16 at the Breakers in Palm Beach, FLA.

This forum, held annually since 1969, brings together independent insurance agents/brokers and USIG personnel. Discussions focus on continuing improvements in service to the insuring public.

Currently a director of the National Association of Professional Insurance Agents (PIA), Morrison served as president of the Virginia/District of Columbia Chapter in 1980-81 and was named Outstanding Agent of that organization in 1980. A resident of Chesapeake, Morrison is past-president of the Portsmouth Host Lions.

The U.S. Insurance Group, which includes the Westchester Fire and International insurance companies, specializes in commercial property-liability insurance. USIG serves 27 states, from Virginia to Taxas and Colorado, with a network of 78 offices. Premium volume for 1982 was approximately $435 million.

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Dusting cloth, making your own - Get a piece of flannel about two feet by two feet and soak it in liquid paraffin for three hours. Afterwards, wash it in warm, sudsy water, then let it dry in the sun. It will be extremely good for dusting and can be used for months, despite repeated washings.

Or dip a two foot by two foot piece of cheesecloth in one-half pint of hot water to which you've added one-quarter cup of lemon oil. Hang it in the sun to dry.

Eggs, beating - They beat a lot easier and make a much better cake if left out at room temperature for two to three hours.

Eggs, boiling - An egg should never be boiled in vigorously boiling water. It actually ruins the taste. The best results are obtained by simmering the water. It takes only a little longer, but it pays off.

Eggs, Brown or White - Apart from the color, there is absolutely no difference between brown and white eggs. Buy whichever is cheapest.

Eggs, Cracked - A cracked egg can be boiled normally if you add one half teaspoonful of vinegar to the water.

Eggs, Cracked, Boiling - If an egg is cracked, add two or three tablespoons of white vinegar to the water before boiling the egg. The vinegar will seal the crack.

Or wrap it in wax paper, twisting both ends tightly, then boil the egg in the wax paper.

Eggs, Good Or Bad - Gently put each egg into a glass of water. If it sinks, it's good, but if it floats, it's a "baddie."

The Uprooted Gourmet

By J. ROBERT PERSON

Hinting you, the reader, that I am into exotic dishes that will capture anyone's imagination, is the exact reaction that I, The Uprooted Gourmet, expected. But you, the reader, are a part of this experience that creates the cuphoria that we share in this great uprooting.

Stuffed Porkloin Piquant

4 lbs. Porkloin	2 carrots, peeled
2 Tb. garlic salt	1 Tb. black pepper
½ Tb. Accent (opt.)	2 Tb. diced onions
2 Bacon slices	2 Cups chicken stock
4 Tb. Arrowroot	½ C. Wine Vinegar

Using a slim knife or a boning knife, make a hole through loin, from end to end. Cut off both ends of carrots and push through loin until carrot is completely through center of loin. Place loin in a roasting pan and season with first three spices. Place in oven at 325° for 30 to 35 minutes. Remove from oven and take loin from pan. Also, pour drippings into chicken stock. Place onions and bacon in roasting pan. Put pan on top of stove over medium flame and saute onions and bacon for five minutes, until bacon is slightly brown. A touch of white wine may be added. Pour into pan chicken stock and vinegar, then bring to a simmer 10 minutes.

Sprinkle arrowroot over top of hot stock, while stirring with a wire whip. Cook over low flame for 15 minutes. Slice cooked porkloin into thin slices. Place four slices per serving onto a plate, then top with 2 ounces of piquant sauce. Serve with hot apple sauce spiced with a touch of nutmeg. Garnish with a parsley sprig.

The essence and fragrance of a fine wine is certainly a settled compliment to the finest meal. Just as there are fine wines, there must b e other factors that also border lace almost any dish.

GOURMET - Continued

Virginia Fresh Fruit Compote

2 apples, diced & corded — 4 oz. pineapple chunks
8 Marischino cherries — 1 cup. purple grapes
2 oranges sectioned
1½ Cup of juice of pineapple & cherries (mixed)

Mix fruit and put in glasses. Pour over each, a little fruit juice garnished with a parsley sprig in each glass.

Until next week, I bid you a Good Day.

How do I use eyeshadows with the new spring colors?

• First... use Crushed Topaz on the inside corner of the eyelid to the middle of the lid. Next...use your Deep Purple Eye Shadow from the middle of lid, extending to outside corner of the lids. Shade and feather shadow outward. Use very boldly, just under the frontal bone ...drawing a half circle. Then...under bottom lash.

Notes To My Friends

By JIM KINCAID

April 27, 1981

I can hardly wait for October.

That's when we get back the hour that the government took away from us this past weekend.

I know, an hour isn't all that much, but somehow I never feel that way in the spring and it takes me several days to adjust. I very carefully wander around the house and reset all the clocks, knowing full well that there's one somewhere that I will forget about that will send me off to work, or to an appointment an hour early one day soon.

Of is it an hour late?

I can figure it out; I just don't like to carry all these doubts around with me, I have quite enough doubts about other things that I can't figure out.

I know there's a very good purpose for Daylight Saving Time. It's supposed to save daylight. But I do at least half of my work at night, or used to, way back last week.

Ed Brauer wrote me last week and enclosed an article from Modern Maturity which explains the origin of Daylight Saving Time.

It was an idea generated by an Indian chief whose feet stuck out from under the cover; so he cut off one end of the blanket and sewed it to the other end.

Ed didn't mention whether it worked or not.

April 2, 1980

I've been thinking that the worst thing that could happen to me this year would be an income tax audit.

I didn't cheat on my taxes, I just have this irrational fear of authority. Anyway, the census forms have come along to complicate my life even further. I got two copies, one at the farm, at Elam, the other at the apartment, where I live during the week.

My problem is this: If I fill out one or the other, I'm [illegible] accurate, but liable to jail for failure to answer one of the forms. If I fill out both, the country will appear to have four extra persons, and it would be all my fault.

I'm sure it will all work out; but by the time I get over this crisis it'll be time to try to remember if you set the clock back an hour or forward an hour to compensate for Daylight Saving Time.

It's just one darn thing after another.

This series of excerpts from "Notes To My Friends" is brought to you through the courtesy of The Donning Company, a local publishing firm, and Jim Kincaid. The book is available in most book stores.

Shears At Sears "Look For Spring"

Courtesy of Glemby International

The Spring hair fashion key word is "Short", closer necklines, but still soft, not the flat shingled or tapered neckline of the past. Hair moving away from the face on the sides, cut close to head exposing the cheekbone-eye area.

The top is full with maximum height being achieved with texture perms, light setting lotions and teasing or back-combing for a full,tosseled look. The overall appearance should be sleek, yet feminine.

We are returning to a more tailored or fixed style, but not the "set", every hair in place, look of yesterday.

Spring is also the perfect time of year to take advantage of the newer coloring techniques, which can give your hair that highlighted, sun-streaked appearance that usually only comes at summer's end.

It is also a subtle way of experimenting with coloring, without going through a complete change. Whether you're changing your hairstyle a little or a lot, we at Glemby believe every woman wants and deserves to look the best she possibly can.

The Chopping Block

By PAT BEASLEY

Easter time is upon us again. A time of rebirth, of renewing and a general feeling of well being.

I must admit, though, we have had "funny" weather noting out 'Spring' and 'Easter' time.

But, we have been blessed, and we do live in the best part of the country - God's Country!

Try the following Easter idea. Ham has always been an Easter tradition around here and this recipe 'sorta' picks up a ham.

Also, after your dinner, try the Cobbler recipe I received from Sandy Vance of Chesapeake. This is her grandmother's recipe.

Sandy said, "My grandmother has the best, easiest cobbler recipe there is. You use one bowl and a pan, or I use a large Pyrex dish to do everything." Now, I sure do like that !!

I do hope you have a nice Easter, eat well, and just 'plain' Enjoy!

Glazed Baked Ham With Spiced Peaches

Place 5 to 8 pound canned ham on rack in open roasting pan. Insert roast meat thermometer so bulb is centered in thickest part. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in slow oven 325° until meat thermometer registers 130° to 140°. Allow approximately 15 to 18 minutes per pound. Drain syrup from 1 can (16 oz.) sliced peaches; reserve peaches. Combine 1 teaspoon cornstarch and 1/8 teaspoon cinnamon in small saucepan; gradually stir in peach syrup. Bring to a boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Add peach slices and continue cooking until peaches are heated through. Brush warm peach glaze over ham 20 minutes before end of cooking time. When ham is removed from oven, arrange 5 peach slices in a pinwheel to resemble a flower; use green onion stems to form flower's stem and leaves. Serve ham with remaining peach slices.

FRUIT COBBLER
SANDY VANCE

1 C. self rising flour — 1 C. sugar
1 stick butter — 1 teas. vanilla
1 can peaches or (fresh fruit and 3/4 cup water)
1 egg

You simply add dry ingredients and mix. Then cut in butter and add egg and vanilla. It is very dry and crumbly. Make a well in mixture and add peaches, liquid from can makes the cobbler.

Bake at 400° for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until brown.

"There, you have it, one pan, one fork and one spoon dirty. Great served with vanilla ice cream", Sandy continued.

Thank you, Sandy, for your recipe. I, for one, will try it this week. P.A.B.

The Dolling Shop

The Undiscovered Shop

By CAROL HOLMES

Picture yourself in Norfolk riding down Colonial Avenue. You turn into a large parking lot which is owned by a major food chain in Tidewater. All you expect to see as you proceed to the rear is area for parking. However, you are amazed to find several shops to your left.

You've totally forgotten about the major food store now that you've come across something new. You decide to explore and see what each has to offer, but in your process of elimination you choose to go into just one of the shops. You really don't know why you chose this particular shop, but you do. Let's see what you find.

As you walk in, you are greeted by the owner or a co-worker with a smile and a big hello. They ask if they may be of service to you. Right away you feel at home and you want to stay awhile and browse. Strolling through the store you see so many dolls and bears of all shop s, colors, sizes and textures and you wonder if you're dreaming, sleep walking or what. You touch them, you hug them, you see Sasha Dolls; Suzanne Gibson Dolls; Dolls by Pauline; Effonbee Dolls; Royal House Dolls; Shirley Temple Dolls; Name Bears and so many others. You oooh and ahh at all the selections of antique and modern dolls, then you see something rare and unlike any other stuffed animal you've seen before. You ask the owner, Edna Smith, "what kind of bear is this?" She says, "it's a Rare Bear, nine inches tall and fashioned from 100% natural mink." Mink you say!!! The actual mink that women dream of having before the age of 40!!! She says, "yes." Then you ask how much. She quotes a price. "Well that's not bad," you say. But you're still curious about this unusual little creature. Mrs. Smith proceeds to tell you that Frank Nenirofsky, president of California-based Rare Bear, Inc., got the idea from his six-year old daughter who asked him for the "best bear in the world" as a present. His daughter's enthusiasm for the bear along with favorable response from buyers convinced Nemirofsky that he had a winner on his hands."

"Mrs. Smith's enthusiasm buds forth as she talks about the Rare Bear and her shop in general and you wonder why she loves it so. She says, "most people say they would love to work here, but they don't realize the hard work involved. When I started I knew hard work was the key, but I didn't see how a woman selling bears and dolls would succeed. I've been in operation for two years and my business has grown tremendously. My reason for enjoying this business so is because we are unique and we enjoy our surroundings."

Mrs. Smith gives lectures on buying and collecting dolls. She offers appraisals and restoration of broken or old dolls.

You're amazed at all the new and exciting collectables you've seen. You want to stay, but your time is running out. You say, "thanks for your time," and you leave feeling more knowledgeable about dolls and bears. As you exit you say, "by the way, what's the name of this shop?" and Mrs. Smith says, "we're called The Dolling Shop." The shop is located on 1355 DeBree Avenue in Ghent Village Shoppes. You say, "how will people be able to find your shop?" you only have a small sign in the window." She says, "aah don't worry, I'm sure we stand out enough so that we can be found among the masses."

Now, you know why you went in.

Cedar Road Assembly Of God

The Church With A Priority On Personal Ministry

Cedar Road Assembly Of God, 916 Cedar Road, Chesapeake, Virginia

Cedar Road Assembly Of God, 916 Cedar Road, Chesapeake, offers a well-rounded spiritual program designed to minister to all ages in a real and personal way. Cedar Road Assembly was founded in 1968 by Rev. Howard P. Schmidt when he saw the need for an Assembly Of God church in the Great Bridge area. The seven original members met in Great Bridge High School while Rev. Schmidt continued his fulltime job as a social worker with the Child Abuse Division Of Human Resources and later as a Rehabilitation Counselor for the state. In 1976 Rev. Schmidt plunged fulltime into the ministry and has seen the blessings of the Lord as a result.

Now, in 1983, as the congregations grows, the church is taking new steps of faith in order to provide the personal ministry so needed in the Christian walk. Recently, the Assembly approved the new position of Assistant Pastor which is held by Rev. Timothy Schmidt, formerly the Youth Pastor. Not forgetting the needs of the youth, however, the pastor and board are now interviewing candidates for the fulltime position of Youth Pastor.

Emphasis on ministering to individuals in a personal way is kept at a high priority. As nearly every day of the week there is a different program in progress.

On Tuesday there is a visitation committee which goes out at 10 a.m. to visit newcomers, absentees, as well as the shut-ins and those in the hospital. On Tuesday nights at 7:30 p.m. there is a Bible Study and Fellowship for Young Adults (age 18 and above).

Wednesday night is Family Night and programs are available for every age beginning at 7:30 p.m. For the boys (ages 5-17) there is the Royal Ranger Program structured in such a way to be somewhat equivalent to Christian Boy Scouts. The Men's Department works closely with the Royal Ranger Commanders in providing the needed supplies and materials for the program. Important to the men of the church is providing their boys with proper leadership and examples in Christian manhood.

For the girls (ages 5-17) there is the Missionette program on Wednesday nights. Beautiful uniforms are made for the girls and their program not only includes proper bible study but teachings in charm and ettiquette from a christian perspective. Here again the women's ministries assist with the girls in order to teach them Biblical principles of Christian womanhood.

For those youth (Ages 12-17) not inclined to Royal Rangers or Missionettes, there is the Christ Ambassador's Youth Meeting. Their program includes exciting services as well as outings on a regular basis to keep the youth busy in the church.

Thursday mornings at 10 a.m. there is a bible study conducted for all those who can attend.

Services at Cedar Road on Sunday include a Junior Church for ages two through 12 which meets at 10 a.m. while the Morning Worship is in session. The new dynamic Junior Church program is meeting with great success as it teaches children the lesson in four different ways in fifteen minute sessions. Services are scheduled to dismiss at 11:30 am. which provides more time for the family between the morning and evening service which starts at 7 p.m.

Other ministries of the church include the busing program with two buses, the choir which meets on Sunday afternoons at 5 p.m., and Cedar Road Academy; the church's own Day Care Center and Kindergarten program. The school is considering the opening of first grade this fall.

Not to be overlooked at Cedar Road Assembly is the spiritual emphasis. Fasting is practiced as at least one individual is fasting each day of the year. Every Tuesday the church prays around the clock with parishioners taking different time slots to pray for their church. Also, the first Friday nght if each month is reserved for all-night prayer meetins at the church. Evangelistic outreaches are also conducted on the week-ends to get the Gospel out to the people. Those wishing more information about Cedar Road Assembly of God should call their office at 547-9551.

Scheduled services of the church are: Sunday: 10 a.m. - morning worship and Junior Church. 5 p.m. - Choir Practice, 7 p.m. - Evangelistic Service.

Tuesday: 10 a.m. - Visitation, 7:30 p.m. - Young Adult Bible Study and 24-hour prayer wheel.

Wednesday - Family Night - 7:30 p.m. - Adult Bible Study, First Principles, C.A.'s (12-17) Teens, Royal Rangers (Boy's) and Missionettes (Girls).

Thursday: 10 a.m. - morning Bible study and Home Bible Study Cell Groups.

Friday: Activity Night

Saturday: Evangelistic Outreach.

THE CLOCK IS TICKING

Let God speak to your heart... And bring new balance to your life...

"If I just had more time to do things," exclaimed a busy housewife. We all know this feeling of frustration that comes from not finding enough hours in a day. Time to kill is a luxurious sounding phrase to human ears.

Time, however, is one commodity that cannot be bought. Try as we will, we cannot crowd more than 24 hours into one day. Whether it's too much time on our hands or too little, we need a constant awareness of the importance of how we spend our time.

Someone remarked that after a hundred years, all of us would be gone. This thought makes current problems look awfully small. Lives that seek a balance of work, play and worship have given evidence of being happier lives.

Dodge Shelby Charger-

The Total Performance Car Of The 80's.

The Dodge Shelby Charger
A whole New Breed Of Muscle Car

There was a time when a car called the Shelby Cobra ruled the roads of both Europe and America.

Named for its designer, the legendary Texan Carroll Shelby, the Cobra sports car snatched international racing's Manufacturer's Cup for Gran touring cars from Ferrari in the mid 60's, the first and only time an American-conceived car managed to do so.

Before he took to designing sports cars, Carroll Shelby raced them in 1956 and 1957 he was Sports Illustrated's Sports Car Driver of the Year. Before he gave up driving, Shelby accumulated three national titles, a record string of 19 straight victories, and numerous wins in Europe.

Today, reunited with his old friend Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, Shelby assists Dodge engineers in the development of high performance vehicles and their parts.

Shelby and Dodge technicians have begun to perfect new parts and products at the Chrysler-Shelby Performance Center, an advance research facility in Santa Fe Springs, California.

Its function is to develop such components as turbochargers, superchargers, pistons, cams, and manifolds for Chrysler's performance parts distributor, Direct Connection, and to develop prototypes of future Dodge Driving Machines.

Shelby and Dodge engineers have already collaborated to produce the Shelby Charger - perhaps the fastest production front-wheel drive four-cylinder sports car in America...and possibly in the world.

With Chrysler's 2.2-liter four-cylinder engine, according to Carroll Shelby "the dominant power plant of the 80's," who knows what the future may bring?

Taking the Charger's 2.2-liter four-cylinder engine and power train, Shelby and Dodge engineers rephased the camshaft, raised the compression ratio to 9.6:1, and recalibrated the engine electronics to produce 107 net horsepower.

But increasing the Charger 2.2's horsepower for the Shelby Charger was just the beginning.

They also increased its OTGR (overall transaxle gearing ratio) by about 10 percent, from 2.57 to 2.78.

Next, they added an aerodynamic front air dam, unique body-side ground effect spoilers, and a Porsche-like rear spoiler - all to allow the Shelby Charger to slip cleanly through the air.

The suspension system was recalibrated, stiffening the shocks and springs by 40 percent for more ride control.

They exchanged the Charger's 18:1 ratio steering for a quicker, more responsive 14:1 fast-ratio power steering system.

And they built in power-assisted ventilated front brake discs with larger calipers and recalibrated rear drum brakes.

Finally, they replaced the Charger 2.2's 14-inch steel wheels with special Shelby 15-inch cast aluminum wheels and added low profile Series 50 Eagle GT radial tires that contribute to a .6-inch lower profile and superb handling.

The result: the bold, aggressive Dodge Shelby Charger. The total performance car of the 80's with proven front-wheel drive technology.

Capable of sprinting from 0 to 50 in 5.5 seconds, the Shelby Charger is also capable of a best standing quarter-mile time of 15.87 seconds (85.4 mph), according to tests conducted by the National Hot Rod Association in December 1982.

Shelby offers all this performance plus fuel economy; it is rated at 25 EPA EST MPG, 40 estimated highway.

If you can find a sports car that offers a better combination of handling, braking, performance, fuel economy and 5/50 protection in a single package...buy it.

Test drive the high technology front-wheel drive, four-cylinder Shelby Charger at Virginia Beach Dodge. Today!
